Athens (Saturday), Jan. 18.—The Greek high command announced early today that 1,000 soldiers of Italy's "Wolves of Tuscany" division had been captured in Albania, and a government spokesman said two Italian "warships" carrying other reinforcements from Italy had been torpedoed in the Adriatic Sea.

Italy's famous "Lupi di Toscana" troops belonged to the Seventy-seventh Regiment of the newly arrived Seventh Division, commanded by Col. Meneghetti, and had been hurriedly sent to Albania to hold up the Greek advance, the Greeks said.

Many officers were included in the 1,000 prisoners who, the Greeks said, were captured by skillful Greek maneuvers which overwhelmed a fortified Italian position northwest of Klisura.

Valona, one of the immediate goals of the Greeks in their northward drive, was bombed heavily again, the spokesman said.

The torpedoed Italian "warships" were identified as the Liguria and the Lombardia.

(The London Daily Mail attributed to the Athens radio a report that the vessels were troopships—the Liguria of 15,534 tons and the Lombardia of 20,066 tons. The authoritative naval handbook, Janes Fighting Ships, lists neither. Lloyds register lists an Italian Liguria, a commercial vessel of only 174 tons.)

Foe's Loss 70,000, Greeks Say

Greeks contended today that a third of Italy's forces in Albania had been killed, wounded, captured or taken home for frostbite treatment, and dispatches from the front reported new but ill-defined gains in Greece's counterinvasion.

Newspapers estimated the Italian losses at a total of 70,000.

(Officially Italy has acknowledged 12,377 casualties in the war with Greece up to December 31. The war started October 28.)

Greek dispatches said the counter-invaders had gained territory both in the Tepeleni area and the region north of Klisura. Klisura is in Greek hands, Tepeleni in Italian.

The advances, however, were of a "local nature," it was said, because of continued bad weather. Snowstorms have given way to heavy rain.

Washington Begins to Warm Up For Cold, Sunny Inaugural Day

Government Workers Start Holiday at Noon; Police Map Routes

(Inaugural Traffic Regulations, Page 8.)

Ready for the greatest influx in its history, Washington will surrender itself at noon today to an extended week-end of extraordinary events to be climaxed by the inauguration of President Roosevelt on Monday.

Although the formal calendar for the occasion does not start until tomorrow, what might be described as the warm-up will get under way this noon when Government workers leave their offices for the Saturday half holiday.

From that hour onward the National Capital will witness the arrival of tens of thousands of inaugural visitors and last-minute rushes for seats along the parade route.

Activity will be stimulated by the Weather Man's heartening forecast yesterday that Monday will be fair and cold, with no precipitation and little wind—in short, almost ideal weather for an event expected to be witnessed by close to 1,000,000 persons.

Issuing his five-day outlook, Forecaster Charles L. Mitchell reckoned that the mercury will be hovering around the freezing point when President Roosevelt is sworn in for a third term on the Capitol portico. The weather leading up to the main event also will be favorable, according to Mitchell.

Today, he said, it will be cloudy and colder, but dry, and his forecast for tomorrow is fair and con-

Nazis Reported Trying to End War in Greece

Troops in Rumania Viewed as 'Argument' To Persuade Athens

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

Sofia, Jan. 17.—A highly reliable informant said tonight that Germany was endeavoring to end the Italian-Greek war by negotiations in Athens.

One informant suggested the presence of German troops in Rumania was part of a "diplomatic argument," designed to spur peace negotiations with Greece.

(In Berlin, authorized sources said there was no change whatever in German relations with Greece, and therefore it could be denied, they said, that German diplomatic activity had been intensified in Athens. Germany has maintained her normal mission in Athens throughout the Greek-Italian hostilities.)

Duce, Hitler May Confer

(In Berne, reports indicated that a meeting between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini was "quite likely" this week-end. It is believed such a conference would be concerned with means of giving aid to Italy.

(In Rome, a scheduled personal appearance of Il Duce to award prizes to Italian farmers has been cancelled.)

German sources here did not rule out the possibility of armed Nazi intervention in the Greek-Italian war, but declared Germany certainly would welcome a peaceful settlement.

It was believed by some informants here that Germany in attempting to negotiate peace would indorse proposals that Greece reasonably could accept even if they gave Italy a poor return for her war efforts.

These sources pointed out it obviously was to Germany's interest to prevent an Italian rout, and that aid and advice to Italy was directed to that end.

There have been some reports that part of the negotiations were being carried on in Sofia following a series of visits to the foreign office here the last three days by German, Greek, Yugoslav and Soviet Ministers.

Press Demands Japan 'Rescue' Indo-Chinese

Powerful Nichi Nichi Asks Action to Free Natives From French

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Saturday), Jan. 18.—The influential newspaper Nichi Nichi called today for Japanese action to "rescue the natives of Indo-China" from French rule and expressed growing Japanese impatience over the slow course of negotiations for an economic pact with Indo-China.

"Inseparable relations exist, between the greater East Asia sphere of co-prosperity (Japan's projected Asia-East Indies bloc) and the release from oppression of races living in southern Asia," declared Nichi Nichi.

"This principle applies to Indo-China, where 23,000,000 natives are ruled by 30,000 Frenchmen.

"Again we emphasize the need of a speedy conclusion of the economic negotiations.

"At the same time Japan must carry out measures to rescue the natives of Indo-China and enable them to enjoy their heaven-ordained happiness."

Two Siamese Ships Sunk

By the Associated Press

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 17.—Units of the French Asiatic squadron were reported today to have virtually wiped out a three-ship Thai (Siamese) flotilla while the jungles of western Cambodia yielded a story of how nearly 600 invading cavalrymen from Thailand perished in a machine-gun death trap.

The French, however, acknowledged they were withdrawing on land in this undeclared war to what is known as "the Little Maginot Line" shielding Sisophon, western Cambodia railhead some 50 miles inside the steaming Indo-China frontier. Tanks were supporting the Thai advance.

Big Offensive

(Dispatches from Bangkok quoted the Thai radio as announcing an offensive stretching over almost the whole 1,000-mile frontier between the two countries, from Luangprabang on the north to Sisophon and Battambang on the south. "Several"

Britain Needs Arms to Meet Invasion Threat, Leader Implies

By the Associated Press

Glasgow, Jan. 17. — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, with Harry Hopkins sitting on the platform beside him, declared tonight in an unheralded speech: "We do not require in 1941 large armies from overseas," but he added Britain would need "far more" American weapons, ships and airplanes than she can pay for.

With little cheer to give Britons for the months ahead, Churchill said, nevertheless: "Whatever the suffering, we shall not fail mankind at this turning point of its fortunes!"

Proudly, he introduced President Roosevelt's special envoy to the audience. The Prime Minister's speech was before the Glasgow city councillors.

Gesturing to Hopkins, sitting quietly with his face half hidden in his hand, Churchill declared:

"Mr. Hopkins has come in order to put himself in the closest relation with things here.

"He soon will return to report to his famous chief the impressions he has gathered in our islands. We don't require in 1941 large armies from overseas. What we do require are weapons, ships and airplanes.

To Pay What They Can

"All that we can pay for we will pay for, but we will require far more than we shall be able to pay for.

"And I watch with deep emotion the stirring processes by which the democracy of the great American republic is establishing its laws and formulating its decisions in order to make sure that the British Commonwealth of Nations is able to maintain, as it is maintaining at the present time, the front line of civilization and of progress."

The prime minister's unheralded speech followed a tour of the city's defense organizations during which he made an earlier impromptu talk in the open air.

Hopkins and Mrs. Churchill were in his party on the tour.

During the afternoon tour, Hopkins watched carefully a parade of air-raid precautions services and evidently was impressed with the equipment and the enthusiasm of the workers.

In his speech tonight, Churchill declared himself confident of Britain's ultimate victory, stated that his aim was to remove Hitlerism from Europe, and insisted that if Hitler had found invasion of Britain difficult in July and September it would not become easier by February, March or April.

Britain, he said, has millions of armed men and scores of well-

Malaya Is Said To Be Crippled; Illustrious Held 'Out of the War'

By Percival Knauth
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Jan. 17.—The British battleship Malaya, of 31,100 tons displacement, is reported by well-informed German quarters to have been towed into Gibraltar in a seriously damaged condition. Judging by these reports it would appear that the Malaya, which allegedly was bombed in the January 10 attack which sank the cruiser Southampton and crippled the aircraft carrier Illustrious, will be out of action for some time.

A German reconnaissance plane is reported to have seen the Malaya entering Gibraltar harbor on the end of a towline. Camouflaged wooden screening covered whatever damage had been done, it is reported here. It could be recognized, German quarters state, that the vessel had been hit on the deck, on the forward gun turrets, and on the bridge. The damage appeared to be heavy, German quarters add.

It is stated here that the Malaya was attached to the group of British vessels attacked by the German air force on January 10. It was reported at the time that hits had been scored on a battleship as well as other vessels. The Malaya is of the Queen Elizabeth class. She carries eight 15-inch guns, twelve 6-inch guns and eight 4-inch anti-aircraft guns. She also carries four aircraft. She was extensively refitted in 1937, having been completed in 1916.

Illustrious Called Total Loss

German military quarters tonight, with fuller details of yesterday's attack on Malta available, were inclined to consider the aircraft carrier Illustrious a total loss. It is questionable, they stated, whether she can ever be put into shape again. In any case they said, repairs would require "a very long time."

It appears that the vessel suffered serious under-water damage, since a heavy bomb, according to German reports, fell between the ship and the harbor wall, exploding under the water. Thereby, it is assumed here, a large hole was torn in her hull.

A German war correspondent, flying as observer on one of the attacking German Stukas, reports having seen "at least three direct hits of heavy and the heaviest bombs" on the deck of the Illustrious. Other bombs, he states, exploded in the immediate vicinity of the vessel, sinking many of the tenders assembled around the aircraft carrier to effect repairs.

This German observer also reports a direct hit on a cruiser lying in Valetta Harbor.

Both Declare Arms Loans Are Vital to Victory For the British

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's Secretaries of Navy and War joined yesterday in a warning that Great Britain faces its most serious war crisis within the next two to three months.

In separate appearances before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, they stressed need for swift passage of the aid bill. Each expressed the belief that England can win perhaps only with United States arms loans.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox further warned that the British fleet, on which this Nation counts for Atlantic defense, will probably go down with the British Isles in event of an Axis victory.

Knox said an attack on the United States, through Axis penetration of South America, most certainly would follow such an outcome of the war.

"Who Would Attack Us?"

"What countries would attack us?" asked Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts.

"We've been told in very plain language," replied Knox. "Did you ever hear of the tri-partite agreement among the Axis powers (Germany, Italy and Japan)?"

It was Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, returning yesterday for another four hours before the committee, who first stressed the nearness of a British showdown with the Axis.

"I can't state too emphatically," said Stimson, "the apprehension I feel of the possibility of a crisis, that even our friends on the right (Republican committeemen) will recognize as a crisis, within the next 60 or at most 90 days."

An hour later, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, asked Secretary Knox if he agreed with the Stimson statement.

"I do," replied Knox.

Fish asked how passage of the aid bill would affect the British crisis.

"Tremendously," Knox replied. "It would do more to put resolute courage and determination in the British than anything we could do."

Knox said wars are not fought alone with guns, but with the morale of a people, adding:

"The reason one side (implying Italy) is putting up such a rotten show in the Mediterranean is because their morale is shot."

Sen. McCarran Refuses to Be D. C. Chairman

Makes Public Letter To Barkley Declining Committee Office

By James D. Secrest

Senate precedent was given a rude jolt yesterday when Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, flatly refused the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee immediately following his election by the Senate Steering Committee.

Apprised by a newspaperman of his appointment, Senator McCarran said:

"I don't believe it.

"I won't take it.

"I positively will not under any consideration take the chairmanship."

A short while later he issued copies of a letter addressed to Majority Leader Barkley on November 9, 1940, declining the chairmanship, and appended this terse statement:

"The attached is emphatic and final as it was on November 9, 1940."

Hoped He'd Reconsider

No official explanation was forthcoming last night as to why McCarran, who had sought the Judiciary Committee chairmanship, had been elected in the light of his previous statement. It was understood, however, that Democratic leaders hoped to appease McCarran on his failure to get the Judiciary Committee chairmanship and that he would reconsider and accept the job of Washington "mayor."

Meanwhile, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who had all but assumed the helm of

Kennedy Talks As Individual, Roosevelt Says

Doesn't Know if He'll Still Be Ambassador As He Makes Speech

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Joseph P. Kennedy, outgoing envoy to London who reportedly differs with the Administration's foreign policy, would speak for himself tonight when he addresses the Nation by radio on "keeping out of war."

The President said he did not have the faintest idea whether Kennedy would still be in his capacity as an Ambassador to Britain when he faces the microphone. Kennedy has submitted his resignation, but the President has not yet accepted it.

The speech will be heard here from 7 to 7:30 p. m. on station WRC.

A long morning meeting between the President and Kennedy on Thursday was followed by reports that Kennedy, in his address tonight, will attack the Administration's aid-to-Britain bill.

Kennedy has been invited to testify on the measure Tuesday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The President was also asked about information published in The Post yesterday that clauses in the "lend-lease" bill were purposely written to give him authority, if England falls, to acquire the British navy.

At first the President termed the question "cow jumped over the moon" stuff, but later, when asked directly why the bill contained authority to buy war materials from friendly nations, he replied that the Government needs legislative authority broad enough to handle a world situation that changes every 24 hours.

Garner Reported Turning Down Many Positions

It was reported reliably yesterday that Vice President Garner, whose term will end with the inauguration of Vice President-Elect Wallace Monday, has been offered numerous positions in private industry.

It was said, however, that the 72-year-old Garner, who has been in Congress for 38 years, was determined to retire to private life in Uvalde, Tex.

One informant said Garner had been offered $1,500 a week to write syndicated articles and that he also had been tendered jobs in a motion picture corporation and a large life insurance company.

Six boys, two of them riding bicycles, were injured in traffic accidents yesterday and a coroner's jury acquitted a motorist after an inquest into a recent automobile fatality.

Maurice A. Peter, 19, of 17 S Street Northwest, driver of an automobile which struck and fatally injured William Carpenter, colored, 66, of 1709 Seventh Street Northwest, January 2, was exonerated when the jury decided Carpenter was a victim "of his own negligence."

The accident happened at Logan Circle and Carpenter died at Freedmen's Hospital, January 11.

At both Logan and Dupont Circles, it was explained, pedestrians are supposed to cross the street only when red lights are showing and all motor traffic has stopped. Peter stepped from the curb and attempted to make his crossing while a green light was on and

20 Persons Struck In Present-Type Areas Last Year

By Howard F. Wentworth

One person was killed and 19 others were injured last year while standing in Washington's so-called "safety zones"—but authorities are powerless to provide additional safeguards because of an obscure rider to the District appropriation law.

In the majority of instances, these mishaps occurred at night while the victims stood in unlighted street car loading zones, indicated only by a yellow stripe of paint and four "buttons."

But even in the face of current efforts to curb traffic casualties, city heads can do nothing to correct the situation owing to the offending rider.

Under its provisions, the entire length of Wisconsin Avenue would have to be repaved if authorities desired to eliminate the present painted zones and erect substantial safety platforms on which pedestrians could be afforded full protection.

New Order, Stale Bread

Trains Given Over to Germans, Balkans Face Famine, Riots

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 17.—Southeastern Europe — already forced to eat stale black bread and pay exorbitant prices for essential foodstuffs — now is facing new shortages because, officials say, so many rail lines have been commandeered for Nazi troop movements and Italian and German shipments of war materials.

Dispatches from Hungary and Rumania say that in many towns where ordinary supplies have been cut off by German use of railroads the inhabitants have appealed for commodities by truck to prevent rioting and famine.

Similarly, Italian demands for quick delivery of vast quantities of Rumanian oil are said to have jammed Yugoslav railways as far as Trieste, causing a serious curtailment of food shipments.

The Hungarian food problem is reflected in a new government order halving the amount of food each householder has been allowed.

Rumanian reaction to skyrocketing prices was said to have brought several public demonstrations, including one in a Bucharest market in which one person was killed and several others injured.

Even the commissar of the German expeditionary force in Rumania is finding difficulty in getting enough food for his several hundred thousand soldiers. One Budapest report said the Germans faced the necessity of importing 60 per cent of the food needed by their troops in a country from which they had expected to obtain vast food exports.

Mrs. Campbell's Executors Order Shaw Love Notes Printed

By International News Service

London, Jan. 17.—George Bernard Shaw's famous "Lovey Dovey" letters to the late Mrs. Patrick Campbell, stage beauty whose career spanned four decades, were ordered today by executors of the British actress' estate to be published for public sale—but the Irish playwright indicated he might fight to keep them secret until after his death.

The executors announced that Shaw's 125 amorous letters to Mrs. Campbell were to be produced in book form under terms of the actress' will, which stipulates they are not to be cut or altered in any manner, but published in full "so that all who read them may realize the friendship way of l'amitie amoureuse (loving affection)."

Asked to comment on the proposed publication of his letters, which were penned in the late Victorian and Edwardian eras when it was fashionable to be in love via the postman, Shaw, 84, tugged at his snow-white beard and said:

"Forty-five years ago, everybody wrote letters to Mrs. Campbell. I know she thought mine the best of the bunch, though personally I thought those of Burne Jones (portrait painter) more interesting.

"All of them were from married men and quite innocent. Before the copyright expires they will, I hope, provide for the education of Mrs. Campbell's great-grandchildren, but others must wait till the old gentlemen who wrote them can a preview of the Sunday Post

INAUGURATION

Sunday's Post is the first of three great editions planned to give the most complete and most vital record possible of a great event in history—the Inauguration of a precedent-smashing third-term President. Monday's Post has a special surprise for you on the opposite-editorial page; Tuesday's Post will be the chronicle of the event itself; Sunday's Post sets the stage, as detailed below:

HAIL TO THE CHIEF

Others may stand near the edge of the world spotlight on January 20, but its focus is for one man—Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The story of this world figure, America's leader in the greatest foreign policy crisis of our history, is given you in a colorful, human story by Eddie Folliard. "Pictures," The Post's rotogravure magazine, presents a page spotting highlights of the President's career, and another page showing exactly what his official schedule is on the great day. In sober contrast is J. G. Norris' article on the President's most pressing problem: Defense.

POMP & CIRCUMSTANCE

What are the formal ceremonies that make up the inauguration? How did they develop? How are they symbolic of American democracy? Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, tells you in an interesting article on procedure and protocol.

What about the social side of Inaugural Week? Parties and people fill the pages of Sunday's society section; news of interesting persons coming for the festivities, fashion hints about the inaugural (envoys are expected to be in full uniform), sidelights on the beauties serving as ushers at the Gala.

What do the pageantry and showmanship of the event mean to the District? A boom, yes—but hard work and headaches, too. Gerald Gross describes Washington's weekend.

FIRST IN THE HEARTS . . .

Only one person matches the President in personal popularity, and, according to Gallup Polls, she even surpasses him! Katherine Graham reviews Eleanor Roosevelt's career in the White House, tells how she has out-Carnegied even Dale Carnegie in making friends and influencing people. "Pictures" shows some of the high spots of her past eight years.

LAVENDER AND LACE

The Post has opened history's camphor chests, rummaged for other inaugurals of historic importance and for unusual and amusing incidents from past ceremonies. Three pages in "Pictures"—an article by Joseph Reed—bring back the flavor of the past.

FIRST-TERMERS

It's getting to be almost a habit to the Roosevelts—but the Wallaces' thrill will be akin to that of a girl's first date. "Pictures" shows you a beaming couple; Hope Ridings Miller profiles Mrs. Wallace in the society section; Robert Albright offers you a story about a dreamer and planner who gives promise of being a brand-new type of Vice President.

POSTINGS . . .

The world still moves and other things occur besides the Inaugural, so Sunday's Post also contains: Another in the series of letters from The Post's heavyweight pixie, Mr. Walter Haight . . . how to discipline a 17-year-old boy (and how not to), by Mary Haworth . . . lights for Washington homes, third in Martha Ellyn's series on what a consumer should know . . . Al Hailey's account of Washington's only champion, Ken Overlin . . . beach-wear fashions . . . Shirley Povich's regular Sunday column, "To Whom It May Concern" . . . Knox, Stimson Predict Early Crisis in War

Both Term Arms Loans Necessary To British Victory

tioning and again in the afternoon, Stimson had been so rigorously cross-examined by minority committeemen that Chairman Bloom demanded questions be confined to the bill, and ruled out "irrelevant" queries.

When Stimson at last was excused, he smiled wryly at Knox and said: "I resign this rather warm seat to you." The weary War Secretary was applauded by spectators as he left the hearing.

Repeatedly in his testimony, Knox voiced incredulity at suggestions the President might transfer naval units to England, admonished members that the British fleet will not survive for Western hemisphere use if England falls and emphasized Axis South American objectives.

Envisioning an ultimate British victory, Knox scouted the possibility of an ultimate English invasion of Germany.

"This war isn't going to end by a victorious army marching into Germany," the Navy Secretary said. "It is going to end by a collapse behind the German front."

He said that if England wins mastery of the air and bombs German cities as English cities have been bombed, "I don't think the Germans will be able to take it as the British will take it. They are surrounded by conquered peoples."

Knox, like his fellow Republican, Stimson, who entered the Cabinet with him on the President's plea for unity on the defense issue, emphasized national defense as the sole consideration in aid to Britain measures.

"The only thing I am sure of," said Knox, "is that if the British navy is defeated we will be attacked."

They'd Have Most Ships

He said the combined Axis navies would then outnumber our own, and these powers have seven times the shipbuilding facilities the United States has.

But Knox voiced doubt that the Axis would use this means of assault. Probabilities were, he said, that they would attack first through political infiltration in South America, "the largest storehouse of raw materials left in the world."

Should Britain fail, Knox said, Axis powers would put cheap and "slave" labor to work manufacturing products to be traded to South America. He said the nations to the south, lacking arms and with 90 per cent illiteracy, would not be strong enough to defend themselves against this infiltration.

"It wouldn't be long before a German base could be installed on this side of the Atlantic," Knox added.

Urges Free Trade

Fish said that in that event he wanted to "serve notice" that all parties in this country are united in defense of the Monroe Doctrine and "we will be prepared to defend this hemisphere." Fish said he didn't think "they can send their navies over here."

Knox urged the development of strong trade relations with South America, even to "the complete free exchange of goods as we did in the early days of development of the West."

"I know my own Republicans will gasp," said the Navy Secretary, "but that will tie them to us with bonds of steel."

Republican members closely questioned Knox on his concurrence with Stimson on imminence of a British war crisis.

Knox said it was speculation, purely, but stood on the statement.

Representative Jonkman (Republican), of Michigan, asked if invasion of Britain was probable and Knox said "my judgment on that is no better than yours."

Jonkman inquired what was the exact nature of the crisis and Knox replied:

"A crisis in which the defeat of Great Britain is imminent."

America can't count on the British navy surviving an Axis victory because the present British government would be sharply changed politically and the British navy "won't run away," he said. He said the British navy will fight to the end because the average Britisher feels he would "a darn site rather be killed fighting Hitler than live under him."

Like Knox, he opposed any amendments to the bill, which he said was "carefully drawn to do what we want to do." He said he was opposed to the Navy convoying British ships, and turning over "our Navy" to Britain, but none of these things was contemplated. The President never would turn over the Navy because "it is the apple of his eye," he laughed. He saw nothing wrong with a two-year limitation on the President's powers, but like Stimson thought the bill shouldn't be shackled with amendments.

Opposes Limitations

He was asked if he thought we should enter the war. He said he would put his answer this way:

"The only chance we have of keeping out of this war is by helping Britain to win."

To demands for limitations on the President's powers, Stimson replied: "A law so devised that you won't trust anybody won't survive the test of war."

Time was the essential element in the American defense problem, Britain's stand-off of the Axis was providing the time, and arms loans to help would cost less in the end than a defense stand alone, testified Stimson.

He agreed with Representative Arnold (Democrat), of Illinois, that "if England should fall, then we would be in this war with both men and materials."

"Fantastic," He Says

Earlier, Stimson declared it "fantastic and preposterous" to assume that the bill was deliberately drawn to permit the President to buy the French or British navies.

The Secretary of War voiced confidence that the President would not abuse discretionary powers given him by the bill.

Sharp exchanges between majority and minority members over questioning flared repeatedly throughout the hearing, leading Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, sympathetic with the bill, to lecture the committee. Eaton said he wanted to "protest against the interwarfare of this committee being substituted" for a discussion of "one of the greatest problems ever to face the Nation."

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 18.—Where does American labor stand on the issues facing a defense-conscious United States?

Much discussion has appeared in print in recent months regarding labor's role. Many articles have discussed organized labor as if its motives and goals were in some important way different from those of the rest of the country.

Today, at the end of a comprehensive survey of American public opinion on the whole subject of defense, it is apparent that the rank and file of organized United States labor takes virtually the same stand on the major questions facing the country in this field as the total United States electorate:

1. Like a majority of Americans in all walks of life, a substantial majority of organized labor's rank and file sympathize with the British cause and believe that America's future safety "depends on England winning the war."

2. Like the Nation as a whole, the rank and file of labor believe that the present rate of defense production is too slow, and

3. Large majorities say they would be willing to work more hours per week, at no increase in the rate of pay, "if it would help speed up the defense program."

Interviews with members of labor unions and their wives took place in industrial communities across the United States—including such centers of the labor-movement as eastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Philadelphia, the Ohio Valley, the coal fields of Kentucky and West Virginia, the Great Lakes area and labor centers in the West and South.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the labor survey was the result of the question:

"If it would help speed up the defense program, would you be willing to work more hours per week at the same rate of pay per hour as you are getting now?"

Among employers and employes in the population as a whole, answers to this question were 75 per cent "yes," 15 per cent "no" and 10 per cent undecided or without opinions.

Although the results may not reflect the position of certain individual unions or certain labor leaders, the vote of rank-and-file unionists was:

YES	68%
NO	27
UNDECIDED	5

Other questions on which the vote of the general public and of labor union members can be compared are:

"Do you think our country's future safety depends on England winning the war?" All voters—68 per cent "yes;" labor members—64 per cent "yes."

"Do you think America's warplane production is going ahead fast enough?" All voters—58 per cent "no" and 14 per cent "don't know;" labor members—57 per cent "no" and 11 per cent "don't know."

"In order to speed up defense production, should factories making war materials hire enough men to work 24 hours a day (three shifts)?" All voters—89 per cent "yes;" labor members—89 per cent "yes."

Churchill Insists U. S. Declare War Now, Wheeler Asserts

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), said last night he had learned from "several reliable sources" that Prime Minister Churchill has been "insisting on a declaration of war by this country" and that Harry Hopkins was sent to London as President Roosevelt's representative to determine "what immediate steps can be taken short of a war declaration."

Wheeler made his statement in commenting on a speech by Churchill in Glasgow—a speech made in Hopkins' presence and in which the British leader said that while Great Britain did not require large armies from overseas in 1941 it did need weapons, ships and airplanes.

(At the White House, Presidential aides told the Associated Press they had never heard of the report which Wheeler said he had received.)

Wheeler, a leader of the Senate opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's lend-lease program for aid To Britain, said that "my understanding is that they (the British) not only want planes and ships at this time, but they also want pilots to man the planes and sailors to man the ships.

Fears War Is Ahead

"The next step will be an expeditionary force. Every American ought to realize that Mr. Roosevelt is leading us down the road to war, not step by step, but leap by leap.

"It has come to me from several reliable sources that Mr. Churchill has been insisting on a declaration of war by this country, not with the idea of our sending an expeditionary force immediately, but with the idea of bolstering the morale of the smaller nations of Europe as well as the morale of his own people."

Chairman Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, now holding hearings on the lend-lease bill, said:

"People throughout the country who have sent me an avalanche of mail and telegrams all agree that we should give England every possible aid to keep war out of America. That is what Mr. Churchill is asking for. I think the majority of the American people—regardless of party—realize that that should be done."

Fish for Action

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, ranking Republican member of the committee, commented:

"I think it's the general opinion of most American people that we should expedite production in the very things Mr. Churchill mentioned—munitions, planes and ships. That's what we are trying to do. The President's pending bill has nothing to do with immediate production that would effect the crisis which Churchill, Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox says is 60 to 90 days away."

British Health Chief Appeals for Nurses

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—Health Minister Malcolm MacDonald broadcast an appeal for more nurses today, declaring that "we shall want fewer fighters as well as fire fighters in the next few months.

He said there was a definite shortage of nurses and they must "see to it that the dramatic appeal of the war wounded does not make them neglect the more normal but equally important work of defending the public health against disease."

Roosevelt Receives Envoy From Panama

Lays Stress on Canal Responsibilities; Chile Ambassador Greeted

By Bertram D. Hulen.

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt emphasized the "grave responsibilities" imposed in consequence of the Panama Canal in receiving yesterday Dr Carlos W. Brin for the presentation of his letters of credence as the new Ambassador from Panama.

The envoy told of his government's plan to apply a "new deal" of its own but in a spirit of "unchangeable friendship" for the United States. Mr. Roosevelt accepted this as a pledge of cooperation and said the United States would cooperate with Panama "in the great and important task of defense."

The exchange of views was considered significant because of reports that President Arias, who is following new constitutional patterns in Panama, is personally of Nazi inclinations. These reports have not been denied.

President Roosevelt also promised cooperation in hemispheric matters in accepting the letters of credence of Rodolfo Michels as Ambassador from Chile.

In presenting his credentials, Dr. Brin congratulated President Roosevelt upon his election for a third term, saying that "it signifies the continuation of the good neighbor policy."

"The numerous and transcendental interests which unite our two countries," he continued, "make me see that there is much important work to be done, and in this connection my government is fortunately imbued with the fullest spirit of cooperation towards this great democracy . . ."

In reply, President Roosevelt said in part:

"The Panama Canal, which has brought our two countries into close association on the Isthmus of Panama, and which has brought us so many and significant benefits, has also brought us grave responsibilities. Our partnership in that great enterprise, which is the essence of the new treaty recently effective between us, is the special interest, not only of our two countries but of the other American republics.

"In these strenuous days, it is gratifying and encouraging to me, as it will be to all who share our mutual concern for freedom, to note the reaffirmation which your excellency so happily brings of the sincere and wholehearted desire of the Panamanian government to cooperate fully in the great and important task of defense."

Senor Michels in presenting his letters spoke of the close understanding and friendship between Chile and the United States and said his government was determined to do everything to maintain the integrity and solidarity of the Western Hemisphere.

Navy Asks 535 More Annapolis Openings; Reserve Training Cuts Lag in Mobilization

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Congress was told yesterday that the Navy's plans have been revised to eliminate a 120-day delay in full mobilization in time of war.

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, said that plans for training young reserve officers after war starts to fill posts in the fleet were changed last June on orders from President Roosevelt. Training of young college students was started then to save the 120-day period required to school such men in their duties.

More than 500 young reservists have qualified as ensigns since the program was inaugurated. Nimitz said, and by the end of next summer 4,500 junior reserve officers will have been trained to fill the fleet's needs.

Nimitz testified before the House Naval Affairs Committee in support of a bill to increase the number of midshipmen allowed at the Annapolis Naval Academy by 535. It would raise from four to five the number of midshipmen each Senator and Congressman is allowed to sponsor at the Academy at one time.

The committee unanimously recommended the bill, after amending it to increase the number of appointments to Annapolis from the Naval Reserve from 50 to 100.

Capt. Howard H. Good told the committee that the Navy budget provided $9,000,000 for expanding facilities at the Naval Academy, to be ready by next September. When these are finished, it was said, the Navy plans to ask a further increase in midshipmen to six for each member of Congress.

Meanwhile, the powerful Rules Committee, which controls the flow of legislation to the House floor, voted to bring up for consideration by the House Tuesday the $300,000,000 bill recommended by the Naval Committee earlier in the week to strengthen vessels of the fleet against air attack.

Chairman Vinson of the Naval Committee announced he would seek the approval of the rules body to bring up another naval measure on Wednesday, a $909,000,000 bill authorizing additional shipbuilding facilities and the construction of 400 sub chasers and other small warships.

During Admiral Nimitz's testimony, he was asked if the Navy planned to call all of its reserves into active service in the near future.

"No," he answered, smiling, "we want to leave some little thing to do if we mobilize—like calling out the last reserves."

The naval official said that after June 30, the Navy planned to raise the requirements for candidates for the training course for reserve ensign from two to four years of college, as the need then will be for engineering officers. The candidates are given an intensified course aboard ship and at Annapolis.

Representatives of the aircraft industry and Government officials were appointed yesterday to advise the Defense Priorities Board on the division of restricted commercial aircraft production among airlines.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities in the new Office of Production Management, selected five members of a commercial aircraft priorities committee established last week. The group is headed by Arthur B. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, New York.

New members are Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce; Col. Donald H. Connally, of the Civil Aeronautics Board; C. R. Smith, aeronautical consultant of the Defense Commission; Capt. D. C. Ramsey, of the Navy, and Col. E. L. Lyons, of the Army.

Merrill C. Meigs, in charge of the production division's aeronautical section, will be an ex officio member.

Oil Tank Explodes At Ford's Plant; FBI Investigating

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—An oil tank exploded at the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant this afternoon, and investigators for the Department of Justice hastened to the scene to determine whether saboteurs were responsible.

Fire following the blast cast up a great smoke cloud and threatened adjacent oil tanks. The Dearborn fire department and the company's own fire crew quickly extinguished the blaze.

Officials said no one was injured, and Ford employes reported that damage was not great. It was suggested that a spark from a coke plant might have caused the explosion.

Coast Plane Plant and Union Still in Deadlock on Wage Issue

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 17.—The strike-threatened Ryan Aeronautical Co. rejected a new wage proposal of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers today.

Harry Malcom, Federal conciliator, said negotiators were "again deadlocked."

The union, empowered by a 731-to-27 membership vote, previously had announced a strike would become effective next Tuesday if a settlement were not reached. It would involve 1,600 workers engaged on a $11,400,000 defense order.

Harvester Strike

Chicago, Jan. 17 (INS).—The Federal Government moved tonight to avert a general strike in all eight plants of the International Harvester Co. as the result of a "double strike" in the company's East Moline (Ill.) plant.

The company is engaged in national defense production.

In East Moline was the novel situation of a strike called by an independent union, followed today by a strike called by the C. I. O.'s Farm Equipment Workers organizing committee.

C. I. O. leaders refused to take seriously the strike by the independent union, charging that, in fact, the union was company-dominated and that the strike, therefore, was in effect a company lockout.

Federal Conciliator David Roadley was in Chicago tonight conferring with representatives of the Harvester company and with leaders of the C. I. O. union. He strove to settle the East Moline strike and thus stave off the threatened walkout in the other seven Harvester plants. A general strike against the company would affect an estimated 25,000 workers.

Shipyard Closed Four Hours

San Francisco, Jan. 17 (AP).—An unexpected picket line closed the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s union shipbuilding plant for four hours today, but work was resumed at noon.

Company spokesmen said the mass picket line which halted work of 3,000 on five cargo vessels was called off after four men agreed to join unions affiliated with the A. F. L. Bay City Metals Trade Council and a fifth quit his job.

Ford Stand Announced

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—I. A. Capizzi, attorney for the Ford Motor Co., informed Frank H. Bowen, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, today that the company would not enter a stipulation consenting to a collective bargaining election among the 3,800 employes of Ford's Lincoln plant.

Bowen notified the company ten days ago that the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.) had petitioned for an election and had claimed to represent a majority of Lincoln employes. He asked both company and union to consent to an election without formal hearing by the board.

Steel Strike Threatens

Cleveland, Jan. 17 (AP).—Job and wage grievances between Republic Steel Corporation and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) have developed a strike threat at the company's Corrigan-McKinney plant, William Donovan, district S. W. O. C. director, reported today.

The plant is producing sheet steel for armament industries.

Donovan, asserting United States Conciliator James F. Dewey was en route here, disclosed that a two and one-half hour "wildcat" strike staged by 12 cranemen at the Corrigan plant Tuesday halted finishing work on which 800 workers were engaged. He said the trouble was provoked by a 15-to-20-cent hourly wage reduction given the cranemen. A Republic spokesman denied there had been any wage cut at the mill.

Glass, Byrnes To Get Foreign Relations Posts

Van Nuys Nominated For Chairman Of Judiciary Unit

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Favorable Senate Foreign Relations Committee action on the President's "lend-lease" bill was virtually assured yesterday when two ardent advocates of aid to Britain were nominated to fill vacancies on the committee.

At the same time, the Democratic Steering Committee, whose recommendations are almost always ratified by the Senate, proposed anti-New Deal Senator Frederick Van Nuys of Indiana, for the coveted post of chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Senators James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Carter Glass of Virginia, were recommended for the Foreign Relations Committee vacancies. Byrnes is one of the Administration's chief strategists, and Glass has gone emphatically on record in favor of "all-out" assistance to the British. With yesterday's additions, at least 12 of the committee's 23 members are listed in favor of the proposed bill.

Secret Vote Taken

Senator George, of Georgia, chairman of the committee, said yesterday he thought Senate hearings should commence "without waiting to see what the House action might do with the bill." His committee will begin consideration of the measure Wednesday.

Senator Van Nuys was nominated chairman of the important Judiciary Committee by a secret vote of the Steering Committee. Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, also considered unfriendly to the New Deal, was the other candidate.

According to the rigid seniority rule of the Senate, the member who first joined the Judiciary Committee should succeed to the chairmanship, which was vacated through the defeat in the Arizona primaries last year of veteran Senator Henry F. Ashurst.

However, Van Nuys and McCarran were named to the Judiciary Committee the same day—so neither had seniority over the other. But for some reason which may—or may not—be related to the respective dates on which Indiana and Nevada were admitted to the Union, Senator Van Nuys' name preceded that of Senator McCarran on the Judiciary Committee's official roster for six out of the last eight years. This fact played a considerable part in the selection of Senator Van Nuys yesterday.

Graduate of I. U.

Senator Van Nuys, a graduate of Indiana University law school (class of 1900), was chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Indiana State Senate, in which he served from 1913 to 1916. He was United States Attorney for Indiana from 1920 to 1922, and practiced law in Indianapolis from then until his election to the United States Senate in 1932. He is a member of the Indianapolis, Indiana and American Bar Associations.

McCarran Refuses To Be Chairman

the Senate District Committee because of McCarran's earlier refusal of it, was rushed to Naval Hospital with influenza and a reported fever of 104 degrees.

The Senate Steering Committee is now expected to accept McCarran's refusal and to nominate Reynolds before the Senate acts on the appointments next week.

Reynolds May Decline

However, there has been a rumor afloat that Reynolds might change his mind and decline the job. He is said to have been besieged with favor seekers since the publication of the first story that he was in line for the chairmanship.

Three members of the Senate District Committee before McCarran, rejected the District committee chairmanship, vacated by the defeat of former Senator William H. King of Utah. They are, in order of seniority, Senators Glass, Tydings and Bankhead.

Senator McCarran, in his letter to Majority Leader Barkley, not previously made public, said:

"The press and other sources have carried the expression that the Senators who are senior to me on the Committee for the District of Columbia might decline the chairmanship of that committee and that it might therefore fall to me.

Continues on Committee

"It is rather presumptuous for me to address you in the matter on mere rumor, but at the hazard of being so, I beg leave to say that I respectfully decline the chairmanship of the Committee of the District of Columbia in the event my seniority on that committee should put me in line for the same.

"As a member of the District Committee I have always given a full measure of time to matters that came before it, and to the District affairs generally, and I shall continue in this respect.

"Due to the retirement of Senators Ashurst, King and Neely I will, after the first of the year, become the ranking and senior Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, and I am preparing myself to assume the duties and responsibilities of that position.

"This communication is transmitted to you at this time that it may be in your files and available to the Committee on Committees."

Senator Barkley replied that he would submit the letter to the Senate Steering Committee.

Chinese Disband Communist Army For Revolt Plot

Chungking, China, Jan. 17 (AP).—The National Military Council announced tonight that the Communist new fourth army "as a unit has been abolished and disarmed for its defiance of military orders and a plot to stage a revolt."

The commander, Yeh Ting, was arrested and held for court martial.

The spokesman said that the fourth army sought to waylay the government's Fortieth Division.

The Fortieth, however, "fought in self defence" and succeeded in completely disarming the new fourth by January 12, he said.

World's Most Beautiful Woman Dolores Del Rio, Says Orson

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ENDS TEN-YEAR MARRIAGE — Dolores Del Rio (left), Mexican film actress, was granted a divorce in Los Angeles yesterday from Cedric Gibbons, movie art director. She is shown with Fay Wray, also a screen star, who was corroborating witness. The black-haired actress and Gibbons were married in 1930

Declares Gardenia-Eating Actress 'Hasn't Told Me—Yet' if She'll Consent to Wed; Star Divorces 'Cold' Film Director

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Staff Writer

Hollywood, Jan. 17.—Orson Welles tonight called the gardenia-eating Dolores Del Rio the most beautiful woman in the world and indicated he hoped to marry her.

The "Man from Mars" cannot do that for at least a year. Miss Del Rio received her divorce only this morning from Cedric Gibbons, the movie art director, whom she charged with mental cruelty. She said he was "cold and indifferent."

The 26-year-old Welles, who scared the eastern half of the Nation with his Martian invasion radio broadcast a couple of years ago and who wrote, produced, directed and acted in his first motion picture during most of last year, met Miss Del Rio soon after he came to Hollywood.

"It was at a party given by Harry Warner," he recalled. "I thought she was the most beautiful woman in the world. I still think so."

She had separated by then from Gibbons. Welles became her almost constant escort.

"I've seen as much of her as she'd permit," he said. "She's a wonderful girl.

"She is one of my very best friends. Why, we even have the same tastes. We like the same music—everything."

Asked whether he intended to marry her, he replied: "She hasn't told me—yet."

The marriage of Miss Del Rio, who was born in 1905 in Durango, Mexico, and christened Dolores Ansunsolo, to Gibbons, who designs the fancy movie sets for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, lasted 10 years. Miss Del Rio brought Fay Wray into court as a corroborating witness and told Judge Thurmond Clarke that for the last three years her husband embarrassed her, refused to take her to parties, and assumed an attitude of aloofness which left her nervous and ill.

Miss Wray said she had visited their modernistic home in Santa Monica frequently and had observed "the effect of Mr. Gibbons' cruel and indifferent attitude."

The judge awarded Miss Del Rio a decree which becomes effective in one year.

Miss Del Rio's appetite for flower petals is no mere press agent dream. She said she had eaten flowers all her life.

Welles' favorite food is beefsteak, medium rare.

U. S. to Try Bus Postoffice On District-Virginia Route

A new highway postoffice service calling for use of huge bus-type trucks equipped with the same facilities for sorting, handling and dispatching mail as are railway postal cars was announced last night by Postmaster General Walker.

Walker called the new service "one of the most significant developments in the field of mail transportation in recent years." He said it would not compete with railway mail service, but was designed to supersede discontinued train service or supplement inadequate service.

The first route, to be known officially as the Washington, D. C., and Harrisonburg, Va., highway postoffice, will be inaugurated on February 10. Walker said two other routes had been selected, but would not be announced until delivery of the trucks to be used on them.

Manned by picked crews of postal clerks, the trucks will provide increased and faster service, Walker said, to areas which formerly were served by short line and feeder railroads. He added that many railroads had discontinued non-profitable passenger trains on short lines, and that motorized routes had only partially supplied the former facilities.

The Washington - Harrisonburg route will be by way of Middleburg, The Plains and Strasburg, a distance of about 140 miles. One round trip will be made daily except Sunday.

The route will provide service to 3 first-class, 6 second-class, 10 third-class and 14 fourth-class postoffices.

Walker said that through star routes and connecting lines the new route would advance mail delivery to about 125,000 residents in Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun, Fauquier, Warren, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties in Virginia.

Judge Won't Divorce Wives From Selects

Kansas City, Kans., Jan. 17 (INS).—Circuit Court Judge Ray G. Cowan announced today he would not in any case grant a divorce to a woman whose husband is in training in an Army camp and unable to contest the suit.

"If he is in an Army camp," the judge said, "he could not come to Kansas City to fight a divorce action. And, anyway, the draftee should not be worried with marital troubles."

Wallace Warns Farmers Not To Speculate

Points to Markets Shut by War in Final Report as Secretary

Vice President-elect Henry A. Wallace cautioned American farmers yesterday against being tempted into any kind of speculative production of agricultural products or land buying by price advances which might result from defense spending.

Farmers are faced instead, he said, by the necessity of making additional reductions in production of some crops, particularly those which normally find an outlet abroad, because the war "has damaged our agricultural export trade."

Furthermore, he added, present farm-aid programs may have to be overhauled to meet problems growing out of the war, the defense program and peace, when it comes.

Points to Closed Markets

These views were expressed by Wallace in his final report as Secretary of Agriculture.

Pointing out how the war has closed virtually all of Europe except Britain as a market for farm products, the report said farmers "will have to think anew about making additional crop shifts."

"This condition may last indefinitely," it added. "It sharply warns the American farmer to shift his production more nearly to a domestic basis, and he should heed the warning despite the fact that Government commodity loans and the ever-normal granary may soften the consequences of declining foreign trade."

Sees Need for Planning

Looking beyond the war, Wallace declared there was no prospect that agriculture would be able to "rush back into full competitive production."

"It will need production planning; some type of price-adjustment machinery; facilities for maintaining an ever-normal granary. It will need surplus disposal in the domestic market, through food-stamp plans, cotton-stamp plans, and the like.

"Under Federal and State guidance, it will need to improve the land-use system, to provide a livelihood in agriculture for larger numbers of people who can find no other work."

While making no outright recommendations, the former Secretary stressed "advantages" of the so-called "certificate plan" of boosting agricultural income to a parity with industry and labor. Under this plan, growers cooperating with farm programs would receive certificates. Manufacturers would be required to buy these certificates, which would be valued at the difference between the actual market price and the desired price. Wallace said this plan would be in effect a processing tax.

Three Families Put $276,725 In Campaign to Elect Willkie

Gillette Makes Public Donations by duPonts, Pews and Rockefellers; Total Is Less Than a Fourth What They Spent on Landon

By the Associated Press

Three wealthy families—the duPonts of Delaware, the Rockefellers of New York, and the Pews of Pennsylvania—were credited yesterday by a Senate committee with contributing $276,725 to organizations supporting Wendell L. Willkie in the last election.

Chairman Gillette (Democrat) of the special Senate committee appointed to investigate campaign expenditures made public a study of their individual contributions and said lack of time made it impossible for the special Senate group to hold hearings on these matters.

The 1940 contributions of members of the three families were less than one-fourth of the aggregate they gave to the Republican cause in 1936. A Senate committee for the 1936 election reported that the duPonts contributed more than $600,000 to Republican groups, the Pews more than $300,000, and the Rockefellers more than $160,000.

$5,000 Limit Set by Law

The Senator said that the duPont family contributed $121,225 to groups that supported Willkie; the Pew family, $96,500, and the Rockefellers, $59,000.

The Hatch Act sets a $5,000 annual limit on the amount an individual may contribute to the national committee of a political party. However, Gillette explained, this total might be exceeded by making additional contributions to State or independent committees.

The compilation, lumping contributions by families, was made public in advance of the report to the Senate later this month, the chairman explained, because of extensive hearings conducted on loans totaling $300,000 made by Richard J. Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, N. C., to the Democratic State groups.

Loans to Committees

Reynolds testified that he contributed $5,000 to the Democratic National Committee and then made loans of $175,000 to the New York State Democratic committee, $100,000 to the New Jersey committee, and $25,000 to the Illinois committee. Reynolds recently was appointed treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

Committee investigators credited Lammot duPont with $49,000 in contributions to the 1940 campaign; Pierre S. duPont with $10,100; J. Howard Pew with $23,500; Joseph N. Pew, jr., with $22,000; Mary Ethel Pew with $20,500; Mable Pew Myrin with $19,500; John D. Rockefeller, jr., $17,500, and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., $19,000.

His encouraging outlook was made public early enough in the day to exercise a happy influence on grandstand seat sales. Ticket receipts at the 727 Fifteenth Street headquarters totaled more than $4,500 yesterday, 50 per cent better than the previous day.

It was announced, in anticipation of a big last-minute rush, that 1,600 additional chairs will be installed on the Pennsylvania Avenue side of the park triangle at Thirteenth Street, in front of the National Theater. All 1,600 will be priced at $2.50 each and the tickets will go on sale at noon today.

One of the largest single buyers yesterday was a representative of a building trades union who took 45 $10 pasteboards. The Inaugural Committee announced last night that 75 special trains are scheduled to roll into the Capital during the next 48 hours, exclusive of an unestimated number of excursions and the extra cars added to regular trains.

Forty-four of the specials will come in on the Pennsylvania, 25 on the Baltimore & Ohio, 5 on the Chesapeake & Ohio and 1 on the Southern.

Two all-Pullman trains of the Seaboard will be parked at the Benning sidings, their occupants living in the cars during their stay here. Eighty-four sleepers carrying Pennsylvania and B. & O. passengers will do the same. The former's 60 Pullman cars will be distributed among the Benning, New Jersey Avenue and Fourteenth Street yards, while the 24 B. & O. cars will lay over at the New York Avenue sidings.

Special Bus Service

The Capital Transit Co. is providing special bus service to and from the railroad colonies.

Union Station is being equipped with extra lunch counters, expanded baggage checking facilities and a special public address system for the convenience of travelers.

Explaining final plans for police protection, Maj. Ernest W. Brown yesterday announced that more than 1,500 policemen, firemen and plainclothesmen will be on duty Inauguration Day. This figure includes the 80 detectives and 300 uniformed men who are being lent to Washington by other cities.

An outstanding social preliminary will be held tonight (Saturday) when the National Democratic League of the District of Columbia holds its Governors' Inaugural Banquet and Ball at the Lafayette Hotel. Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, will be toastmaster, introducing the principal speaker, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

Governors Accept

Governors who have accepted invitations to attend the banquet, reception or ball—or all three—include, the league announced, J. Howard McGrath, of Rhode Island; J. Melville Broughton, of North Carolina; Herbert R. O'Conor, of Maryland; Herbert B. Maw, of Indiana; Arthur H. James, of Pennsylvania; Walter W. Bacon, of Delaware; Herbert H. Lehman, of New York; Paul B. Johnson, of Mississippi, and Spessard L. Holland, of Florida.

In accordance with the statute which makes Inauguration Day a legal holiday in the District, Public Librarian Clara W. Herbert announced that the Central Library and all branches will be closed all day Monday.

In a good-will gesture, Charles G. Morgan, jr., secretary of the District of Columbia Trucking Association, yesterday called upon local truck drivers to curtail operations on Monday so as to relieve traffic congestion.

Stating that "the public will cuss but trucks that interfere with people watching the inaugural ceremonies and parade," he requested truck owners to postpone pickups and deliveries to Tuesday, wherever possible.

traffic had the right-of-way, it was testified.

Skater's Leg Fractured

Crossing the street at Third and H Streets Northwest, a roller skate on one foot, Basvekian Haig, 10, of 223 H Street Northwest, was seriously injured by a truck police said was driven by Fred E. Carter, colored, 39, of 509 O Street Northwest. The boy was taken to Casualty Hospital with a leg fracture, severe head lacerations and other injuries.

Lawrence Curley, 16, of 212 Walnut Street, Takoma Park, D. C., suffered head injuries when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a telephone pole in University Lane, just west of the University of Maryland. David Becker, of 220 Baltimore Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was listed as driver of the car. Young Curley was brought to Casualty Hospital.

Playing in the street with other boys near his home at 821 Thirteenth Street Northeast, Joseph Jackson, 13, was struck by a car driven, police said, by Uriah Wallace, 50, of 4938 Washington Place Northeast. The boy's leg was broken. He was also taken to Casualty Hospital.

Hit at Gas Station

Arthur Jackson, colored, 16, of 350 K street Southwest, suffered arms and back injuries when he was struck by a car as he put air into his bicycle tire in a service station at Fourth and H Streets Southwest. Police listed William H. Taylor, colored, 49, of 916 First Street Southwest, as driver of the automobile. The youth was taken to Providence Hospital.

Thomas White, 19, of 3533 Tenth Street Northwest, suffered cuts and bruises when he was knocked from his bicycle at Sixteenth and U Streets Southeast. He was treated by a neighborhood physician.

The second bicycling victim was Fred Huff, colored, 11 of 5342 C Street Southeast, who was struck while pedaling in the 5500 block Central Avenue Northeast. He was treated at home for cuts on his head and hands.

They'll Describe Inaugural

YOUNGSTERS WILL DRAW A WORD PICTURE—Two Washington children will be among the commentators describing the inaugural proceedings for the National Broadcasting Co.'s two networks Monday. Townsend Pagter, 10 (left), a sixth-grade student at the Benjamin Stoddert School, and Patricia Lou Head, 11, in the seventh grade at Gordon Junior High School, will draw word pictures of parts of the parade for the school children who'll be listening in throughout the country. equipped units capable of meeting a landing force and engaging them with good prospects of success.

He told his audience they could "hold no hopes of an easy passage—before us lie dangers. I hardly like to say as great as those through which we have passed, but at any rate dangers which if we neglect anything will be fatal, mortal.

"Before us lie many months of having to endure bombardment of our cities and industrial areas without the power to make equal reply. Before us lie sufferings and tribulations. I am not one who pretends that smooth courses are open to us or that our experiences during this year are going to be deprived of terrible characteristics.

"But what the end will be I cannot have the slightest doubt," the prime minister declared emphatically.

"The two dictators are already endeavoring to feed their people with every kind of optimistic tale but here we have made up our minds: Here we look at facts with unillusioned eyes because we are conscious of the rightness of our cause and because we are determined that whatever the cost, whatever suffering, we will not fail mankind at this turning point in its fortunes."

Turning to Hitler's invasion chances, Churchill declared:

"That bad man has never had so great a need as he has now to strike Britain from his path. He is master of a great part of Europe. His armies can move almost wherever they will upon the continent. He holds down eight or ten countries by force, by secret police and by still more odious local Quislings.

Amidst Growing Hatred

"But every day this occupation of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France—and presently perhaps Italy—lasts, there is built up a volume of hatred for the Nazi creed and for the German name which generations and perhaps centuries hardly will efface.

"It is for Herr Hitler a matter of supreme consequence to break down the resistance of Great Britain and thus rivet effectively the shackles he has prepared for the people of Europe. But it is one thing to have a need and another to be able to satisfy that need.

"We in this island stand foursquare in the path of European dictators. Their threats will not appall us. It is certain that if Herr Hitler found the invasion of this island difficult in July, he found it more difficult in September; and if he found it difficult in September, it will not have become easier by February or March or April.

"But remember that the price of safety is eternal vigilance. The reason one feels a confidence that this man's concentrated hatred will not be effective against our island is because every one of us is up and doing; is because there will be ceaseless attention paid by all our forces to every sign of enemy preparations and because we know that we now have millions of armed men and scores of well-equipped units capable of meeting a landing force and of engaging them with good prospects of success."

Speaking on British victories in the Middle East, Churchill declared: "That offensive has succeeded—I confess it frankly—far beyond our dreams. Now nearly 80,000 prisoners have been taken, and perhaps there are more to come.

"Now that eight or nine divisions of Italian troops, well equipped, have been dashed out of existence with inconceivably small losses, some people may be inclined to underrate the enormous hazards and difficulties which seemed to lie about it before it was accomplished.

Risks Were Great

"To march across 70 or 80 miles of waterless desert to strike down superior forces who had been intrenched for upward of three months, to break the whole resisting power of an army which was advancing to the attack of Egypt, to do all that so surely, seemed a task of the very greatest hazard. It was a risk well run.

"We ran risks here to make it possible, and those generals, Wavell and Wilson, and Air Marshal Longmore, they also ran grave risks with great success."

But the results, he said, gave "opportunity to address ourselves to the problems of the perils of 1941 with far greater advantages than were at our disposal six or eight months ago."

In acknowledging the cheers of Clydeside industrial crowds in the afternoon, Churchill declared that a British victory would "be only a stimulus to further efforts to conquer ourselves and make our country as worthy in the days of peace as it is proving in the hours of war. . . ."

"Do not suppose," he went on, "that we are at the end of the road yet. Though long and hard it may be, I have absolutely no doubt we shall win a complete and decisive victory over the forces of evil."

Churchill concluded:

"We are given as our priceless spirit the faith to supply what human judgment cannot outline or know, and that faith will carry us forward through this struggle at the head of a liberated Europe.

"It will carry us forward when these countries which I have mentioned, who are now subjugated and trampled down, will bless the British name, and we shall be able to hand on to those in this island who come after us, to our children and grandchildren, a record of duty done which will not have been surpassed in all the rugged annals of our island home."

Law Ties Hands Of Safety Officials

Wisconsin Avenue were ridiculed yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Inspector Arthur E. Miller, police accident prevention head.

Van Duzer described the zones as "hazard zones" and admitted they offered no degree of safety to persons using them.

Miller said "no zone is a 'safety' zone unless an automobile can't drive through it."

Although in accord that some improvements should be made, both Van Duzer and Miller cited the legislative rider.

It was inserted in the bill, according to reliable reports, by a member of Congress who no longer holds a seat. It has been in effect for more than six years.

At the time it was believed that the cost of providing "safety" zones should be borne by the Capital Transit Co. and not the District government. Hence, the rider tying the hands of District officials.

The 1940-41 appropriation measure, however, permits local highway planners to construct new pedestrian zones when a street is repaved or newly built. This was included largely through the efforts of Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst.

Lister under funds for the Traffic Department, the present rider reads in part:

"Provided, That no part of this or any other appropriation contained in this Act shall be expended for building, installing and maintaining streetcar loading platforms, and lights of any description employed to distinguish same . . ."

It is then provided that permanent types of safety zones may be constructed from funds for street improvements—but only when the improvements are necessary—such as resurfacing or repaving.

Typical of the dangerous "safety" zones now in use are those along Wisconsin Avenue. At numerous points, they are located where even the rays from street lights fail to strike them. Motorists have repeatedly complained they are unable to see the zones after dark.

Suggestions have been made to provide a system of flood lights along Wisconsin Avenue and other streets which have these painted "button" zones, but the appropriation rider prohibits "lights of any description" being erected by the District.

In other large cities, according to Inspector Miller, concrete safety zones with stone pillars at the approach sides have been provided for the protection of pedestrians and street car passengers.

"This is the only practical type," Miller declared, "and until we get some of the same kind here, pedestrians must continue to take their lives in their hands while occupying our painted 'safety' areas."

'$2-a-Year' Firms to Build Shipyards

Largest With 13 Ways Will Be Constructed In Baltimore

A Maritime Commission administrative order revealed yesterday that additional yards in which the 200-vessel "emergency merchant fleet" will be built are to be located in Baltimore, New Orleans, Mobile, Ala., and Wilmington, N. C. The Baltimore yards will be the largest, with 13 ways, as compared to six and eight ways in the other cities.

The commission had previously announced that other yards would be built in Houston, Tex.; Portland, Oreg.; and Los Angeles.

The new facilities provide for 51 ways in all, and it is expected that the 200 craft can be completed within two years.

"$2-a-Year" Firms

It was also learned from commission sources yesterday that the construction companies will operate as "$2-a-year" ventures. The yards are to be built at cost, with only $2 "token profits" to the builders.

Present negotiations for the actual ship construction contracts, carried on by the commission with the Newport News, Todd, Six Companies, Inc., and Bethlehem Steel shipbuilding concerns, are for the purpose of seeking a profit limitation of from 7 to 8 per cent of total cost. This range is similar to the allowable profits on Navy ship construction, in contrast to the 10 per cent limit usual in other Maritime Commission orders.

Deny They're for Britain

Commission officials denied that the 200 ships were being built for sale to Great Britain or for use in war zones. They admitted that the slow ships, which have a maximum speed of only 10 or 11 knots, could not compete in peace time trade with modern merchant vessels, but they pointed to a shortage in American bottoms which is daily becoming more acute. They said that as the defense program approaches its peak, there will be a heavy demand for vessels to transport raw materials from the Orient and South America which cannot be met by existing facilities.

Shaw Love Notes Ordered Published

no longer make them ridiculous by their white hairs."

Before her death at Pau, France, last April, at the age of 77, Mrs. Campbell frequently twitted Shaw about his love letters and even published a few until the aged playwright refused her legal publication rights to any more.

When the actress wrote, imploring him to lift the ban on publication, Shaw is said to have replied:

"No, Stella, I will not play horse to your lady Godiva."

Probably the best-known passage from the Shaw letters that were published before the ban was the following:

"There are such wonderful sorts of relations, and close togethernesses and babes-in-the-woodnesses, besides being in love, which, as you point out, my diet and feeble nature forbid.

"I may have moments of being in love, but you must overlook them. And now, having expressed myself with carefully punctuated moderation, I shall go to bed quite calmly, and sign myself, oh loveliest, doveliest, babiest.

"Your gabiest, G. B. S."

Another of Shaw's letters, published by Mrs. Campbell in her memoirs, said:

"I hope you have lost your good looks for while they last any fool can adore you and the adoration of fools is bad for the soul. No, give me a ruined complexion, a lost figure, 16 chins, a farmyard of crows feet and an obvious wig. Then you will see me come out strong."

As famous for her wit as for her beauty, Mrs. Campbell was a frequent visitor to the United States long after her retirement from the stage. In 1939 when she was interviewed about the Shaw letters in New York she declared she would permit their publication on one condition only:

"I shall write my own preface to the edition, not Mr. Shaw, as he did in the case of the Ellen Terry letters. (Mrs. Campbell was a key figure in the famous Ellen Terry-Shaw correspondence published several years ago.) I do not intend to give him an opportunity to say the last word. I don't trust him enough. If he chooses to sue me, he can. It will be most amusing."

The letters are now in the custody of the Westminster Bank in London. Mrs. Campbell's will left the originals of the letters to her grandson, Patrick M. Beach, and stipulated that they were to be "published in proper sequence, not cut or altered in any way, in an independent volume to be entitled 'The Love Letters of George Bernard Shaw to Mrs. Patrick Campbell.'"

Mrs. Campbell was a star of both the American and British stage after flashing into fame as the star of Sir Arthur Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," first presented in London in 1893. For 25 years during the height of her fame she had a virtual choice of roles especially written for her by Pinero, Sir James Barrie, Oscar Wilde, Hendrik Ibsen, Maurice Maeterlinck, and Shaw himself.

U.S. Air Base To Dominate Martinique

Acquisition of Site For Land Planes Is Disclosed by Hull

Copyright by New York Times

An agreement with the United Kingdom for the establishment of an American land-plane base in the Island of St. Lucia, 20 miles from Martinique, was announced by Secretary of State Hull yesterday.

The base, which will be located at Vieuxfort, will be in addition to a site at Gros Islet Bay in the island, previously announced, for a seaplane base.

Both together will give the United States domination of the French-owned island of Martinique. Although no explanations were vouchsafed officially, it is understood that one of the considerations entering into the selection of a land-plane base was the possibility that, in the event of an Axis victory in Europe, German plans in South America might make desirable plane operations from a strategic point like St. Lucia.

The request for the land-plane base was said to have been made after the application was made for the seaplane base and in the light of a review of possibilities by strategists.

Both sites are those recommended by American experts. The importance of the seaplane base was pointed out recently by President Roosevelt at a press conference. He said that the harbor there was far superior to the one at Martinique, which was more an open roadstead, and that because of this St. Lucia dominated the French island.

British Seek U. S. View

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—An authoritative source said today that Britain was seeking the United States' views on the establishment of a British contraband control base in the Western Hemisphere, possibly in the West Indies.

There is nothing to stop the British from establishing such a control base in the West Indies, this source added, but he said that because of "close relations" between Britain and the United States the British were seeking Washington's views.

If a control station were set up, the most likely port would be in Trinidad, he said.

The base would be designed to halt trade between the Americas and Germany in goods the British class as contraband, it was said.

Women Obliged to Bear Arms, Say Citizenship Case Attorneys

The obligation of women citizens to bear arms was asserted by Government counsel in the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

The court was urged to reject the contentions of Mrs. Rebecca Shelley Rathmer, 53, that she is entitled to swear allegiance to the United States with the mental reservation that she will not fight in defense of the country because of pacifist convictions and religious scruples.

Born in Hawthorne, Pa., Mrs. Rathmer married Felix Martin Rathmer, a German engineer, August 3, 1922. If her marriage had been seven weeks later she would not have lost her citizenship because of the marriage, as the Cable Act was passed September 22. However, the law in force on August 3, 1922, provided that an American woman who married an alien became of the nationality of her husband.

The Cable Act provided that who married aliens before September 22, 1922, as Mrs. Rathmer did, might regain their citizenship by taking the oath of allegiance, with its implication of willingness to bear arms.

Mrs. Rathmer refused to do this and has lost three previous court fights to obtain citizenship without deviating from her principles.

"The defense of democracy and the principles for which democracy stands," said the Government brief filed yesterday, "at no time have required greater support than at present. The march of current events in Europe substantiates the view that women no longer can be exempted, categorically, at least, from the obligation to bear arms."

Conceding that present law allows a native-born citizen to be a conscientious objector, but not a naturalized one, the brief quoted the Supreme Court as saying that Congress can change the law, "in the last extremity, to compel the armed service of any citizen in the land, without regard to his objections or his views in respect of the justice or morality of the particular war or war in general. . . ."

The Government's views were advanced by District Attorney Edward M. Curran, Assistant District Attorney Arthur B. Caldwell, who opposed Mrs. Rathmer's application in the District Court, and Assistants Charles B. Murray and Bernard Margolius.

U. S. and Mexico To Negotiate On Defense Plans

By the Associated Press

The United States and Mexico, it was learned yesterday, will open formal negotiations immediately after President Roosevelt's inauguration next week, with the objectives a stronger bond of "good neighbor" friendship and close collaboration in inter-American defense plans.

By reaching a satisfactory settlement on "every problem between the two nations," it was said, Mexican and American officials plan to lay the foundation for a far-reaching program of military and economic cooperation of vital importance to the defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Preliminary talks here and in Mexico City over a period of several months, it was said, have laid the ground work for the diplomatic discussions which are expected to produce mutually advantageous agreements on the oil and agrarian expropriation claims questions and other long-pending problems.

The forthcoming negotiations, it was learned, will be between Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador, and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

R.A.F. Again Bombs Bases In France

German Fliers Set 100 Fires in Bristol, Some Serious

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Jan. 18.—German raiders swooped in on London shortly after midnight and soon the explosion of falling bombs and roar of the antiaircraft batteries could be heard.

The attack came after earlier raiders concentrated on a west English town.

This foray was met by the heaviest antiaircraft fire ever reported from the district. Houses were declared shaken, not by bombs, but by the fury of the British ground defenses.

Incendiary bombs rained on one town but alert fire watchers quickly dealt with them and no blazes were reported.

Nazi Bases Hammered

British airmen gave their attention to Nazi bases in occupied France yesterday following their forty-first night raid on the German naval base of Wilhelmshaven in weather described as more suitable to a polar expedition than bombers.

R. A. F. squadrons nosed into a Channel mist and headed for France. Thereafter, explosions could be heard along the Kentish coast, but whether they were British guns hammering objectives across the Channel or bombs could not be determined.

Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair, speaking at Glasgow, declared that the Royal Air Force would "blaze the way to victory in the coming year."

"Whether or not the goal will be reached is not for any of us to say," Sir Archibald continued, "but I strongly believe we shall see before the end of the year the path to victory before us."

He asserted that the R. A. F. would "go on striking far heavier blows on the vitals of Germany and Italy."

"The eight-gun fighter, with the skill of our pilots, has given us mastery of the skies over Britain, but it is not the last word," he said. "We shall go on to other forms of armament in the months that lie ahead."

100 Fires in Bristol

One hundred fires, some of which the British acknowledged were serious, were started in this western coastal city, but authorities reported at least 60 were extinguished within ten minutes.

Pilots returning from the Wilhelmshaven foray, termed "highly successful" though lighter than the previous night's assault, declared they flew through "ghastly" static and lightning storms which in one case set a bomber afire.

Bomb wracks, gun turrets, cockpit windows and instruments were frozen up again and again.

Despite this weather, the air ministry said the attack was "steady and hard" and "many fires soon sprang up and were methodically increased."

An earlier communique said the railroad station and oil storage tanks were in the blazing area.

The second pilot of the bomber struck by lightning was disabled and the aerial of another raider was hit by a bolt.

Blue Flames Crackled

A comrade of the injured pilot reported:

"Enormous amounts of static made the radio absolutely useless and for two hours blue flames (probably St. Elmo's fire) cracked all over the machine.

"Just before we reached Wilhelmshaven, there was a small flash inside the aircraft following by a blinding burst. Flame shot from one end of the aircraft to the other and blue flames were sparking off airscrews.

"The climax came when the plane was struck in front (by lightning). The front turret must have taken the full force of the flash. I could not see for several minutes. Everything was a purple haze.

"Through the side window I saw a flame coming up, so we bombed some guns and turned back for home . . . We landed at the base with the aircraft still coated with ice."

The British acknowledged the loss of five planes during the continental operations. They extended also to the German port of Emden, Ostend in Belgium, and Calais and Boulogne in occupied France.

Crew Gets $58.000 For Saving Ship Shelled by Raider

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—The crew of the San Demetrio, one of the 38 convoy ships saved by the British merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, was awarded £14,700 sterling (about $58,800, in court today for salvaging the shelled and damaged tanker and taking her 700 miles across the wintry Atlantic to Ireland.

The owners of the ship, which was worth £250,000 and which carried a cargo valued at £60,000, paid the costs of the action. The judge praised the crew's achievement as unprecedented. Second Officer H. Hawkins, 26, and Chief Engineer C. Pollard each were awarded £2,000.

(The Jervis Bay fought a long action with a German raider on November 5 in mid-Atlantic to protect the escape of 39 ships in a convoy, bound from an eastern Canadian port to Britain.)

An American member of the crew, Ross Preston, was given £1,000 and the San Demetrio's red ensign at the unanimous request of the rest of the crew.

"I dwell with pleasure on this incident," the judge said, "for I am sure Ross Preston is a man of the quality to treasure this piece of bunting—the only flag remaining on board the San Demetrio."

Women of France Demanded—and Got—Celebrations For World War Armistice Day, Despite Order of No Holiday

This is the sixth of a series of uncensored articles by the noted Belgian journalist about how the women of France are behaving under Nazi domination.

By Betty Barzin

World Copyright, 1941, by International News Service

New York, Jan. 17.—Everyone in unoccupied France wondered what sort of Armistice Day (November 11) celebrations would be allowed by the Vichy government.

On November 9, there was an announcement that there would be no official holiday, that all workmen were to remain at their factories, all clerks in their offices, all peasants in their fields.

War veterans, however, would not be prevented from laying wreaths on war memorials and Marshal Petain himself would attend an official ceremony at Vichy.

Said the pretty managress of the Blagnac tobacco shop:

"It is all very well telling us that former service men may lay wreaths on the war memorials, but when? Since they are not to leave their work, the ceremony can only take place in the dark, either before or after working hours. What silly nonsense!"

Even the Mayor Came

And she went to see the mayor, the curate, the doctor. The mayor was annoyed, for government orders are government orders, especially now. The curate proved most helpful and decided there would be a special mass sung on Armistice morning. The schoolmaster agreed that he would allow all war orphans to attend church.

On the morning of November 11, the church bells tolled at 10 o'clock. Everyone wore "Sunday best." The church was crowded, and about 200 people had to hear mass on the steps outside. At midday the first war orphans lined up in procession, carrying heavy masses of flowers, descended the steps, followed by about four-fifths of the population, and proceeded to the war memorial.

In every shop and workshop there was just one woman left, to keep up the pretense of "business as usual."

Sighs of relief were breathed when it was noted that the mayor and all but one his municipal counselors—one had to remain at the city hall—had joined the march. The women had had their way, and after the visit to the war memorial, many of them said: "This was the most impressive Armistice Day celebration we have ever had. And Petain will get to know of it, for it has been the same everywhere. It is no good trying to make us forget what our war memorials stand for."

Mayor Forgiven

The mayor got a special good mark and local tradespeople forgave him for having fined the baker for selling fresh bread some days before, in violation of regulations.

In the afternoon, a young girl called at my house.

She had some spools of cotton thread to sell. "Cotton? Black and white?" we cried in rapture for we had been without an inch of black and white cotton for three months. "No, ladies, no black; no white. Just green and pink."

We were sorry and she went away. As she was about to turn the corner, I had a brain-wave. I ran after her. "Give me some of that green cotton," I said. "I have some drawing-ink left, which does not stain. I'll dye a few spools and we'll see."

An hour later, I met her just as she was about to board a car going to Toulouse. "Madame, I am so glad to see you again," she said. "Just imagine, I have sold out. Everything has gone, the pink and the green. Not a spool left. I passed on your tip about dyeing the cotton, and I made 98 francs. Thank you very much. Please think hard of a way of dyeing green cotton white! Au revoir."

Patching a Luxury

To the thrifty women of France, the total disappearance of all mending wool and cotton yarn is as hard a problem as the food shortage.

To patch an old garment is an even greater luxury than to buy a new one, and very soon there will be precious few new garments for sale. As far back as September a leading tailor in Toulouse refused to take my order for a suit, not because he had no cloth, but because he had no yarn with which to sew it up.

At first there was some grumbling, but gradually the wise women of France made the best of it and said:

"We'll manage somehow to drape and pin things together."

And I have seen them carefully unravel old silk garments, store away threads, hooks and eyes, polish up old buttons.

It is that same resourceful spirit which helps the women of France to meet the fuel shortage. In cities, the problem of cooking is partly solved by gas and electric power. But in the country, things are different. In the Department of Haute-Garonne, for instance, the monthly coal allowance per household, for all purposes, was 50 kilos in October and November. Fifty kilos amount to about 110 pounds, with which one had to provide heating as well as means of cooking food.

"Pray for England's Victory"

I have seen old and young women dragging heavy logs of wood along the roads; I have seen them chopping up that wood outside their homes; I have seen them struggling with feeble fires which would not burn properly because the chimney was damp and the wood was green; I have seen them almost fainting through smoke, and yet reluctant to waste a drop of petrol or an old newspaper with which they might have kindled the unwilling fires.

"We are beaten," a gentle 80-year-old lady told me. "And we have to taste the bitter fruit of defeat. What is the use of grumbling? By grumbling we would only play into German hands. When I go to church, I do not pray for coal and butter; I pray for England's victory.

"And all my friends do the same. You see, one can do without many things as long as there is a ray of hope in final liberation. The Germans not only managed to survive after 1918, they even managed to become strong enough to break us the way they have done.

"We shall never whine as the Germans whined in 1919. It would be unworthy of France. I am almost as old as Petain, and we both know that all this overfeeding and overheating is bad for one's health. The least said about it, the better."

Ten Stukas Downed in Raid On Malta Base, British Claim

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 17.—A new and heavy British aerial attack which left fires and explosions erupting in the Axis airdrome at Catania, Sicily—the nest from which Nazi dive bombers have been harrying the British Mediterranean fleet—was reported today by the Royal Air Force.

This assault, one more in a continuing series in which the British claimed that some 40 aircraft already had been destroyed at Catania, was declared to have left "several" more Axis planes ablaze on the ground. Others were reported to have exploded.

Flames Sheathe Hangar

The base itself was said to have been heavily damaged, a hangar left covered by a sheet of flame visible 50 miles away and the administration buildings set afire.

The raid was carried out through late Wednesday night and yesterday morning and the British said they had no losses.

It is from Catania that the Germans have been springing out against British shipping and the British navy, one of their heaviest thrusts having been a long and violent dive-bombing attack yesterday on the British naval base of Malta.

Against this assault the British claimed a successful defense during which ten of the attacking planes were shot down.

A communique by the R. A. F. called it "a very heavy raid," and declared that while there was no damage to "R. A. F. property," civilian property "suffered considerably."

(This communique made no mention of German and Italian claims that in the raid the 23,000-ton British aircraft carrier Illustrious—already damaged in the engagement of January 10—had been hard hit again at Malta and perhaps knocked out of the war; that a British merchant ship was hit squarely by "the heaviest caliber bombs," and that a British arsenal was bombed.

(The Italians also asserted that a British cruiser was "seriously damaged." The Germans made no mention of this, nor did they say anything about the Italian observation that the Nazis had been aided by Italian escort planes.)

British Tighten Ring Around Besieged Tobruk

Cairo (Saturday), Jan. 18 (INS).—British mechanized troops were reported early today to be drawing their network of steel tighter around the besieged Italian-Libyan base of Tobruk, where an estimated 25,000 Fascist troops are bottled up and face surrender or death before another week elapses.

Informed military circles declared that the plight of the Tobruk garrison was identical with that of the forces which attempted to defend Bardia against British capture. They are cut off from all supply or reinforcement and are facing rapidly dwindling water supplies, it was claimed.

Fascist Command Undergoes Big Shake-up; Duce's Paper Calls Roosevelt 'Openly at War'

By International News Service

A widespread shakeup of Fascist prefects and subprefects was made known tonight shortly after the Rome radio announced commencement of a new phase of the war in which it predicted that Axis air forces would inflict smashing blows against British sea power in the Mediterranean.

The shakeup in local Fascist commands affected major provinces, including Milan, Turin, Ferrara and Agrigento, and seven subprefectures.

There were predictions here more than two weeks ago that a "new phase" would begin about the time of President Roosevelt's third inauguration, Monday.

Duce's Paper Indicts Roosevelt

"Unexpected events are possibly shaping," the Rome radio warned today. "A new phase of the war is beginning. The Axis air forces will render British Mediterranean communications with the armies in Greece and Egypt increasingly difficult."

Coincidentally Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, of Milan, accused President Roosevelt of being "openly and actively at war."

"Without the knowledge or consent of the people of the United States," the paper said, "President Roosevelt is openly and actively at war. Everything he says or does amounts to war. His hostile and belligerent neutrality is backed up by his uncontrolled and unchecked dictatorship.

"Roosevelt's offensive and provocative statements prove that he does not believe in the possibility of Axis aggression. If he believed in such a possibility he would be carefully polite. The people of the United States have not been told that Laval fell (as vice premier of France) because Roosevelt warned Premier Petain that French possessions in America would be seized if they helped Germany in a military way."

Dispatch Censored

It was learned unofficially that preparations for important Axis moves are reported nearly ready in the Adriatic and Ionian Seas.

(Note—At this point this section of the dispatch from Rome was broken off with the message: "Editor: Incomplete because of censorship.")

Military railroad traffic can be speeded up now because of special regulations for freight requiring immediate removal of merchandise to destinations, doubling storage costs, and loading cars to the fullest capacity.

The newspaper Giornale d'Italia, often a government mouthpiece, charged that English propaganda aimed at formation of an anti-Axis Balkan front had been "violently intensified" during the past fortnight. It said this propaganda consisted of exaggerating the seriousness of the Balkan food situation and high cost of living and magnifying the importance of British victories in Egypt and Greece.

French Sink Two Siamese Warships

Indo-China districts were said to have been "liberated" by the Thai invaders. Thailand claims territory from the French in both northern and southern Indo-China.)

The naval engagement was described as the first of importance since intermittent fighting began September 28.

The French said "several" of their warships (probably destroyers) came upon three Thai craft while the latter were firing at a French patrol plane in the Gulf of Siam. The French attacked them, sinking two and severely damaging the third. The size or classification of the ships was not given. (Thailand's fleet includes 4 cruisers and 14 destroyers.)

An American oil man, the representative of the Texas Co., told of the death trap set on January 10 by French Foreign Legionnaires on a road hemmed in by jungle—and from which only three Thai troopers out of a whole column managed to get out alive.

Cut Down in 15 Minutes

The French placed machine guns along the road, hidden in the dense foliage, and opened fire when the column was 500 yards distant.

The inexperienced troopers and horses alike were cut down in 15 minutes of agonizing slaughter. The French machine-guns fired so fast, the oil man was told, that they were overheated and ruined.

French planes were said to have started large fires on three principal Thai airports: Aranya, Wadhana and Prachinburi. (Bangkok had an air raid alarm Thursday night.)

Nazi Bomb Kills 45 Workingmen

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—Rescue squads digging through the ruins of a bombed workingmen's hostel—a four-story building where men bought what they hoped would be a night's sleep for 15 or 20 cents—removed seven more bodies today bringing to a total of 45 the number believed to have died in a Nazi blast from the skies.

The hostel—which was more like an American roominghouse than a hotel—crumbled after a direct hit Wednesday night.

Laboring under screened lights through last night unmindful of two air raid alarms, the firemen and soldier rescuers took 45 of the trapped men alive from the wreckage before the ruins became silent—indicating the remainder were dead or too badly hurt to cry out.

The blast was so tremendous it did not leave a brick in place.

Knowing The South

In the fact that 100 book manuscripts have been submitted for the Thomas Jefferson Southern Award, there is hope for a great and salutary literary event. The award is sponsored by the Virginia Quarterly Review and E. P. Dutton & Co., and the winner is to receive $1,000 outright, $1,500 in advance royalties, and a gold medal. This unusually handsome prize has been offered to authors who were born in the South or have lived there five years—in the intention, it is said, of attracting all authors who share in the literary and cultural traditions of that region.

It would be interesting to hear the sponsors of the Thomas Jefferson Award discuss the literary and cultural traditions of the South. Perhaps their project is one of rediscovery, since so far as the world at large can know, these traditions have been for nearly a century dictated from and interpreted in a city 200 miles north of the Mason-Dixon line. The result of this dictation has been one of the most widespread misunderstandings of the truth in modern times. After years of reading on the one hand that they are degenerates and on the other that they are the only surviving representatives of an old and higher order, even Southerners cannot be expected to know for certain what they themselves are like.

The encouraging aspect of this contest is that E. P. Dutton & Co. have expressed such an interest in what the South really is like. If they mean it, perhaps it will not be necessary for the winning book to resemble either "Sanctuary" or "So Red the Rose." It may be too much to hope, but there is at least a chance that the judges will select a volume which shows Southerners as normal people just trying to get along.

In Sheep's Clothing

In other circumstances the comments of the Nazi press upon our lend-lease bill would be funny. How else could one think of Der Angriff's encouraging reminder to "the healthy representatives" of America—to wit, the oppositionists—that the measure would give Mr. Roosevelt "a blank checkbook"? One would think that this was the voice of outraged Demos itself.

However, one must never forget that words in Nazi language are bullets. "Mein Kampf" made the entire language an armory of impostor-terms when it warned the Nazi propagandist against "spiritual assumptions." Truth happens to be the basic spiritual assumption—to be eradicated like the plague. But the Nazi, having swallowed any spiritual scruple, might still have compunctions about the credibility of his public. Herr Hitler has another piece of advice for such a writer. This is that words have a magic in themselves because the "great masses' receptive ability is only very limited, their understanding small, and their forgetfulness great."

The choice of bullet-words must, of course, be suited to the occasion. The dire threats directed at the Czechs and the Poles, no doubt, were so appropriate that they were worth several army corps. For America the use of soothing syrup has been prescribed, though only since our awakening to the nature of the surrounding menace. The reason is obvious enough. The joint in our national armor is our trepidation over the amount of power we should give to Mr. Roosevelt in coping with the aggressors in our front and back yards. This is what the Nazis are seizing upon; they hope to widen the fissure by posing a respect for our democratic institutions.

The technic is clever, devilishly clever. Not for a long time can the Berlin press have seen the like of it under the Nazi regime. Hitherto there has been nothing but contempt for democracy, for America, and for American democracy. Hitler thinks in terms of "degenerate Yankeedom," as he put it to Rauschning. When he is through with Europe, he promises thoroughly to purge our country and our continent of this "degeneracy." And the instrument for this purpose would be the "German component of the American people"—those Fifth Columnists who are ready everywhere to spring to arms for Hitler. Only by such means can we be resurrected, politically and mentally.

Der Angriff, which is the organ of the German Labor Front, has been among the shrillest exponents of this new Caesarism. Last May 13 a special article by Dr. Robert Ley, head of the Labor Front, said that what Naziism was doing for Germany "it would do for the rest of the world." It is because at last we are taking the Nazis seriously that the paper is changing its tune. But, even if our memory were at fault, events since last May 10 would jog it. That is the reason for the checkbook, the sight of which has wrought such a change in the vocabulary with which, along with arms, the Nazis hope to attain their ends.

Hemispheric Unity

The necessity of coordinating our present attitude toward the war in Europe with our long-standing policy of solidarity with the other nations of this hemisphere becomes increasingly urgent. For many years our country, under the banner of Pan-Americanism, has asked our neighbors to the south to join with us in a common international policy. Now that an emergency involving the welfare of all the American republics has arisen, it is of the utmost importance that these ties be maintained and, if possible, strengthened.

Current reports from London emphasize the importance of maintaining a common hemispheric policy so far as that is possible. It is said the British may ask the Americas for permission to set up a control station in the West Indies to prevent the shipment of contraband to Germany by way of Russia and Japan. Indications are that substantial quantities of some commodities from the New World are thus contributing to an Axis victory. The significance of these transactions is not minimized by the fact that American products are often consumed in Russia to replace Russian products sold to Germany.

Increasing purchases of strategic materials by the United States will help to cut off the supply of Latin-American commodities reaching the Axis. Some time ago we reached an agreement with Bolivia for the purchase of tin, and an arrangement regarding copper is being worked out. Far-flung plans for the "exclusive purchase" of various strategic supplies in Latin America are said to be under discussion. Such arrangements would at once contribute to our armament program, to the economic relief of our neighbors, and to the defense of Great Britain.

Much broader questions of policy, however, are involved in some of the steps the United States is preparing to take. The Administration is now committed to "full support of all those resolute peoples, everywhere, who are resisting aggression and are thereby keeping war away from our hemisphere." In other words, our policy has undergone a sweeping change since we joined in reaffirming "the status of general neutrality of the American republics" at the Panama conference in October, 1939. The foreign ministers at Panama resolved to prevent their territories from being used as bases for belligerent operations, and even to prevent the "fitting out, arming, or augmenting of the forces or armament of any ship or vessel to be employed in the service of one of the belligerents. . . ."

That understanding was supplemented but not basically modified by the later Havana agreement regarding possible changes in the status of European colonial possessions in this hemisphere. Both these meetings of American statesmen were held, moreover, in conformity with the Lima agreement for joint consultation when the peace of any American republic is threatened. Thus the situation clearly calls for further discussion of the relationship of the New World to the European conflict.

The disposition of the United States to act alone after taking the leadership in a policy of hemispheric solidarity has already caused some concern in South America. Indications are that most of the Latin-American countries are as concerned as we are over the menace of the aggressive triumvirate of powers which has spread chaos in the world. Undoubtedly they are eager to maintain the unity of purpose which was declared at Panama and Havana. But it is unlikely that such solidarity can be preserved if any one nation feels free to launch a new international policy without even summoning the representatives of the other governments for consultation. The Department of State ought to be giving serious thought to integration of "all-out" aid to Britain with our pledges to Latin America.

Homes For The Poor

A good deal of light is thrown upon Washington's low-rental housing problem by the annual report of the District Alley Dwelling Authority. The acute shortage of decent houses within reach of low incomes is now being relieved by the completion of ADA projects. Families are moving into simple but clean, well-ventilated, modern dwellings in two of the authority's projects, construction is well advanced on two others, bids have been asked on still another and four projects remain in the planning stage. Homes for 2,700 low-income families will be provided when this program is completed.

No one who has visited Washington's slums can doubt the necessity of continuing this venture in municipal reclamation. The ADA has uncovered some pitiful conditions in taking over ancient, dilapidated houses for demolition. In one instance it found 19 persons, including several families, living in a four-room hovel so exposed to the weather that its plumbing was frozen and broken. The crowding of whole families into a single room is an oft-repeated story.

For the time being interest is concentrated on housing for defense workers and the ADA is cooperating wholeheartedly in that work. No one should forget, however, that the defense program is also intensifying the misery of families of nondefense workers who are unable to find decent living quarters. While Washington's population has been growing rapidly in recent years, the Government has demolished many slums to make way for Federal buildings. From the long-time viewpoint this revival of blighted areas will be a great social gain. For the present, however, it leaves many families in an even more deplorable plight than they previously faced.

The work which the ADA is doing to relieve this situation and to replace occupied dwellings that are unfit for human habitation should continue with the least possible disturbance during the present emergency. So far as Washington is concerned, the emergency has greatly magnified the problem of providing decent low-rent homes for permanent residents as well as the newcomers.

Mold Of Form

Former Gov. Al Smith, a famous connoisseur in such matters, said the other day that New York's clothing designers now lead all the world in the fine art of draping the manly form. Already this shift of the center of sartorial elegance to the New World has had a salutary effect. The masterpieces now on view at the "Spring style and merchandising clinic" of the Retail Men's Wear Council of New York show a disposition to range pretty freely over the spectrum. The colors in spring suits include such morsels of pastel as "air blue," "dusty glen," "oatmeal" and "sand brown." As for the neckties, socks, gloves, scarves and like "accessories," they are a carnival in themselves.

But this, it seems, is only the beginning of a great revolution which will end by rescuing the male body from the drabness that has encompassed it these 150 years. Mr. William H. Howard, for example, asks why a man shouldn't have 30 suits hanging in his closet, as a woman has 30 dresses? "Why," he demands, should a man . . . be proud of the fact that his suit is ten years old? Why shouldn't he be ashamed?"

These are brave, nay, daring words. But they could have been carried a good deal further. Mr. Howard might have asked why men are content to cover themselves in such uninteresting fabrics as serges, worsteds, tweeds and gabardines, relinquishing to their women folk all the glory of silks, satins, ermine pelts and ostrich feathers? How was a sex once addicted to the chiton, the kilt, the tunic, the toga, the velvet gown with fur fringes and trailing liripipe, the silk-slashed doublet and ruff ever persuaded to encase itself in such illogical and unesthetic garments as the modern coat and pants.

Certainly those who say that the world has been going gradually to the dogs ever since the French Revolution have something of a point here. For it was about that time that men began hiding rather than adorning their charms. The silken breeches designed to show off legs were replaced by pantaloons designed to hide them. The brilliant colors intended to attract the female eye were replaced by drab and dismal hues designed only to enhance, by contrast, the splendors of feminine dress.

It is now high time for the male to regain his rightful place as the bird of brighter plumage. Who ever heard of a peacock that abandoned his tail because it made him feel conspicuous? Or of a lion that shaved off his mane because it made him too dignified? Or of a buck that cropped his antlers because he thought them ostentatious? But, alas, it is only in the privacy of the lodge meeting that the male of the human species now dares to be the glittering creature that God intended him to be.

SAILOR

He promised her to return again
After that first long trip
With the screaming wind at the cold, taut ropes;
Oh, the Gull was a slim, brave ship!

He came at last, and at his back
The black sea pounded fists
On granite sloped more steeply than
A wounded ship that lists.

No voice called out his name; no face
Turned there to meet his own,
And his eyes at his love's dark window pane
Were hollow and hard as stone.

He went back to the sea again,
But his quick step made no sound:
No wavering shadow trailed his heels
Over the moonlit ground . . .

"Pro-American"

Things have come to a pretty pass in this country when those in high authority brand as slackers and traitors all who speak against our entering the European war. Calling names never fazes the truth. Who is the traitor to America—he who uses his every influence to keep Americans in America and to keep America for Americans, or he who sends the flower of the youth of America to pour out their blood on another continent in trying to settle a dispute that has been going on for at least ten centuries? I am neither pro-German nor pro-Briton; I am pro-American. Neither am I an isolationist, for I believe in selling the implements of peace to all nations who can and will pay, but the implements of war to no nation. And when the way of peace comes, if America is not a participant, she can be the peacemaker.

I take the promises that our boys will not be sent to Europe and that no one will get rich off this war in the spirit in which they are made knowing that they cannot be kept even if made in sincerity. But the great American public has swallowed them, hook, line and sinker.

It is a generally accepted fact that the downfall of France was caused by the traitor politicians and not by the Fifth Columnists or appeasers. America's greatest danger today is not the war lords of Europe and Asia, nor their spies within our gates, nor the appeasers, the slackers and the peacemakers. The greatest danger to America is the war lords of America. These are the traitors that would trade our Nation for a handful of gold.

BRUCE McDONALD.
Inwood, Va., Jan. 14.

Disturbed at President

The strong and intemperate statement of President Roosevelt condemning the free expression of ideas about our obvious edging into the war by Senator Burton Wheeler is tantamount to a notice to every American citizen that he had better look out if he happens to be against the policies of the President. It is an attack on the citizen's right to express his views. After all, we are not at war yet. It is not yet treason to oppose war.

We are for Britain as against Germany. We will fight to the last, once Congress declares war. But we must not act inconsistently now. I am just a simple character, 27 years old, with three children, and I want to convince myself that I am fighting for the country of my youngsters. I am letting Congress do the convincing. I go with a gun on my shoulder when Congress says so. But not sooner. And I want my President to let the people think and express themselves freely. Some foolishly, others ignorantly, but all, I am sure, sincerely and patriotically.

I am frankly disturbed at the temper and hectoring that President Roosevelt has shown in the case of Senator Wheeler, who is honestly against war.

PETER H. NOONAN.
Chevy Chase, Jan. 14.

Proud of F. D. R.'s 'Fence'

Senator Burton K. Wheeler says that our President's policy would plow under the youth of America. I say that Wheeler's policy would allow Hitler to plow under all of us, as it has so many small nations of Europe and is now plowing, day and night, in England, one of the strongest nations on earth. I, for one, am proud to have two sons in the fence that F. D. Roosevelt is building around our America to keep out Hitler and his outlaw gang.

STEVE.
Washington, Jan. 15.

No Invasion, But . . .

In an editorial appearing in your issue of January 14, you chide Senator Wheeler for errors in geography in some of his isolationist arguments, but I think his position in some other aspects is much more untenable.

I listened to the discussion on aid to Great Britain on the forum of the air Sunday night and I was astonished that such men as Senator Wheeler and Mr. Flynn should display so little understanding of the true situation, and it seems incredible to me that they actually believe those things.

Their entire efforts seemed to be directed to showing that it would be impossible for Hitler to invade the United States. Of course, it is impossible for Hitler to invade the United States and there is no likelihood whatever that he will attempt it; and if the United States is willing to abandon the Monroe Doctrine, give up its foreign trade and have its stock of gold made worthless, then the United States need have nothing at all to fear from Hitler.

I would like to ask Senator Wheeler if he is willing that the country should give up all these things.

But, if the Government of the United States is not willing to give up the Monroe Doctrine and all trade with foreign nations, and if Hitler should succeed in crushing Great Britain, then you may be sure that we will have to fight the Nazis within a very few years and by that time it may not be impossible for Hitler to invade the United States, as there can be no doubt that Hitler will move in on South America the moment he disposes of Great Britain.

So, if eventually, why not now?

HARRY M. WALKER.

Executive Power

It is not surprising that a pert popinjay like Dewey or an obstinate and eccentric dissident like Hiram Johnson should oppose effective aid to Britain, but it is astonishing that men like Landon and Hoover should be unable to lay aside partisan prejudices and support the grant of necessary powers to the Executive in the present emergency.

There is nothing undemocratic in a temporary delegation to the Executive of power to act swiftly and effectively when almost instant decision is essential. Rome did it frequently in the flourishing days of that republic, and if there had been a French leader so clothed with authority, France might not be in its present situation.

The talk of Congress abdicating its powers is simply rot. It is making its powers effective through the only possible agency—the Executive. If they think it wise, by all means let them put a reasonable time limit on the delegation of power, but it should be made without delay.

Outraged

As the mother of a volunteer private in active service, I object to Senator Wheeler's tactics which, if he prevailed, would slow up the production on which our safety rests, and I resent more deeply than I can write his callous and brutal "plow under" expression.

Every parent of a son throughout the whole country—not excepting the State of Montana—must have experienced the same sense of shock and outrage.

Liked "Casanova's" Letter

Every day I read your editorial page and the letters to the editor for an inkling as to what goes on. For pure common sense and understanding, the letter signed "Casanova," on January 13, entitled "War No Act of God," was outstanding.

In a few sentences he revealed the whole sorry business for what it really is, comparing the situation to a family of pigs, all trying to get to the trough at once, and when the scramble becomes too intense, the big pigs find it necessary to eliminate some of the smaller ones. Truly the people who are now trying to hog the world's markets are no idealists making the world safe for democracy.

It is said that by withholding aid to Britain we are helping Hitler, but it is not true. Our aid will only prolong the war, so why dissipate our surpluses abroad? By using them at home to improve the health, education and housing of our own people, we can be of more assistance to the suffering people of Europe—by our example, that democracy really can work. That sort of thing makes more sense to me than this hysterical imitation of the Fascist techniques of Europe. We have their own example that it only leads to inevitable chaos.

JANE LOCKWOOD.
Washington, Jan. 14.

"Fact Blindness"

What a pity that one of our Senators should be so afflicted with "fact blindness." Or is it "fact blindness?" Perhaps, rather a case of frustration or a craving for the limelight, as Senator Wheeler hysterically exclaims on the radio and in the press that there is no danger from Hitler and his thirst for world domination. Even though Hitler has clearly stated his plan not only in "Mein Kampf," but many times since. Thus he stated: "I shall not even need to destroy them one by one. Selfishness and lack of foresight will prevent each one fighting until it is too late." Also that the Nazi movement "will establish a state which must one day become ruler of the earth."

This condition would virtually be the "hell" Senator Wheeler refers to and which Americans wish to avert through the courage and wise leadership of our President and Secretary of State. And to think a man in as responsible a position as Senator Wheeler should stoop to use the lowest type of emotional appeal by engendering mass fear. Verily, does he try to fulfill Hitler's propaganda for destroying the democracies—for fear destroys morale, while sheer valor is a force. We must feel that the great majority of Americans come from that line who for freedom pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor.

On Opposition

I am horrified at the statement of Senator Wheeler and can hardly believe a responsible statesman or politician would make such an insane remark.

I had hoped that after the election opponents of the Administration would use sane language but I am certainly disappointed. If we so freely abuse and accuse our great men and leade who are responsible for our Government, chosen by the free choice of the people, how can we expect the younger generation to respect and obey their Government?

These irresponsible Senators and Congressmen should be made to understand that they are harming the country by their outspoken nonsense while they are professing to defend it. Opposition in a democracy can be useful and necessary and it can also be very harmful and dangerous and I say, Mr. Wheeler, remember the opposition in France. ERIAN BOUTROS.

David At The Drugstore

IT IS ALWAYS surprising to find how odd the familiar things of one's daily life appear to a stranger. To 10-year-old David, just come to us from England, a visit to one of the chain drugstores proved a most puzzling experience. The only clue to his bewilderment is the memory of my first attempt to shop at an English drugstore.

The day after Henry and I arrived in London I decided to buy some stationery.

"There's a drugstore on the next corner," said Henry.

I couldn't see it, so I stopped a big policeman who happened along.

"Drugatore?" The bobby's comfortable smile implied that he was accustomed to Americans and their funny little ways. "Yes, ma'am. What you mean is a chemist's. That's one just across the road."

A bell gave a discreet 'ping' as I opened the door into an empty shop with an atmosphere that was positively cathedral-like. Pale sunlight filtered through two immense blue and amber flagons which stood in the window. High ceilings and a faint aromatic odor added to the effect. Large sponges in a glass case, and orderly rows of labeled bottles in glass-enclosed shelves were the only thing to suggest that this was a "chemist's."

From somewhere in the rear a thin elderly man glided forward noiselessly. His few hairs were carefully plastered down over his almost bald head, and in his striped trousers and black morning coat he looked like a diplomat from the State Department. Bowing, he asked my pleasure.

I mentioned, rather doubtfully, that I wanted to buy some writing paper.

He smiled. "I fancy what you are looking for is a stationer's, madam. You will find one over there at the next corner." He escorted me to the door, and bowed me out as if I had done him a special favor.

The long-forgotten incident was recalled by a remark of David's.

"What you need is some manganese dioxide," said David, looking over Charles' chemistry set. "You can get it at any chemist's. If we have that and one or two other things we can do some good experiments."

Charles beamed. It is fun for him to have a boy of his own age to play with. (David, who is well informed and companionable, is proving a most satisfactory addition to our one-child household.)

Charles had long since exhausted the possibilities of his chemistry set, but David apparently has a number of new ideas. "Mr. Green, who had the chemist's shop at home, showed me how to do several experiments. He was very obliging. Once he even let me use his pestle and mortar."

"When we go downtown tomorrow," said Charles, "couldn't we for a treat have lunch at the drug store, and get our chemicals there afterwards?"

Charles loves to eat at a lunch counter, and it saves time, so just before noon we pushed our way into one of the large downtown stores.

David seemed a little overwhelmed by the noise, the lights, and the confusion before we finally found three places together at the counter. But after the boys had ordered their lunch he began to look around with interest.

As the boys ate their chicken salad, David kept a watchful eye on the attendants. Above the clatter of the dishes, their voices could be heard intoning "one ham on" and all the rest of the curious jargon they use in ordering dishes.

A girl slid into a seat nearby and gave her order. "One chow mein", shouted the attendant.

"What did he say?" David asked.

"Chow mein. That's Chinese," Charles explained.

David was plainly mystified. "I noticed they weren't speaking English," he said, "but they don't look like Chinese to me."

"Of course they aren't." Charles paused to finish the last scrap of his chicken salad. "They're all American. Can't you see their names on those little badges on their coats? "He pointed out the gilt-edge labels with which the drug store tags all its employes, like a gardener his seedlings.

The red-headed boy who was waiting on them brought their chocolate sundaes. David, always polite, slid his eye over the tag, and said, "Oh, thank you, Mr. Sheean."

Mr. Sheean stopped dead in his tracks. "Don't try any of that fresh stuff here, young feller," he said truculently.

That puzzled David for a moment, but the delights of the chocolate sundae soon claimed his undivided attention. Here, at any rate, was something he could understand and enjoy.

"What about our chemicals now?" Charles asked, when at last the sundaes were nothing but a memory.

David looked doubtful. "Are you sure they sell chemicals here?"

"Can't you read, dumbunny?" Charles pointed to the spot at the back of the store, where, high between two piles of One Day Sale Specials—aspirin, bicarbonate of soda, dish mops and toasters—hung a red and blue electric sign: Drug Department. All prescriptions filled by registered pharmacists."

They stopped to look at a badminton set, examined the Wild West yarns on the book counter, and toyed with the electric waffle irons before they finally got to the back of the store. A large gilt-edged sign on the counter announced: "Dr. Finkelsmits on duty."

"Here we are," said Charles.

"We want some manganese dioxide, please." David told a pale young man labeled Mr. Pincus. Mr. Pincus said not a word, but vanished behind the pile of dish mops and toasters and reappeared with Dr. Finkelsmits himself.

"Have you any manganese dioxide?" David asked him.

Dr. Finkelsmits looked the two small boys over coldly. "Don't carry it," he said firmly.

David was disappointed but apologetic. "I'm so sorry we troubled you," he said. "I was afraid this might not be the right place. What we are really looking for is a chemist's, where they sell chemicals, you know. I wonder if you could tell us where to find one?"

He still does not understand why I dragged him away so hurriedly, before Dr. Finkelsmits had a chance to reply. V. K. LIBBY.

Complex Measure

Simplicity Lost In Lease-Lend Bill

THE ORIGINAL idea of the lease-lend bill was simple, easy for the public to understand. It was that the Government of the United States should loan money, or extend credit, to Britain. It was in this form the suggestion first arose; in this form it first became familiar to the public. It was said—and it was and is true—that Britain is coming toward the end of her ability to pay cash. Hence it was proposed the United States Government should give Britain a loan of money or credit, so that she could continue to buy supplies in the United States.

For carrying out this purpose the simplest way, as the average man would assume, would be just to let Britain have the money or credit. Set up in the Treasury, or some Government agency, a fund available for Britain. Then, let Britain go on buying supplies, precisely as she now buys them; and in paying for the supplies, give a draft on the United States Treasury. This could have been accomplished by the simplest possible act of Congress, a bill appropriating the amount of money to be loaned, and fixing the conditions, including security or no security.

BY THIS METHOD, everything would have gone as at present. Britain would pay for the planes with an order on the American Treasury. Britain would own the planes. Britain would do with the planes whatever she chooses to do with them. Britain would wholly control the situation, and be wholly responsible for it. Our President and our Government would have no more to do with it than they now have. Their relation to the purchase of supplies by Britain would be just what it now is—merely to see that the British purchases do not too seriously interfere with supplies for our own Army. What would have happened would be merely this: Britain, instead of buying a limited quantity of goods with her cash, would buy a greater quantity of goods with the credit given her by our Government.

Doubtless the simplicity of this method is too simple; there may be reasons for not doing it this way—well-informed persons say there are. But the great merit of this method is that everybody would have understood it. Because the country overwhelmingly favors help to Britain, little or no objection would have been raised to this easily understood method.

BUT WHEN the suggestion reached the form of a bill, it was extremely complex, so much so as to mystify the average man. In the final stage, now before Congress, Britain is not to go on buying goods from American manufacturers as at present. Britain as a direct buyer drops out of the picture. It is the President of the United States who is now to buy the goods from American manufacturers, and thereafter turn them over to Britain, or some other country in the President's discretion. The President (through the War and Navy Departments, of course) will do the buying of the goods, he will control the goods when made, and he will dispose of the goods as he sees fit. He can turn them over to what country he chooses—Britain, Greece, China, even neutral countries. He can turn them over on such terms as he chooses.

This is a decided change—from Britain as buyer to the President as buyer, from Britain as owner to the President as official owner, from Britain controlling the destination to be made of the supplies to the President controlling it. That change gives great power to the President. It gives him power within the United States, over manufacturers and the conditions of manufacture. It gives him power abroad. He will be able to say to what nation any item of supplies shall go, and make conditions as to how the supplies shall be used. This is a large power; it is power, if the President should choose, to take a hand in the direction of the world-wide war against the Axis.

FOR HAVING the bill written this way—instead of a simple loan or gift of money or extension of credit to Britain—there are some reasons. But it does confer great power on the President. Because much of Congress was already disquieted about previous grants of power to the President, they will be hesitant about making this additional great grant. If the President can see his way to assent to changes in the bill, in the direction of restoring it toward the original idea of a loan or credit to Britain, he will facilitate passage of the bill. He can facilitate it further by assenting to a time limit on whatever powers the bill grants him, and assenting to other reasonable limitations.

The people of the United States, by an overwhelming majority, favor aid to Britain. A majority of Congress favors it. But the project could be lost through unfortunate handling of it.

Shuffle in Production Office To Expand Biggers' Authority

By Alfred Friendly,
Post Staff Writer

Changes and clarifications in the organization of the new Office of Production Management, some of which may be announced today, will result in authority for John D. Biggers, Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. president, it was learned yesterday.

The plan presently contemplated, it was said, provides that Biggers, appointed head of the OPM production division by executive order, will also take over the functions of the industrial materials division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, formerly under the direction of E. R. Stettinius, jr.

Another development expected in the near future is the creation of a labor division in the OPM, to take its place alongside the three present divisions of production, priorities and purchases.

Other prospective assignments:

William L. Batt, executive of SKF Industries, Inc., will head the industrial materials section of Biggers' production division. Batt is deputy commissioner of the Defense Commission's production division.

Roy Jackson, of the United States Steel Export Co., will become budget and administrative officer of OPM.

William H. McReynolds, Presidential assistant, will serve as liaison officer between OPM and other Government agencies.

Through absorption of the functions and probably also the staffs of the Defense Commission's production and industrial materials divisions, Biggers' unit will probably become the largest of the OPM's divisions. Further expansion of the present industrial sections in each division is contemplated; the group concerned with aircraft production, for example, is expected to grow from its present small staff to a 75-man unit.

Another prospective development is the appointment of a labor representative on each of the specific industrial committees set up under the OPM priorities division, headed by Stettinius. A significant question, apparently still undecided, is which group will be responsible for naming the labor member of each committee.

According to one report, it is planned to leave the selection to Sidney Hillman, associate director of OPM. Hillman is said to feel that a separate labor division in OPM is also necessary.

Hillman is currently in Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore, recovering from an attack of grippe, suffered ten days ago. His condition was reported yesterday as "good," but he is expected to remain in the hospital for another week.

On materialization of the prospective changes, a large part of the duties of the Defense Commission will have been absorbed by the OPM. Remaining with the commission will be advisory divisions on price, State and local cooperation, consumers, agriculture, transportation and research and statistics. The last-named bureau, it was indicated yesterday, may soon be moved to the Office of Emergency Management.

Work of Colored In Records Office To Be Dramatized

The little-known fact that the Office of the Recorder of Deeds here is administered by Washington Negroes will be dramatized by Cardozo High School students in the Heroes of Democracy broadcast at 1:30 p. m. today.

The broadcast is one of a series sponsored by The Post and WJSV. The office of deeds recorder has since colonial times been under the supervision of Negroes and what their work has been and how they have performed it will be a part of the drama.

One phase will consist of an interview with Dr. William J. Thompkins, the present recorder, and members of his staff.

Hitlerism

IT MUST BE perfectly clear to most Americans now that, although the enemy is, in a word, Hitlerism, some phases of Hitlerism are abhorrent, but others are either in operation here or in process of adoption. We may call them New Dealism or Democracy, but there are points of resemblance.

For one thing, our Government, which has had the indorsement of two reelections, believes in a strong national and nationalistic authority at the top, supported down through the political and social grades by groups and individuals dependent on the favor of the National Government.

We have had our local and State political organizations drawing sustenance from the National Capital in the form of relief and grants which enabled the minor leaders to hold their people in line. Congressmen were given to understand that favors for their respective communities would be weighed in the scales against their cooperation—a practice which was intended to and did make tin cup mendicants of many of them.

APPOINTEES selected for administrative jobs have been picked not for their ability alone, although some have been, incidentally, able men, but for their ideological regularity. It was not enough that a man be a good citizen. He has also to sympathize with the New Deal, which is a philosophy that never has been formulated and therefore may be anything that the Administration happens to favor at a given time.

It is not enough that a man administer a law, such as the Wagner Act, as written, and with a conscientious regard for the rights of the citizen who is an employer and stockholder. He must give his interpretation of the law a twist to the left, possibly with an honest intention to help the worker but with the probable political effect of tying into the New Deal the two big organizations which claim the status of sub-Government and have their own courts and punishing powers and the power to tax the workers.

IN THE ATTITUDE of the National Government toward private industry the resemblance appears again. It is not exactly a parallel, but the resemblance is there, and it must be remembered that our Government has not yet gone as far as it intends to go. Otherwise President Roosevelt would have been content to retire after his second term, satisfied that his New Deal had been completed at last and leave the operation of it to other hands.

Now the emergency of war intervenes to hasten the program or trend of the New Deal, but even had there been no war the intention plainly was to bring industry more and more under Government control and bring Government more openly into the role of labor's boss, with the power to give orders. In the war emergency, now, industry will be commandeered, with the ownership and management both subdued, and labor will be employed in fact by the Government, although nominally by private interests.

HITLERISM is all these things, plus the personal denunciation of reluctant individuals from on high, and the evasion of laws by twisted and cunning argument, with which we are familiar and which is less hygienic from the moral standpoint than open violation, because it sets the people an example of shysterism and confuses them in their everyday problems of right and wrong.

It is not a happy thought, but if Uncle Sam should take an honest look in the mirror he would discover on his upper lip faint sprigs of a Chaplin mustache. And his best friends won't tell him, but to leeward he gives off unmistakable whiffs of the Muscovite's B. O.

Defense Housing

By Turner Rose

Small Office Performs Big Task

IN ALL the complicated defense program, charted some weeks ago by The Post, probably the most easily observed results are accomplished by the Division of Defense Housing Coordination. The purpose of this office is to meet the need for housing facilities of enlisted men, civilian employes of the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission, and industrial defense labor. The story of how its task is accomplished through private enterprise and existing governmental agencies is that of a big job performed by a small staff.

The entire paid staff of the division here in Washington consists of Charles F. Palmer, coordinator; Carl Henry Monsees, executive assistant; Herbert S. Colton, legal adviser; Jacob Crane, assistant coordinator, and five other men. In the field there are a principal coordinator and five regional coordinators. Added to these is an impressive list of consultants and advisers.

As the Office of the Defense Housing Coordinator, this staff was under the authority of the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense. Early this month, however, the President dealt himself a stronger hand. First he created the Office for Production Management within the framework of his own liaison organization, the Office for Emergency Management. Then on January 11, to see that housing kept pace with the speed-up in industry expected under O. P. M., he issued a further executive order: "There is hereby established within the Office for Emergency Management of the Executive Office of the President, a Division of Defense Housing Coordination . . . The Coordinator of Defense Housing . . . shall perform his duties and functions under the direction and supervision of the President and shall report to the President through the Liaison Officer for Emergency Management." The effect of this was to change the authority under which the office works.

THE CHART on this page was devised by an editorial staff member and a staff artist of The Post to show how one division of the defense program operates in getting things done. The chart, however, takes up the story only at the point where a housing plan for any given locality is put into effect. Back of this plan is a careful study of needs and the proper ways to meet them.

Information on housing needs comes from the Army and Navy, the Defense Commission, Federal housing agencies, local organizations and any number of other sources. In fact, anybody at all may report a need for defense housing. Whenever necessary to supplement its knowledge, the division requests a survey by one of its own regional coordinators, by the Work Projects Administration, or any other agency that is available.

Once the need for housing is determined, all possible alternatives to new housing are studied. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board and Federal Housing Administration furnish statistics on the number of old units which can be modernized for use by defense personnel. The number of suitable housing units vacant in the community is calculated. Then types and locations of new housing are recommended.

The next question to be answered is whether private enterprise or the Government should build the homes. The intention of the coordinator is never to spend Federal money when private operators can and will do the work. In this connection he considers the local real estate market, present and expected future development and the availability of construction materials and labor. He listens to the advice of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Housing Administration, who are in close touch with private operators, as to which projects these operators like and may wisely undertake.

The program evolved in this manner is reviewed by various authorities, including the service reporting the need, the agencies which would execute the recommended construction, and agencies which can gauge the feasibility of participation by private capital. Thereafter the coordinator issues a "locality report" which lists the numbers, types and locations of housing units to be constructed in the community. The report usually segregates certain portions of the work for private enterprise. The remainder is distributed to the governmental agencies considered best fitted for the undertaking.

THE HEAVY concentration on loan agencies in the chart reflects the desire to avoid spending Federal money outright when private enterprise can be encouraged to do the work. The Defense Homes Corporation was set up when the President allocated $10,000,000 out of his emergency funds to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The object of Defense Homes Corporation is to provide equity capital in combination with FHA mortgage insurance, where private investors are hesitant, but projects are regarded as self-liquidating. The equity thereafter is for sale to private interests.

In the field of construction by the Government, the Federal Works Agency carries on through both the Public Buildings Administration and the United States Housing Authority whatever work the President orders under the Lanham Act. This measure authorizes $150,000,000, to be spent wherever the President finds an acute housing shortage which would not be made up by private capital. (It was under this act that the President recently ordered some special construction in Washington.) For Army and Navy housing, $100,000,000 has been appropriated. The Navy is doing its own work but the Army has transferred most of its funds to be administered under the Lanham Act.

COOPERATION has been the mainstay of Housing Coordination, since its authority to command has been far from complete. There has been no evidence of disinclination to cooperate, especially since the several agencies frequently were in need of a coordinated program even before the present emergency. The division's new proximity to the President undoubtedly will lend added prestige to quiet any discord, and in the last resort it has the duty of recommending any legislation which will expedite its program.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Luke And Elmer

Luke—What's come over America? Can't a rich man turn burglar, swindler or plain thief any more without getting into any real trouble?

Elmer—Evidently not.

Luke—It's un-American. Things have got to a point where a wealthy embezzler can't get off any longer by just producing proof he has two yachts and a stable of polo ponies to look after.

Elmer—A millionaire who goes crooked can't even get the dicks to wait while he finishes an important golf match. They don't let him complete his scheduled social engagements or anything. It's pitiful.

Luke—You read of a crooked moneybags being accused of something in the morning and by night you see pictures of him hand-cuffed and on the way to the stir. It don't seem right to me when a big shot with wealth, position and a lot of swell write-ups in the success magazines can't steal a few million cocoanuts without being treated like he had done something wrong.

Elmer—The world is sure changing; I remember when a man wasn't rated a top-notch financial genius if he had never been suspected of a little piracy here and there.

Luke—About the worst handicap he could be under in the old days was a rep for honesty. Now even his fellow directors and stockholders turn on him at the first indictment. It ain't fair.

Elmer—What gets me is the way those birds give up when indicted. They don't even put up a bold front, denounce the district attorney as a political tool or put on a good show. They go into court weeping and whimpering for a break.

Luke—They act just as scared as if they had swiped nuthin' more than a Vienna roll.

Elmer—It kind of tears at your heart to see the heads of great financial organizations throwing aside all self assurance, breaking down at the first sight of nippers and presenting a worse appearance than some poor egg nabbed for putting slugs in salted peanut machines.

Luke—It seems only yesterday these plutocrats hardly noticed a warrant. They just smiled for the newsreels, turned the whole matter over to their lawyers and went on with the regatta.

Elmer—The public used to get a little exasperated at the futility of ever bothering to make an arrest; it resented the waste of money involved.

Peace Conferences

By Prof. Harold J. Laski

The Temper Of Two Recent Meetings

(Editor's note—This is another in a series of weekly wirelessed articles from London by Prof. Harold J. Laski, noted author and professor of political science at London University.)

London.

TWO CONFERENCES met last week-end in England the contrast between which was, I think, of extraordinary interest. The first was called a People's Convention, and its real inspiration was the Communist Party. It explained the need for a "People's Government," it insisted there must be an alliance with the Soviet Union; and it demanded a large number of drastic social reforms. But the key to its whole attitude was the argument that if a "People's Government" were to offer the German people peace without annexation or indemnities, they would desert Hitler and we could at long last enter the Promised Land.

It was very interesting to hear this view put forward by Communist leaders like Palme Dutt and Harry Pollitt. It is less than 18 months since they were protesting passionately against appeasement. It is less than 18 months, also, since Mr. Pollitt—then the Earl Browder of Great Britain—was warning the left against "mouthing revolutionary phrases" and explaining that there was no safety for the workers unless Hitler was overthrown. It now appears that a "People's Government" can secure something which 18 years of international agitation in Italy and 7 years of agitation in Germany have not secured—an organized movement which will break fascism into pieces.

I DO NOT KNOW what evidence Mr. Dutt and Mr. Pollitt have for their conclusion. Dictatorships usually fall in the aftermath of military defeat—that was true of both Napoleon and Nicholas II. If the British government offered such a peace to Hitler on the facts it would not only represent a great victory for him; it would be a victory for a man who has never yet kept any agreement he ever made. That such a peace is possible at once if naziism is overthrown and the government which succeeds it agrees to restore freedom to the countries fascism has conquered, is common ground among all parties. I do not understand why Mr. Dutt or Mr. Pollitt imagine it as otherwise. In the years of "appeasement" neither of them argued that fascism, whether in its Italian or German form, could be overthrown unless its military power was broken. Neither of them brought forward a single argument to show that the situation has changed.

The convention talked at great length of what a "People's Government" would do; but there was surprising silence upon the not unimportant problem of how it was to be secured. It cannot be obtained from the House of Commons; the by-elections do not suggest that the extreme left would win over a handful of seats. I believe that Messrs. Dutt and Pollitt, if they were straightforward, would have to tell us frankly that they expect to achieve their aim as Lenin and Trotsky did in 1917. Do they seriously imagine that while Englishmen are fighting one another, Hitler would stand by with folded arms? Both they and Mr. Pritt, former Labor M. P., whose hostility to the official Labor Party gives him the position of fellow traveler No. 1 among the British Communists, protested loudly their hatred of Hitler. How they imagine their policy could have any other result than to present him with an overwhelming victory I do not profess to know. But it is an interesting comment on their loud assertion that democracy is dead in Britain, that not only a conference should be held to expose the virtues of revolutionary defeatism on the Russian model of 1917 as a way to peace, but also that the organizers should be able to announce a great campaign to win support for their views.

THE OTHER CONFERENCE was at Oxford and was held under the auspices of the National Peace Council, a federation of peace societies varying from conservative bodies like the League of Nations Union to extreme organizations like the Peace Pledge Union. Members of the conference were mostly, I think, Liberals or Socialists in outlook. The outstanding character of the conference was the complete absence of any word which implied hostility to the German people. Here were some 250 men and women, many of whom had been bombed continuously and all of whom as social workers, clergymen and teachers had come into grim contact with results of the bombing, and the one assurance for which they were searching was that there should be no attempt to punish the German masses for the sins of their rulers. That was, I think, a heartening spectacle.

For all of them, too, it was clear that a military defeat of Germany was not enough; they wanted a program for victory which was related to the making of a better social and international order. I was particularly impressed by the immense importance most of the speakers attached to American cooperation in building the post-war world; and not the least to the further fact that they stated again and again that the only way in which we could fairly expect American cooperation was by proving we had begun that task of building a better world as proof that we deserved what contribution American idealism can bring to its fulfillment.

THE ATTITUDE of almost everyone there was extraordinarily moving in its understanding of two things. The first was the immense importance they attached to civil and religious freedom; the second was their emphasis that neither of these could be attained without economic security and increasing the standard of life for the masses. It would be inaccurate to say there was agreement about ways and means; pacifist societies, in war as in peace, have each their special nostrum to expound and each is a little amazed that it does not appear obvious to the others. But I wish I could convey in words the intensity of the general conviction that this important body of social workers displayed that the vital business of this generation is to retake the ethical foundations of our civilization and their sense that the task is primarily one of remaking economic foundations. "We all agree," said the chairman, a distinguished Nonconformist clergyman, "that the key to international peace is social justice."

I REMARK, TOO, that such conferences as these could today—it is a fact as lamentable as it is significant—only be held in English-speaking countries. No doubt there is much that is wrong with their social and economic life. But I confess that the spectacle in wartime, whether in a quasi-Communist conference in London or peace societies at Oxford, of some 2,000 men and women able to discuss first principles, determined to criticize the war cabinet, insistent on laying bare every error and crime of their country's policy and assuming that this examination is an inescapable obligation—this is a heartening spectacle. It is evidence of a vital kind that public opinion is a living thing and that citizenship means to these people something more than passive acceptance of the orders of their rulers. So long as this temper prevails, so long the reality of British democracy is, I think, beyond the power even of former Ambassador Kennedy to deny.

I take them both as proof of the degree to which every class of the community here is searching its heart for the road to a constructive peace. And it is worth noting that while in London Communist speakers saw no hope save in a catastrophe, at Oxford speaker after speaker bore testimony to the readiness of every section of opinion for great changes. If we can maintain that temper in the next years I do not think we need fear for the future.

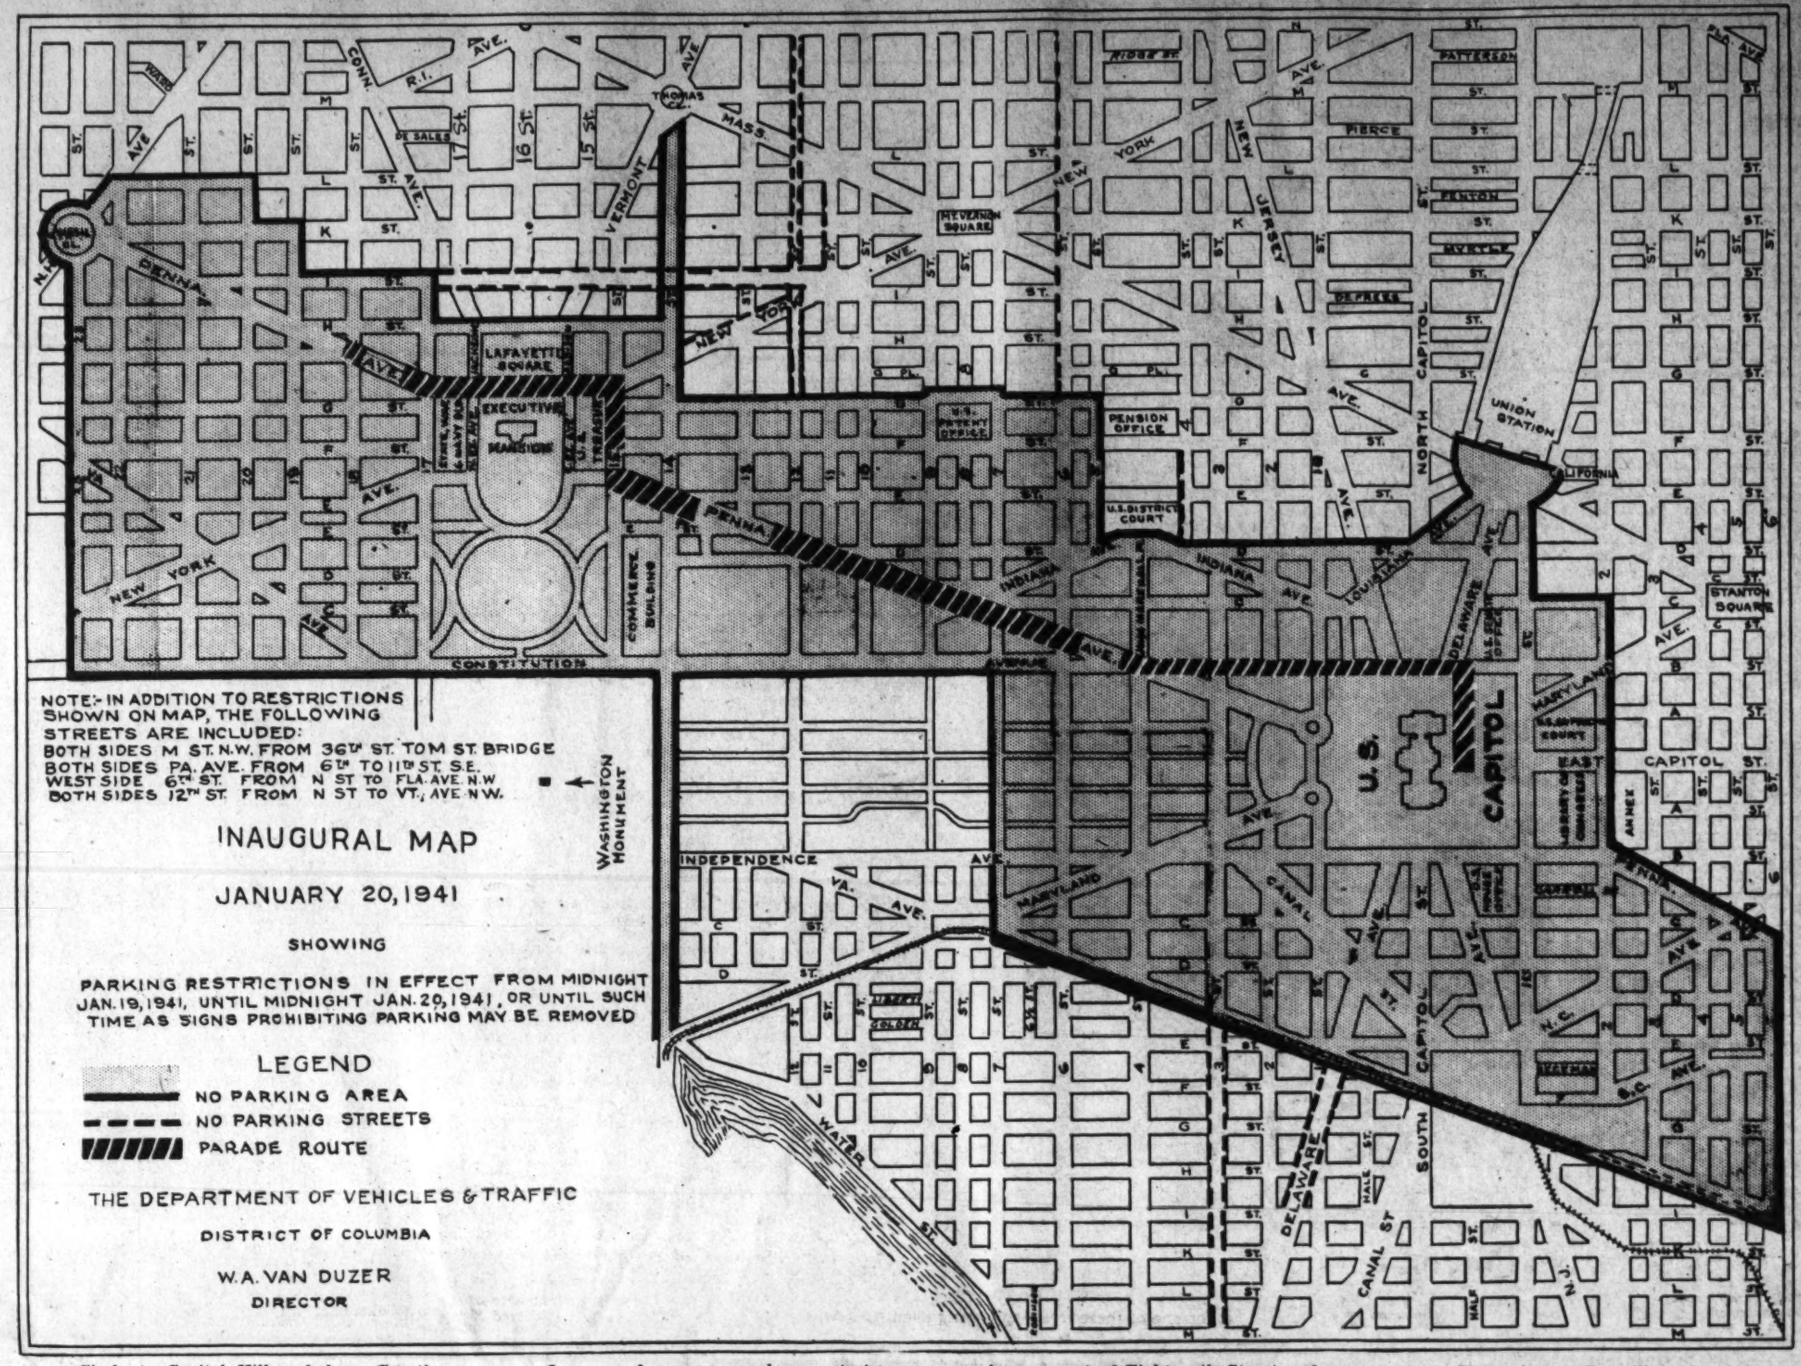
Motorists—Here's What to Do and Not to Do Inauguration Day

By Howard Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Elaborate arrangements have been completed for the safety and convenience of local and visiting motorists Inauguration Day. Special traffic regulations will be in force and extra police details will be on the streets beginning today to keep mishaps and congestion from marring the festivities.



Timely Tips . . .

Don't bring your car downtown unless absolutely necessary.

Local drivers exercise extra caution because of the large number of out-of-town motorists who will be unfamiliar with District regulations.

If you do bring your car downtown, don't overload it with guests so as to impair the driver's vision and prevent him from reacting promptly in emergencies.

If you plan to park anywhere adjacent to the central area, get down early to avoid being trapped by the 10:30 a. m. deadline for closing streets.

Take your time. Don't rush or drive recklessly—even if you miss the parade.

Extend every courtesy to visiting motorists.

Both District and out-of-town motorists were warned by police officials yesterday against attempts to cross the city through the downtown congested area after 10:30 a. m. Monday. Virtually all downtown Washington will be barred to traffic except "official" cars after that hour, it was announced.

All parking will be prohibited for a 24-hour period beginning at midnight Sunday in the area from Washington Circle to Capitol Hill and from Constitution Avenue as far north as L Street Northwest.

Steel cables will go up along the parade route from the Capitol to Eighteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest promptly at 10:30 a. m. on Monday and will remain up until the last unit has passed the Presidential reviewing stand sometime after 3 p. m.

In cases of emergency where motorists are forced to cross the parade route provisions for such crossings have been made at Delaware Avenue Northeast, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Fourteenth Streets; Madison Place, Jackson Place, Seventeenth Street and Treasury Place Northwest.

All street car service on Pennsylvania Avenue east of Eighteenth Street and on Fifteenth Street Northwest will be suspended at 11:15 a. m., not to be resumed until after the parade is over. This also applies to street cars crossing the line of march.

Streets adjacent to the Capitol in Southwest and Southeast sections of the city—where the parade will form—will be closed to traffic at 9:30 a. m.

Pedestrian traffic will be permitted to cross the parade route at any point where such crossings do not interefere with passage of the procession—except between Jackson and Madison Places Northwest, where only persons having admission tickets to the Court of Freedom will be allowed to enter.

Twelve first-aid stations will be placed at strategic points along the route.

Girl Scouts Decorated; Bid Farewell to Leader

Eighteen green-uniformed Girl Scouts marched into Hine Junior High School last night to a Court of Awards where they received "profficiency badges" at the rate of nine per girl and bid farewell to their leader.

One by one the members of Troop 114 stepped forward to receive their badges, won after earnest toil in every phase of their organization's activities.

Some Scouts garnered as many as ten badges last night for recent efforts and few won less than two or three. Among the awards were 11 "first class badges," highest honor for troop members.

Highlight of the evening was the presentation of a "Thank You Badge" to Mrs. Florence M. Hoopes, retiring leader of the troop. Mrs. Hoopes beamed her appreciation. The medal is the highest award for adult members of the Girl Scout organization.

Troop 18 Is 10 Years Old

Camouflage Is Suggested for Sewing Machine

May Function as Gaily Decorative Dressing Table

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

"MY BEDROOM is a problem," writes Mrs. R. A. C. "I would like to make slipcovers and curtains but am perplexed as to just what to choose. The wall paper is a powder blue and the woodwork ivory. What shade of blue would you say for the bows that tie these curtains back?

"I also want to do something about a dressing table—preferably to camouflage my sewing machine. It might or might not be placed in front of the windows. I have a straight back armless chair that needs a slip cover. What would you suggest as to color, material and style for both the dressing table and chair. I prefer tailored slip covers, and in recommending colors do not hesitate to suggest light shades where desired because I put zippers on my slip covers and wash them quite often and find it is well worth the effort. Our bedroom furniture is walnut, the bedspread is light blue cotton with chenille tufting of flower colors."

Sheer Curtains

Your room is already off to a very good start! I should like to see the curtains here in sheer white material—voile or net or some very lovely fabric that falls softly. Then I should tie them back with bows in blue just slightly deeper than the blue ground of your wall paper.

About the sewing machine—I am wondering whether it would not be most practical to have a shelf table built of simple rough lumber under which your sewing machine can slide when not in use. This shelf can be covered as a dressing table with a skirt. Such an arrangement will save you a lot of trouble in moving things off the top of the dressing table each time you want to use the machine. As for the material for this I think that a plain blue quilted chintz would be the most interesting.

Decorative Effect

You could use this for the top of the dressing table; then have the skirt made straight with a circular flare rather than gathered. You can finish this at the top with a scalloped collar in slightly deeper blue chintz, and then bind the whole thing around the bottom with the deeper blue chintz. This quilting job can be done on your sewing machine, you know, if you have a quilter attachment.

The straight back armless chair might also be covered with a slip cover also of the quilted chintz. Personally I like the idea of these monotine blues and whites for the room, but if you feel that you want more contrast you could use yellow in the flower design of your paper instead of the blue as I have recommended.

Compromise Skirt For New Silhouette

Hollywood, Calif.—Because Priscilla Lane hates to give up her bouffant skirts in favor of the more current "straight and narrow" silhouette, Howard Shoup has solved the problem by doing an evening gown in a soft, clinging material but with as full a skirt as ever. This is in a dull-surfaced black crepe with cap sleeves of ice blue grosgrain and a double-ribbon sash of the same. For dash Priscilla wears one of the new tie necklaces in black velvet strung with pearl flowers tinted a delicate blue.

'Divinely Slim'

Find Inspiration In Poetry

I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.
—HENRY.

INSPIRATION for the new year—these brave words from William Ernest Henley's poem "Invictus," heartening us to face the future with high resolution.

What priceless messages of understanding, comfort the world's loved poems have to offer!"

Often, on humdrum shut-in days, you'll turn to the inspiring "To Althea, From Prison" by Richard Lovelace. Remember the lines—

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for a hermitage—"

And what infectious gaiety for lonely hours in the joyous love lyric of Christopher Marlowe, "The Passionate Shepherd to His Love." It begins:

"Come live with me and be my Love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
Or woods or steepy mountain yields."

Then there's "Abou Ben Adhem" by Leigh Hunt, breathing friendliness for humankind.

". . . Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said:
'I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men.'"

"Lady be natural" should be the theme of dresses in the spring evening scene. The buxom tight waist and the fitted and flared silhouette are definitely out. There is a return to the slender outline with an easy soft, supple look from gathers that hang straight down from the shoulders. And if you are in the market for one of these fresh-appearing evening gowns there are other features to watch for:

Surface decoration above waist—pleats, shirring, yolks, embroidery and quilting.
Tiers of lace and pleated ruffles on skirts.
Draped capelets and cap sleeves.
Prints blazing with paillettes and flowers.
Strapless lace gowns.
Skirts short in front and long in back.
Drapery above and below the waistline.

Hominy Ring Plays Dual Role

HOMINY really has a dual personality when it is made into a ring and served with Italian sauce. It is a dish to help the budget along and also delicious and attractive enough to be served to fastidious guests.

There is hominy to be had in cans and hominy grits to be bought in packages. This recipe is for using hominy grits. Follow these directions for making this thrifty, flavorsome and attractive dish.

Hominy Ring, Italian Sauce

Bring 4 cups milk to a boil and add slowly 1 cup hominy grits and ¾ teaspoon salt. Stir until thickened, then cook over hot water for 1 hour. Stir in 3 tablespoons grated cheese and pack into a buttered quart size ring mold. Chill until stiff. To serve, place in a moderate oven for 20 minutes. Unmold and fill with ½ pound fresh mushrooms sauteed in butter. Pour over the ring the following sauce:

Italian Sauce—Brown thoroughly ½ pound ground beef in small amount of fat. Add 2 tablespoons onion flakes or chopped onions, 1 can condensed tomato soup, ½ teaspoon paprika, ¼ teaspoon sugar and cook slowly for 10 minutes. Serve over ring.

Nursing of Baby Is Advised

Three reasons why every mother should try to nurse her baby are given in a new folder issued by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, under the title "Mother! Nurse Your Baby!"

The first reason is that breast-fed babies are often healthier than bottle-fed babies.

Reason two is that breast-fed babies are usually happier than bottle-fed babies. After a baby is born his new surroundings may seem strange to him. Nursing the baby gives him the feeling of being loved and cared for that he needs to make him feel safe. A happy baby has a good chance of growing up to be a happy child.

Last, nursing the baby is good for the mother, too.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 23, Deeply Loves Married Man Who Seems Content With Wife, but Jealously Courts Her; Should She Be Loyal to Him, as He Insists?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 23 and for nearly three years I have been deeply in love with a man who is now 30. I had known him almost a year before I learned he was married and living with his wife. But by that time I had grown to care so much for him that we have continued to see each other almost every night.

He is very sweet to me but rather jealous, and he argues against my having other men friends. In view of the fact that he has a wife, this seems unreasonable to me. But he can't see it that way. I love him so much; but I may never be able to marry him, because he and his wife get along fine, although he says he has never loved her. I really do think he loves me, because he does everything for me that I ask.

Under the circumstances, what is the best thing for me to do—forget him and go out with single men? Or continue to see him, as I have for three years, getting what happiness I can from his company—and out of my conviction that he does love me as I love him? I will thank you kindly for an early reply. MARTHA.

Illicit Romance Closes Doors to Life

DEAR MARTHA: You couldn't possibly make a more wasteful investment of your youth than to continue devoting your time exclusively to this blandly unprincipled, callously unfaithful, contentedly married man. No matter how much you love him, nor how much evidence of devotion he gives you—the fact that the illicit alliance shuts you off from candid, happy, orderly, self-developing and socially satisfactory participation in womanhood's great emotional experiences of romantic courtship, sanctified marriage and respected motherhood constitutes overwhelming, unanswerable reason for having done with and forgetting him.

In the moving picture, "Kitty Foyle," based on Christopher Morley's novel of the same name, one sees a memorable portrayal of a girl of ardent and ingenuous, but invincibly gallant and heroically "tough minded" temperament, who comes to a crossroads in life where she must choose between (a) her "true love," without benefit of clergy, and (b) the more prosaic alternate of marriage to a less magnetic suitor, with whom she can share a normal, conventional, socially safeguarded life. With earthy wisdom, she chooses the latter course. (And while the "sense" of the picture departs somewhat from the "sense" of the book, it is my belief that the picture makes greater sense than the novel did—in its purported X-ray analysis of a dauntless modern girl's philosophical reactions to life).

One may pity and see some excuse—although only heartbreak ahead—for the girl who becomes "involved" with a married man because all eligible men pass her by; because, in her desperate heart hunger, she feels she needs must clutch at any crumbs of masculine attention. But one can only wonder at the socially suicidal foolhardiness of the girl who shunts aside legitimate admirers to invest her heart and her hopes in a man who is neither free to marry her, nor manifestly eager to be.

For all his "sweet" obligingness and flattering jealousy of your other would-be suitors, your married beau is giving you no guarantee whatsoever, either in word or action, of desire or intent to justify your wholehearted allegiance to him. And the fact that he deliberately deceived you, for an entire year, about his social status, shows how unscrupulously evasive and undependable he can be, when that role suits his purpose.

When the time comes—as eventually it will, supposing you drift along with him in the present arrangement—that he wants to discard you, all your tears and prayers and reminders of sacrificial devotion will avail you nothing with him. So, obviously, the wise thing for you to do is to break off with him, at once and completely—and find consolation and recompense through getting back in the main stream of life, where clean love and romance and marriage await you, if you unwaveringly seek them and will accept no less. M. H.

Listen to Mary Haworth over Station WJSV every Saturday morning at 9:15, discussing problems from her daily mail.

Glove Handkerchiefs

With the growing interest in wrist-length gloves, which fasten with one button (and these are being made in dressy mochas and suedes as well as tailored pigskin and capeskin), the question arises whether the old-time "glove handkerchief" may not also be revived. For certain Irish linen handkerchief makers report that they are again getting calls for these 8-inch square of linen which used to be tucked into the glove opening for safekeeping and convenient location.

Keeping a Throat Young Requires Daily Vigilance

Massage, Exercise, Head Carriage, All Important

By Ida Jean Kain

AS THE '30's sprint into the '40's, steps must be taken to keep the chin line from going to pot; some of you take the pessimistic view that you have passed that point and are asking whether anything can yet be done. The answer is, quite a lot, provided you make a thoroughgoing job of it. No half-hearted measures can overcome the neglect.

Even though your chin line is in really bad shape you will be happily surprised at the results of a definite beauty routine, which will take about 20 minutes every day, and which includes cream to soften the skin, massage to stimulate the circulation, exercise to firm the muscles under the skin and the cultivation of an erect head carriage to back up the good work. If your chin line is still fairly good, but beginning to slip, the results of such a routine will be even more pleasing.

Method of Massage

First give the throat a triple cleansing—use cream and remove with tissue, then wash the throat with warm water and mild soap and rinse thoroughly, and after that apply a good cream to lubricate the skin and soften it and to help the fingers slide along in the massage.

Start the massage at the base of the throat and stroke upward, gently but firmly, until the entire throat is covered. Massage with a circular motion, or use knuckle massage, which goes a bit deeper. Place the clenched fists at the base of the throat and "walk" fingers, moving them separately, up the throat column. Repeat until this front area—from ear to ear—has been completely covered. Conclude by placing fists together just under the chin and, separating hands, working out toward each ear.

Another massage action excellent for the throat is a stimulating, pinching action in which you use thumb and first finger, working both hands from base of throat upward to jaw line.

If you are going to keep a young throat the muscles under the skin must be kept in tone—and only exercise can do that. One of the best exercises may be a familiar one: You lie on the back across the bed, letting the head hang loosely over the side. Tense the muscles of the neck and slowly raise head until level with the bed. Then slowly lower to starting position, relax and repeat not more than four times—it's strenuous!

May Be Done Sitting

Good throat exercises may also be taken while sitting in a chair. Tense muscles of the throat and slowly turn head from side to side. Or drop head backward and roll to one side, forward and around. Do your chin exercise slowly or it will make you dizzy.

Erect head carraige, as here demonstrated, is a first requisite of a good chin line. The line at the back of the neck should be straight and the chin level

Whether you sleep with a pillow or without one is your own affair, but a very soft pillow into which your head sinks is better than one which keeps your head propped up—and if you have the habit of sleeping without a pillow, fine.

The same beauty routine works for throats that are fat and baggy or for throats that are thin and scraggly—both need cream, massage and exercise. In addition, make it a practice to hold the head beautifully, with the line at the back of the neck straight and the chin level—neither in nor out, and never down.

Inauguration Parties In Full Swing Today

Scores of Celebrities Will Take Part In Numerous Events on Tap; Notables Here Include Col. James W. Flanagan, of Toronto

By Hope Ridings Miller

NEVER SAW ANYTHING like the list of notables due in this town today and tomorrow. The social calendar goes into high gear this afternoon with shoals of informal parties, and by tomorrow Capitalites and their guests will be on-the-go every minute until the Inauguration program of 1941 is a thing of the past.

Hope Ridings Miller

Hostesses with teas on tap today and tomorrow have been passing out blanket invitations the last few days to "Come and bring all your out-of-town guests." Such an arrangement is so much simpler than to be answering the telephone every five minutes . . . to tell one more invitee that yes, it will be all right to bring visitors along.

Mere mention of all the celebrities who will be here would fill this entire column, and several others. So, I'll just pass along a few "names" you may not yet have heard were to add luster to the Capital scene the next few days. Governors, of course, will be all over town and are to be appropriately feted by friends and State societies. Stars of stage and screen will be here in droves, and any Washington hostess who can snare almost any of them to a party will be happy to do so.

One of the most colorful persons scheduled to be here is Col. James W. Flanagan, former Texan, who now has that marvelous estate near Toronta which almost became the "home" of King George and Queen Elizabeth during their Canadian visit. I've been told that if their majesties hadn't decided to stay on the train for their entire tour, they certainly would have put up at Col. Flanagan's palatial home.

A number of Capitalites have visited Col. Flanagan. I remember hearing Mrs. Morris Sheppard and Mrs. Fritz Lanham talk about his magnificent estate shortly after they were members of a house party there. Some time ago, a detailed story of Col. Flanagan and his home appeared in a Canadian periodical that corresponds to Fortune magazine.

Recently Awarded New Title

Now, some of you who have met Col. Flanagan on one of his numerous trips to Washington probably think I've made a mistake in his title. You remember him as Capt. Flanagan. But he is now a colonel after his recent appointment as honorary officer of the Irish regiment of Canada.

In a note to Washington friends, telling them of the honor, he said: "I am glad now to confirm my appointment as honorary lieutenant colonel of the Second Battalion of the Irish Regiment of Canada. As intimated in a previous letter, I was not called upon when accepting my commission to foreswear allegiance to the Stars and Stripes or to the Lone Star of Texas; simply the taking of an oath of obligation and compliance with rules and regulations of the army, and obedience to the orders of my superiors.

"I am required, however, to appear in uniform with the regiment on all public occasions and I am subject to promotion, citations and court-martial. In the instance of the regiment's absence from home in foreign service, I must act as a liaison officer between members of the regiment and their families and personal affairs."

To Be Guest Of Jessie Joneses

Arriving in Washington tomorrow morning, Col. Flanagan will be the guest of Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jessie Jones at the Shoreham Hotel. He will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Jones to the electors' dinner on Sunday night and later go with them to the Inaugural Gala. Also in their box at the latter will be Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Stewart McDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., are on their way from the West Coast and will be at the Carlton Hotel until Tuesday. At the same place will be Bernard Baruch, Basil O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Whalen, and Prince and Princess Aleksander Hohenlohe. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chandor will be at the Mayflower, where many other notables will be registered.

Gov. Julius Hall of Wisconsin, who arrived here yesterday with a party of relatives and friends, is staying at the Wardman Park Hotel. He entertained at dinner last evening for 20 guests. The fete took place in the Madison suite of the hotel.

Dutch Envoy Feted by Fords

Society-go-round: The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon will return to Washington tomorrow after a two weeks' visit to Chicago, Detroit, Grand Rapids and Holland, Mich. The envoy has made a series of speeches and he and his wife have been widely entertained. On Thursday evening they were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford at Dearborn. That's worthy of special note—as Mr. Ford is said to have invited no more than 12 guests to dine with him in three years. . . . Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and his sister, Miss Lucinda Rayburn, will have as their guests through next week their nieces, Martha and Virginia Rayburn, of Dallas, Tex. . . . The two will be among Speaker Rayburn's out-of-town guests at a luncheon in the Speaker's dining room, Capitol Hill, today. . . . Miss Rayburn, who has been widely feted ever since she arrived in Washington, was honored at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Richard Kleberg at the Shoreham Hotel. "I know you've been meeting plenty of Democrats. So would you like to meet some Republicans, for a change?" Mrs. Kleberg asked Miss Rayburn a few days ago. She would . . . and did. The company of ten included Mrs. Warren Austin and Mrs. Ralph Brewster as ranking guests; also, Mrs. Robert F. Rich, Mrs. Fred C. Gilchrist, Mrs. J. Roland Kinzer, Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, and Mrs. Daniel Reed, all of whom are wives of Republican members of Congress.

Miss Betty Parker, Campbell Pilcher To Be Married

Mrs. Challen Rogers Parker, of New York and Greenwich, Conn., announce the engagement of her daughter, Betty deGolia Parker, to Campbell Pilcher, son of Mrs. Jay G. Hayden, of Washington, and the late Mr. W. B. Campbell Pilcher.

The bride-elect's father was the late Challen R. Parker, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co.

MISS BETTY PARKER

of New York. She attended Greenwich Academy and was graduated from L'Ecole Americaine de Beaux Arts, at Fontainebleau, France.

Mr. Pilcher was graduated from the United States Naval Academy and Fordham University law school. He is the grandson of former Senator Robert L. Taylor, of Tennessee. He is connected with a New York law firm.

The wedding will take place in a few weeks at the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York.

Mrs. Robbins To Return Soon

After an absence of seven months, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins is planning to return to the Capital in a week or so. She has been touring the embassies and legations in South America in line with her State Department job, which has to do with their furnishing and decorating.

En route home Mrs. Robbins will stop off in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. In the latter country she will be the guest of the United States Minister and Mrs. Robert Scotten.

MRS. CARL DARNELL

Ceremony Held at Noon in Home Of Mrs. Philip Coffin, Bride's Mother; Chaplain Bennett, of Fort Myer, Officiates

At a noon ceremony yesterday, Mrs. Virginia Rodgers Barker, daughter of Mrs. Philip Owen Coffin, of 2110 S Street, and the late Capt. C. R. P. Rodgers, U. S. N., became the bride of Capt. Carl Darnell, U. S. A.

The ceremony took place at the Coffin home, Chaplain Ivan Bennett, of Fort Myer, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Christopher Rodgers. Particularly becoming to her dark hair was the bride's floor-length gown of heavy white crepe, fashioned with a belt of leopard skin. Her flowers were white.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. John Sweeney. She was dressed in pale blue crepe. Capt. George J. Ondricks was best man.

A breakfast and reception at the Coffin home followed. Mrs. Coffin wore ruby silk crepe, and Mrs. Carl Darnell, mother of the bridegroom, who came on with her husband from Chicago for the wedding, chose gray silk with a fuchsia hat. Assisting at the reception were Capt. Darnell's sister, Miss Elinor Darnell, who wore a biege wool frock and a blue hat and Donna Julia Brambilla, of Rome, aunt of the bride, who was in gray crepe with a purple hat.

When the couple left for a trip South by motor, the bride wore a beige wool suit and a hat and coat of leopard skin. The couple will make their future home at Fort Riley, Kans. Among those from out of town at the wedding was the bride's uncle, George von L. Meyer, of Boston.

Mrs. Darnell is the granddaughter of Mrs. Alexander Rogers and the late Col. Alexander Rodgers, U. S. A., and of the late Mrs. G. von L. Meyer, and Mr. Meyer, Ambassador to Italy and Russia and Postmaster General and Secretary of the Navy under Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft.

The bride attended the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury, Conn. Capt. Darnell is a West Point graduate.

Mrs. Johnson Is Honor Guest

Mrs. Charles Orrin Penfield entertained at luncheon in her home yesterday in honor of Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the United States Ambassador to China.

Among the guests were Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Joseph Ballantine, Mrs. Raymond Mackay, Mrs. Walter Adams, Mrs. Cabot Covill, Mrs. Jane Power, Mrs. Joseph Jones, jr., Mrs. Stuart Fuller, Miss Elizabeth H. Johnson and Miss Cornelia Bassell.

Dorothy Swann To Become Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Swann, of San Diego, Calif., formerly of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy May, to Albert B. Farnell, of Shreveport, La.

Miss Swann will be graduated in May from the University of California, where Mr. Farnell is teaching and studying for his Ph. D. degree.

The wedding will take place in the summer.

Dr. Hu-Shih to Be Host To New York Couple

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih, will have as his guests over Inauguration Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Li, of New York.

The envoy will return today from Hartford, Conn., where he spoke last night at a dinner and reception of the Hartford Seminary Foundation. Earlier in the week he spoke at New Haven, Conn., at the opening of an exhibition of Chinese art. Afterward he was honored at a dinner given by the President of Yale and Mrs. Charles Seymour.

Miss Mahoney Becomes Bride

At a morning ceremony at St. Gabriel's Church yesterday, Miss Alice Mahoney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mahoney, of Minneapolis, and William T. Tumulty, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tumulty, of Washington, were married by the Rev. William J. Sweeney.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown fashioned with long sleeves and a lace yolk. A fingertip veil fell from her shirred net headdress, and a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley completed her ensemble.

Bride Has Three Attendants

The maid of honor, Miss Kathleen Pat Scharnikaw, wore a dress of rose taffeta made on old-fashioned lines and a matching veil. Her nosegay was of talisman roses.

Miss Lillian Tumulty and Miss Edna Blake, the bridesmaids, wore charm-blue dresses made like that of the maid of honor's and carried matching nosegays.

Joseph P. Tumulty was best man. Ushers were Warren Mahoney and Thomas F. Gowen.

On Wedding Trip To Florida

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bridegroom, from which the newlyweds left for a Florida wedding tour.

Mr. Tumulty, who is a graduate of Catholic University and of Columbus Law School, and his bride will later return to Washington and make their home at the Skyland Apartments.

Marcia O'Brien To Make Debut

Following a postholiday lull in debutante parties, another in this winter series is scheduled for next Saturday. The deb is Miss Marcia O'Brien, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. James A. O'Brien, who will give a tea dance for her at the Officers Club of the Army War College.

Pretty Miss O'Brien was voted Washington's No. 1 deb from a group of buds who attended the Thanksgiving Ball last year at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred. She attends Notre Dame School in Baltimore and is, her friends say, fond of writing poetry.

Mrs. Kintner Plays Hostess

Mrs. Edwin G. Kintner, wife of Capt. Kintner, U. S. N., was hostess yesterday at a luncheon at her home on Thirty-second Street honoring Mrs. Carolyn Plummer, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Plummer is the house guest of Mrs. Barron Du Bois, wife of Capt. Du Bois, U. S. N. Covers were laid for 12 guests.

Society Turns Out En Masse For W. S. Culbertsons' Party

Connecticut Avenue Traffic Jam Is Caused By Limousines of Guests; Many Notables Pay Respects to Hosts, Off Soon for Guatemala

That traffic jam outside 2101 Connecticut Avenue yesterday was caused by Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson. They entertained at a large cocktail tea in their apartment, so big that traffic was almost at a standstill outside while limousines were called.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson are off soon for Guatemala. The party had been planned before they knew they were going, so the hosts just moved the date up a bit.

A babel of voices greeted guests as they arrived. The spacious hall of the Culbertson apartment was filled with well-knowns, many of whom gathered in the dining room for tea or a highball. Mrs. Culbertson received in the drawing room, wearing a street-length frock, a print, refreshingly springlike, of black and pink. Her daughter, Miss Jane Culbertson, assisted, dressed in a becoming brown crepe frock trimmed with sequins.

The tea table was centered with a great bowl of tiger lilies, flanked by four tall white tapers in silver candlesticks. A variety of good things to eat—cake, sandwiches and hors d'oeuvre, were offered the guests.

On hand at the party was Mr. Culbertson's brother, Paul Culbertson, an official in the State Department. Mrs. Culbertson was unable to be present.

Cross-Section Of Society There

Diplomats, former diplomats, members of Congress and residential society were well represented at the party. Among the newcomers were Representative and Mrs. Thomas Rolph, of San Francisco. He was recently elected to Congress, and his wife said she was already enjoying life in Washington. Mrs. Rolph wore a becoming blue suit with a matching felt hat.

Mrs. Loren Johnson was among the guests, as was Mrs. Ralph Hallett, who wore a handsome mink coat over her frock. Col. and Mrs. Eugene Villaret, she in a squirrel coat and sapphire blue velvet turban, chatted with Mrs. Wilbur Carr, wife of the former Minister to Czecho-Slovakia.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling mingled in the throng, she wearing a dark green suit trimmed with fur. Thomas Burke, chief of communications for the State Department, was there without his attractive wife, who is ill with flu. Judge and Mrs. Ernest Van Fossan, who also lives at 2101 Connecticut Avenue, dropped in for a drink.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Justice Stone, was an early arrival. Mrs. William MacCracken, who will fete Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chandor at a cocktail party today, wore a white hat with her dark frock.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman was accompanied by her sister, Countess de Castellane. Mrs. Claude Swanson, widow of the former Secretary of the Navy, greeted friends on all sides. A center of attraction was lively little Mrs. William Borah, who wore black with a becoming veiled ha'

Mrs. Werlich Among Guests

Mrs. McCeney Werlich topped off her ensemble with a tiny white toque. Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, who with Senator Brewster will entertain at dinner on Monday for Gov. and Mrs. Sumner Sewall of Maine, was being welcomed back to Washington after her trip to Honolulu.

Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czech Minister, chatted with Clarence Hewes. Mrs. Carlton Holdrege was accompanied by her husband. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams mingled in the throng and Lady Bradford Leslie chatted with friends.

Others glimpsed included Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Mrs. George Thorpe and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

Club Federation Officers Guests Of Mrs. Pepper

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Senator from Florida, was hostess at a luncheon today honoring the officers of the Florida General Federation of Women's Clubs who are in Washington for the mid-winter board meeting of their national organization, Mrs. Thurston Roberts, of Jacksonville; Mrs. M. F. Wittichen and Mrs. T. V. Moore, of Miami, and Mrs. Louise McGregor, of DeLand.

Other guests at the luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel were a number of Florida women who are in the Capital to attend the Inaugural festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, of Hollywood fame, and Mr. and Mrs. Hal Wallis (he is head of Warner Brothers' studios and she is Louise Fazenda) will be guests of Senator and Mrs. Pepper at the entertainments attendant to the Inauguraion.

Mrs. Woodward Entertains Group

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, entertained last night at a buffet supper in honor of several visitors from Los Angeles, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Mosher and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pauley.

Mr. Mosher is the president of the Signal Oil & Gas Co., a Pacific States concern. He and his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Pauley are in Washington to enjoy the Inaugural festivities.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

MRS. CLIFFORD CORBIN, assisted by her two pretty daughters, Dolly and Edythe, entertained at cocktails the other afternoon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Finucane. Mr. Finucane is a cousin of the Corbins and a brother of Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, of Baltimore, formerly of Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Finucane are on their way to Florida and Havana and stopped off to spend a few days with the Corbins.

The Corbins' cozy bar, labeled "La Cantina," was the scene of the party. Attractive, blonde Mrs. Finucane, wearing a smart frock of hunter's green wool, was discussing Havana with Roberto de Mendoza, of the Cuban Embassy, and discovering that she and her husband are acquainted with some of Roberto's numerous relatives. Dr. Mendoza was very much in the mood to talk about Havana, having completed his plans to leave Washington next Wednesday for sunny Cuba.

MRS. CARY LANGHORNE was saying that she will shortly give a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club at which Dwight Fisk will appear. It seems that Mrs. Langhorne heard Mr. Fisk give some of his clever monologues in New York. Among his numbers was the one about the "Leghorns of Virginia," which is a take-off on the Langhorne family. When Mr. Fisk learned that a member of the family had been listening to his satire he apologized to Mrs. Langhorne, who promptly told him that she had enjoyed the joke very much and wouldn't he come to Washington for her dinner.

Also present at the Corbins' cocktail party were Mrs. Donald Jones, Baron and Baroness Baeyens, Mrs. Natalie Phillips, Thomas Bell Sweeny, the Assistant Naval Attache of the French Embassy and the Marquise de Levis Mirepoix, Capt. Pete Quesada, and Malcolm Burke, brother of Mrs. Finucane.

MRS. PRENTISS GILBERT, widow of the late United States Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, has arrived in Washington and plans to take an apartment for the rest of the winter. Mrs. Gilbert has lived for a number of years in Geneva, where her husband was United States Consul General before he was transferred to Berlin.

HIS OLD FRIENDS in Washington agree that the former French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, is looking very well and someone suggested that he might even have gained a little weight. "Yes," said the Ambassador," the food in Lisbon was so good and so plentiful that I had to give up waiting for the Clipper there and take a boat —or I should certainly have eaten too much."

At the supper party given for him by Baron and Baroness Baeyens the other night Count de Saint Quentin was being asked for news of his mother, who was so popular when she visited him here at the embassy. Countess de Saint-Quentin says that she still keeps her queenly bearing in spite of having German officers quartered in her house, and he related an amusing incident in which she came off winner in a verbal skirmish with one of them.

AMONG THOSE gathered to greet Count de Saint-Quetin at the Baeyens were the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jacques Dumaine, who had been his host at dinner; the Naval Attache and Vicomtesse de Bourgoing, Count and Countess de Limur, Mme. Lombard, Msgr. and Mme. Charles Lucet and Jacques de Thier, of the Belgian Embassy.

A lovely lady in black with a gold sequin jacket was Countess de St. Phalle, of New York, who came in with the Marquise de Levis Mirepoix. Another guest from New York was the Financial Attache of the French Embassy, Herve Alphand. M. Alphand brought news of his sister, the charming Marie Vic Charpentier, who was so popular in Washington when her husband was stationed at the French Embassy. Pierre Charpentier is now in Morocco on the staff of Gen. Nogues and Marie Vic and their two little sons, born since they left Washington, are with him.

OTHER BITS of news about friends: Charlie and Mary Saint are in Paris, he in an official capacity for the Vichy government. Claude de Boisanger is still in Vichy in a government post. I heard also that the Bonnets are both safe and that Mme. Bonnet is as pretty as in the days when she was chatelaine of the French Embassy here.

MISS MARGARET GIBBINS

General and Wife Tell Engagement Of Their Daughter

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Henry Gibbins announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to Noel Bride, of Washington.

Miss Gibbins, a native of Knoxville, Tenn., attended school at Mount De Sales, Cantonsville, Md., and the Sacred Heart Convent, Menlo Park, Calif.

Mr. Bride is the son of the late William W. Bride, former Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Bride, niece of Vice President Fairbanks. He attended the University of Virginia and is a member of Beta Theta Fraternity. He is associated with the General Foods Corporation.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Mrs. Ross Fetes Envoy of Mexico And House Speaker

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, assembled a distinguished company for the dinner she gave last evening in the Pan American Room of the Mayflower. Ranking guests were the Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, and the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Then there were two United States envoys in town for visits—the Ambassador to Mexico, Josephus Daniels, who was accompanied by Mrs. Daniels, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who will resign on Monday as Minister to Norway. They are here for the Inauguration.

Other guests were Miss Lucinda Rayburn, sister of the Speaker of the House; Senator and Mrs. George Radcliffe, Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Representative and Mrs. William Byron, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, the Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne Chatfield Taylor, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Judge and Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Neville Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Berryman, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ewing, of New York; Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mrs. Charles Lea, Harold Marsh and Mrs. Norman Mack, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Since the hostess is from Wyoming (she formerly was Governor) there were many present from that State. They included Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Senator and Mrs. H. H. Schwartz, and the newly elected Representative, John J. McIntyre, with his wife.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Manville Kendrick, Judge and Mrs. Robert R. Rose, Mrs. William Kincaid and Mrs. Patrick Quealy. Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ewing, of New York, were also present.

Archduke Otto Attends Dance At Sulgrave

Aide, Formerly With Hungarian Legation, Accompanies Him

An added zest was given to last evening's Friday supper dance at the Sulgrave Club by the presence of His Imperial Highness, Archduke Otto. The tall, slender young man was the center of attention from the several hundred people —mostly of debutante age—who flocked to another in the winter series of these dances.

With his aide, Etienne de Hedry, who was formerly attached to the Hungarian Legation here, the archduke arrived last night to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris at their home, The Lindens, on Kalorama Road. They will entertain him at a large dinner tonight and a reception Monday evening.

Miss de Mauduit Gives Dinner

Before the Sulgrave dance, Archduke Otto dined with Miss Yolande de Mauduit, attractive, dark-haired daughter of Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit and a debutante of several seasons ago. She entertained at a dinner party at which another guest was Miss Patricia Morris, daughter of the archduke's hosts.

Others in the group were Miss Miriam Scott, Miss Esther Willcox, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Phillip H. Clarke, Frederick Hunt, Thomas Waterman, Ingham Mack, Mr. and Mrs. William Blair, of New York—he is a brother of Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., and they recently moved to the Capital; Jose de Lasa, Andrew Wylie, Lady Maureen Noel and Miss Dorothea Sowers.

Peggy Lansdowne Is Honored

Many of the younger set gathered in the commandant's quarters at the navy yard for the large buffet supper given last night by Mrs. George T. Pettengill. The party was in honor of Miss Peggy Lansdowne, debutante daughter of Mrs. John Caswell. Miss Lansdowne will be feted again on Tuesday, when Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, gives a tea for her.

Another dinner before the Friday supper dance was Mrs. Sidney Lee's, who entertained a small group at her home in Georgetown. She recently returned from Florida, where she went with her sister, Mrs. Warren Barbour. Mrs. Lee also stopped for a few days with Mrs. Lincoln Ellsworth.

Brewsters to Fete Governor of Maine

The Governor of Maine and Mrs. Sumner Sewall will be the guests of honor of Senator and Mrs. Brewster at a dinner at the Sulgrave Club on Monday evening preceding the reception in his honor by the State of Maine Society at 2400 Sixteenth Street.

Covers will be laid for 80 guests, among whom are Senator Capper, Senator White, Senator and Mrs. Taft, Senator and Mrs. Burton, Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Representative Allen W. Treadway, Representative and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Representative and Mrs. John Taber, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Representative Leslie C. Arends, Representative and Mrs. Charles Clason, Representative and Mrs. James C. Oliver, Representative Margaret Chase Smith, and Representative and Mrs. Frank Fellows.

Maj. Davidson Is Host At Dinner for Reeds

Edward Reed, who recently returned here for duty after serving as Counselor of our Embassy in Rome, and Mrs. Reed, were honor guests at a small dinner given last night by Maj. and Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson.

Others in the group were Mrs. Kent Legare, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Capt. Tinsley Garnett and Winant Johnston.

Lone Lady Ranger Here From Texas

Former Member of Picturesque Police Force Is Among Leading Democratic Women Arriving for Inauguration

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

The lone lady ranger from Texas, Frances Haskell Edmondson, of San Antonio, is in Washington for the Inauguration ceremonies—one of the several hundred leading Democratic women gathering from all parts of the country to see the man whom they helped elect take oath of office.

Mrs. Edmondson "was born into politics," she says. Her father was active in the Democratic party in Ohio and from there went to the Indian Territory and became the first governor of Oklahoma after it was admitted as a State.

When she moved to Texas, Mrs. Edmondson continued her interest in party politics. She initiated the agitation for equal representation for women on the Democratic State Committee which resulted in the passage of a bill in the Texas State Legislature, carrying this provision.

In 1937 she was appointed a

FRANCES H. EDMONDSON

deputy sheriff in Bexar County and later, at the request of the Texas Sheriff's Association, was made a member of the Texas Rangers, the only woman ever so honored in the State. But the job was not as picturesque as it sounds. She wore no uniform and carried no gun. The nearest thing to a firearm was a gas gun, given her by a friend. She worked in narcotics control but was not reappointed under Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel.

In 1938-40 she served as the first and only woman cochairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee in Texas. Since then the office has been that of vice chairman. She is now engaged in a campaign in her state for better working conditions for women.

Another of the early arrivals for the inaugural festivities is Mrs. Leonard Thomas, who "sang ballads for ballots" in hter campaign through the 67 counties of Alabama and won over an opponent for the office of Democratic State Committeewoman. She is the youngest Democratic committeewoman in the country. (Her age, 35. If she doesn't tell you her husband will, so it's no secret.) One old man in a rural district who voted for her said he "might as well 'cause the women and the Bermuda grass are takin' the country anyway."

Mrs. Thomas, who is the guest of Judge Virginia Mayfield, at Woodley Park Towers, is also routed through her home state as being a typical Southern beauty.

Among others who arrived yesterday were Mrs. Enid Broward Hardee, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Norman Mack, of Buffalo, who was national committeewoman for the Virgin Islands; Mrs. Sara Mendez, national committeewomen from Puerto Rico; Mrs. Theresa Clark, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, who is official representative of Gov. Clark; Mrs. Margaret Drips, of Rochester, Minn., State vice chairman; Mrs. Ida McCabe Kayser, of St. Paul, Minn., national committeewoman, and Mrs. Volney Taylor, of Brownsville, Tex., former president of the Texas State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Inauguration week-end will start with the Biennial Conference of Affiliated Clubs at the Woman's National Democratic Club today and Sunday at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire Avenue.

The program includes a buffet luncheon from 12 to 1:30 today at the clubhouse and a business session from 2 to 5 p. m. in the parish house of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church at Eighteenth and Church Streets. Tonight at 7:30 there will be a banquet at the Washington Hotel.

Speakers at this dinner will be Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, U. S. Minister to Norway; Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Senator from Arkansas, and Mrs. Clara Gooding McMillan, former Representative from South Carolina. Representing the Democratic National Committee as speakers will be Chairman Flynn, Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, the assistant chairman, and Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister and Mrs. May Thompson Evans, retiring director and assistant director of the women's division. Mrs. McAllister will introduce Mrs. Tillett, who, as assistant chairman of the national committee, also becomes her successor as head of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. The banquet will be given in honor of the delegates and alternates to the conference.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a tea at the clubhouse for delegates and alternates to the conference, with Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. Wallace receiving the guests.

Other events at which women will be guest of honor are: the reception for visiting Governors and their wives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies tomorrow afternoon; the receptions at the White House Monday afternoon at which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the Governors and their wives and the members of the Electoral College; the White House luncheon on Inauguration Day for the members of the Democratic National Committee and the Democratic State chairman and vice chairmen. In addition, virtually every State society in Washington will have some kind of a party at which the Governors and their wives will be guests of honor.

Mrs. Wickard To Attend Tea

Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be present at the benefit fashion show and tea to be given at 3:30 this afternoon at the Sulgrave Club by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

Mrs. Wickard will be the guest of Mrs. Pauletta Guffy Miller, a member of the committee on arrangements for the event.

The official note in the audience will be further accented by the wives of Governors and other dignitaries in the city for the Inaugural festivities. Mrs. Sumner Sewall, wife of the Governor of Maine, will be the guest of Mrs. Ralph Brewster, wife of Senator Brewster.

Among those who will assist in pouring tea, following the fashion show, are Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, Mrs. Horace Vandeventer, Mrs. Henry Flood, Miss Lydia Loring and Mrs. Roy Sexton.

Discuss Women in Defense

Mrs. Dickinson was one of a group of federation officers on the defense councils of their home States, who met for luncheon at the Iron Gate Inn yester[illegible] members of the staff of the consumer division of the National Defense Commission.

Although the description of this phase of New Hampshire women's preparedness was greeted with laughter and a question as to whether they also had a rifle corps, women from other States also reported programs including first aid ambulance driving and motor repairs.

Women, in their eagerness to serve, are prone to seek the spectacular things to do rather than those close at hand and more vital but less dramatic, Miss Loda May Davis, assistant in the consumer division, remarked.

Problems such as undernourished children, school lunches, standards and grades for food, rents and housing are those demanding immediate attention of women's groups, she said. Most of the States, New Hampshire among them, are tackling these, the women reported. Housing problems have become acute in areas where there has been a large influx of defense industry workers, and in such cases emergency housing projects have been started with Federal emergency housing funds.

The serious need for recreational facilities near training camps was another problem discussed. In some places the clubs are already planning to open their clubhouses and will cooperate with other agencies in the community to provide recreation for the thousands of men in nearby camps.

Attending the luncheon yesterday were Miss Davis, Dr. Caroline Ward, assistant to Dr. Harriet Elliott, chief of the consumer division of the National Defense Commission; Dickson Reck, assistant in the division; Dr. Ben Lewis, chief of the economics section of the division, and the following officers of the General Federation:

Mrs. John E. Sickles, of Flint, president of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Carl Reed, of Cresco, president of the Iowa State Federation; Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, of Sidney, past president of the Illinois Federation; Mrs. John D. Robinson, of Wallace, president of the North Carolina Federation; Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, president of the Georgia Federation; Mrs. F. A. Leaming, of Mansfield, president of the Louisiana Federation; Mrs. R. H. Latham, of Asheville, N. C., chairman of the budget for the General Federation; Mrs. J. L. B. Buck, of Richmond, Va., treasurer of the General Federation; Mrs. Patrick Henry Adams, of Maplewood, N. J., president of the New Jersey Federation, and Mrs. Dickinson.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

THE ALLIANCE FRANCAISE has announced its third meeting of the season for January 27 instead of January 20 as it had been listed on the society's calendar. The later date will not conflict with anv Inauguration Day plans of the members.

The speaker for the January meeting, which will be held as usual at the Sulgrave Club, will be Georges Duthuit, of France, who was professor at the Ecole du Louvre and attache at the Musee du Louvre until 1937. He is also an author of note. His subject will be: "Contributions de L'Orient a L'Art Contemporain."

The French Ambassador, Henri-Haye, is the honorary president of the Alliance Francaise. Other officers are Lynch Luquer, president; Mrs. John M. Biddle and Dr. N. H. Darton, vice presidents; W. T. Bramtly, honorary secretary, and Mme. Blanche Bemont, secretary-treasurer.

Members of advisory council: Mrs. Charles Alden, Mrs. George F. Becker, Mrs. Laurence Benet, Mrs. Carlos Delmar, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. William A. Hayes, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Newlands Johnston, Miss Sarah Lee, Miss Nannie Macomb, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. W. R. Tuckerman, Dr. Florian Vurpillot, Miss Harriet Winslow.

TO ATTEND CONFERENCE—Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., president of the Junior League of Washington, and Mrs. W. Thacher Winslow, placement chairman, will be the delegates from the Washington league to the annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America to be held at St. Louis January 27 to 31. Delegates from 150 junior leagues will attend the conference to discuss problems and programs for coordination of volunteer services in each community.

Group meetings and panel discussions are scheduled for the five day period and Mrs. Blair and Mrs. Winslow will attend meetings on placement, group work, medical social service and evaluation of community programs in order to inform the Washington Junior League on their return.

The opening session of the conference will be addressed by Mrs. George V. Ferguson of Winnipeg, president of the association, and by Frank Bane of the advisory commission to the Council of National Defense. The delegates will hear Erika Mann, the daughter of Thomas Mann, on Tuesday. Mrs. Vera Micheles Dean, of New York, director of research for the Foreign Policy Association, will discuss world affairs on Wednesday.

Clubwomen Back British Aid Policy

Federation Board Asks for Program Under Defense Plan

The board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in executive session yesterday morning, passed resolutions expressing approval of the policy of aid to Britain and requesting that the National Defense Advisory Commission "outline as early as possible a program for the participation of women in national defense."

The first resolution, presented by Mrs. Frederic Beggs, chairman of international relations, stated that, "Whereas repeated declaration of intent to destroy democracy everywhere has left no room for doubt as to the purpose of the Axis powers to impose a totalitarian system on the world, and

"Whereas, the Treaty of Military Assistance entered into by Germany, Italy and Japan makes it impossible to ignore the threat of Axis policy in the Pacific, and the proximity of Africa to the South American Continent, and

"Whereas, aid to Britain has been accepted as necessary and wise by the leaders of both major political parties, therefore,

"Be it resolved that the Board of Directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs approves the policy of aid in the form of credits, ships, munitions and materials of war for those nations fighting to preserve their independence against the threat of totalitarianism."

The second resolution, presented by Mrs. F. H. Clausen, chairman of American citizenship, and Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, chairman of legislation, asked not only a program for women's participation in national defense, but also "that a group of women, including national representatives of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, be appointed by the commission to assist in developing and promoting such a program."

Yesterday afternoon the club women, headed by their president, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, made a tour of the Department of Labor and were addressed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Miss Perkins told the women that when she took office she found there had been one-sided emphasis in the department on immigration. Endeavoring to carry out the purpose set forth in the charter "to foster and promote the welfare of the wage earners of America," she said she had directed effort in this field. Industry had already been taken care of, she said, and she believed it time that labor had well-deserved attention.

The program for prevention of industrial accidents and illnesses has been effective, said Miss Perkins, and will now be of value in defense industries.

Last night a drama, "The Prince of Peace," by Minnie Frost Rands, was presented for the board members at the Arts Club. This morning a final business meeting will conclude the week's sessions.

Text of Knox's Statement To House Unit

Secretary of Navy Appeals for Support Of Lease-Lend Bill

Following is the text of a statement read by Secretary Knox before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which is considering the lease-lend bill:

I presume I am called before you because I am charged with the responsibility, as Secretary of the Navy, of preparing our first line of defense—the Navy—against whatever dangers the future may hold.

It is almost impossible to exaggerate the importance of sea power to our country and to our entire western world. It has been because of the existence of sea power, exercised by two nations, Great Britain and ourselves, that both the Atlantic and the Pacific have served as barriers against the acquisitive designs of aggressive powers.

If you will glance at the map, you will readily observe that there are but three exits into the Atlantic in Europe. The channels of the North Sea (north of the British Isles), the English Channel, itself and the Straits of Gibraltar. Our entire western world has been safe from attack from Europe because the British fleet has always stood sentinel at these three exits into the ocean, and the British policy, for many years, has accepted, and assisted us in the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine. That has sufficed to make the Atlantic barrier secure.

Nazi Armies Not Enough

The war in Europe must be looked upon as the latest of a long succession of attempts by dictators to establish rule over all Europe and, eventually, to establish dominion over a large portion of the world. Like all its predecessors, the Nazi regime has found that the power of its armies alone cannot establish that rule, because Europe is not self-supporting in raw materials, and the Nazi armies are powerless to obtain these materials unless they have control of the sea.

Great Britain has never been powerful enough to support an army strong enough to conquer Europe and to hold it under control. That nation has been enabled to survive against conquest through control of the seas between those islands and the Continent of Europe, and also to stifle the expanding military powers on the continent by denying them access to the sources of raw materials.

The struggle now going on is, fundamentally, an attempt by Germany to seize control of the sea from Great Britain. That is the reason why, from a military viewpoint, the war has so vital an interest to the United States. Our Nation has evolved without particular hindrance from Britain's control of a large part of the sea. But I believe it would be very different were control to pass to Germany, and were she able to send her armies into other parts of the world, and there lay tribute of raw materials for further building up her powers of oppression.

If Germany becomes free to move across the ocean for the conquest of new territories, she most probably will move first into South America, to get hold of that great storehouse of national wealth. If the United States does not wish to face the consequences of the estbalishment in South America of aggressive military power, we should now prevent Germany from overturning the British sea power which holds the Nazis in Europe.

From Weakness to Strength

For 118 years the Monroe Doctrine has been the one national policy firmly and continuously maintained by the American people. This doctrine, which forbids the extension in the Western Hemisphere of non-American military and political control, was enunciated for the purpose of preserving the territorial, economic and social integrity of the United States. Our statesmen clearly foresaw that we ourselves could be safe from aggression only by keeping safe the whole of the American Hemisphere. The United States under that policy has progressed from weakness to strength. The other nations of this hemisphere have also been enable to develop their own civilizations, free from the fear of sudden foreign conquest.

We still have a one-ocean Navy. We are building a two-ocean Navy, but its structure will not be completed for six years. We need to complete this structure as fast as we can, because the other part of our present two-ocean Navy is now in grave danger. The British navy can survive only if the British Isles survive. Should the British Isles fall, we can only believe that the British navy, which never runs from danger, will fall at the same time. I think we can safely assume that the British navy will share the fate of the courageous nation that supports it.

Last year the Congress was solemnly warned by the Chief of Naval Operations of the grave threat to the freedom of the United States and its sister American republics which would exist were Britain to suffer defeat. The naval forces now in the possession of the Axis powers, or which are under construction, would greatly outnumber our own. Our fleet would necessarily be divided, to meet danger in both oceans. Whether it would be strong enough to protect even the regions nearest to us is a matter that cannot now be foretold. Certainly we could not project our strength across two wide oceans. With the Navy retained at home, we could not do much to prevent Japan from extending its sway over all of eastern Asia, nor could we prevent the establishment of strong military base areas in southern Europe and in Africa to threaten our neighbors to the south.

To keep our land secure we must prevent the establishment of strong aggressive military power in any part of the New World. We can keep non-American military power out of our hemisphere only through being able to control the seas that surround its shores. Once we lose the power to control even a part of those seas, inevitably the wars of Europe and Asia will be transferred to the Americas.

We need time to build ships and to train their crews. We need time to build up our outlying bases so that we can operate our fleets as a screen for our continent. We need time to train our armies, to accumulate war stores, to gear our industry for defense.

Only Great Britain and its fleet can give us that time. And they need our help to survive.

If we fully organize the mental and material resources of the American people, we can give Britain that help and simultaneously can build a strong military defense for ourselves. The cost to us in money, effort, and sacrifice will be great—but that cost will be far greater, even in the immediate future, should we now stand aside and let Britain fall.

We are a strong Nation, though our military strength is still largely potential. I believe that the American people have what it takes in character, courage, and wisdom to guard this country and to guard this hemisphere. But to keep from engaging in a desperate struggle in American territory, they need time to make ready their arms. They can get time to make ready, and still can maintain their essential interests throughout the world, only so long as Britain and its fleet survive. With our unstinted help, I firmly believe that Britain can not be defeated.

We will act in our own best national interests, therefore, if while increasing our naval power as fast as we can we provide the British commonwealth with the means that will bring her through this tragic crisis.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Labor Department employes are speculating on whether they'll have a new boss next week when the President presumably will announce his third-term Cabinet. There are lots of straws in the wind, some indicating Frances Perkins will be renamed Labor Secretary and others suggesting she'll be replaced. Here are three pertinent facts which seem to indicate that Miss Perkins will either remain in the Cabinet, or be shifted to another key Federal job: She has arranged to rent the house where she's living for another year; she has discussed 1941 plans with all her bureau chiefs, and, finally, it would be an exceedingly hard job to find a person to succeed her who would be satisfactory to all concerned.

Offsetting these straws is the fact that a potent New Deal Senator—one who has stood by the Administration on all labor reforms—is whispering to intimates that Miss Perkins won't be renamed. Add to that the latest rumor that Miss Perkins will be given a place on the Defense Commission, presumably to replace Harriet Elliott, consumer commissioner. Miss Perkins first attracted attention with her work with consumer groups. Anyway, don't be surprised at what happens to Frances Perkins.

President Roosevelt yesterday issued two executive orders that will bring the jobs of roughly 85 persons under civil service. Each of the incumbents must pass non-competitive civil service tests and meet all other qualifications to gain merit status. The first order brought in the jobs of 10 REA employes who had not served a sufficient length of time when the jobs of most other REA employes were covered under on October 16, 1936. The order means that all REA employes except lawyers, engineers, and experts are now under civil service.

The second order brought under civil service the jobs of 75 building service employes under the Office of the Building Manager. The story behind the order is pretty involved. PWA and the Office of the Building Manager formerly were under Interior. Reorganization sent them both to Federal Works. The Building Manager's budget ran short while at Interior and 75 guards, elevator operators, mechanics and the like were hired from PWA funds. PWA is liquidating and the employes had to be cut off. The Building Manager couldn't take them into his office because they didn't have civil service. Hence, the order was issued to save their jobs.

Public Roads Administration has an office at 515 Fourteenth Street Northwest. A few of its offices face on Pennsylvania Avenue, which makes it an ideal spot to view the inaugural parade. Yesterday PRA bigwigs sadly announced that only 30 per cent of the employes would be permitted in the building on Monday. The officials explained to the disappointed employes that Federal Works Administrator John Carmody and his party would view the parade from PRA's windows. PRA is under Federal Works.

Federal employes living in Cottage City, Md., may now participate in local politics, the Civil Service Commission has decreed. . . . Berniece B. Heffner, AFGE national secretary, will close Civil Service Week celebration today at 5:45 with an address over the Labor News Review which is heard over WJSV. . . . Forty-six persons passed the civil service test for chief administrative analyst. There were 151 eligibles on the principal grade, and 483 on the senior grade.

Mrs. McMillin Will Talk on Radio's 'Hour Government'

Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission, will be tonight's guest on Your Government This Week, the Federal employe radio program which is heard each Saturday at 7:45 o'clock over WJSV.

Mrs. McMillin

Mrs. McMillin will be interviewed by Archie Edwards, president of the Federal Employe Council, who is chief of the Statistical Division of the Civil Service Commission. A discussion will be held on welfare and recreational activities among Federal employes.

Jerry Kluttz, editor of The Post's Federal Diary, will comment on news of the week of interest to Government employes.

So the President Laughed

Vice President Garner is telling this story of what he told President Roosevelt.

"You ought to give Bill Knudsen more authority, Boss," Garner said. "He'll get the job done if he has the power. And besides, you won't have to worry about him ever running for President."

Knudsen, as a Danish immigrant, is ineligible.

Mister, Can We Go Along?

A sweet young voice yesterday queried inaugural officials how her boss could attend the swearing-in ceremonies, go to the White House luncheon, watch the parade, attend a handful of other functions, and be properly dressed. "Go hire an ambulance, which can crash the police lines, and have it fully equipped with your boss' clothes," was the answer.

Gov. Heil, Who Helped Lay Down Car Tracks, Predicts Buses Will Replace Trams Altogether

FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW—Gov. Julius Heil (center), of Wisconsin, who played a prominent part in the construction of Washington's first electric street car track system, came back to Washington last night for inauguration festivities and entertained friends at the Wardman Park Hotel. Shown with him are Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin (left) and Col. Arthur V. Winton. The friends drank toasts and to Gov. Heil sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow"

Gov. Julius P. Heil, of Wisconsin, who had a hand in the construction of Washington's first electric street-car track system, came back to the city yesterday for Inauguration festivities and predicted:

"The time is coming when all streetcar tracks, even in this city, will be torn up. The motorbus will replace the trolley and people will be able to sleep."

As a young man, Heil superintended the work of welding together the joints of streetcar tracks in Washington — then a brand-new process.

"The old cable powerhouse," he recalled yesterday, "burned down. It was located across the street from the Willard Hotel. You know, street cars then were pulled by cables—tramways. Well, it burned down and they decided to build an electric system.

"That was during President McKinley's administration. About 1898, wasn't it? Every day the President would stop by, in his fine carriage with four white horses—two white horses—and his coachman and wearing a silk hat, and he would ask me how the work was coming.

"He was interested in progress, in new developments."

The Governor heaved a nostalgic sigh.

"No, I don't say the work came to naught. But in this modern age, the motorbus will replace the electric street railway. All good things must pass when something better is developed."

Gov. Heil gave a dinner last night at the Wardman Park Hotel for the Congressional delegates from Wisconsin, for members of his staff who accompanied him to the Inauguration and for other Washington friends.

They drank toasts, exchanged bouquets and sang Wisconsin college songs.

Gray-haired, distinguished looking, Gov. Heil, who arrived in this country from Germany at the age of 2, was orphaned at 11 and made his own way to become one of the wealthiest men in Wisconsin, recalled how he was a graduate of "the college of hard knocks."

To him they sang, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Restaurant Raid Nets 30 In Arlington

Slot Machines And Cases of Beer Are Confiscated

Arlington County police and Federal and State agents yesterday arrested 30 persons in a raid on Harry's Blue Bird Restaurant at the south end of Highway Bridge.

Among those taken in the raid—largest ever made in Arlington County—was Const Adam, of East Clifton Terrace, Washington, described as the manager of the establishment. He was charged with operating gambling devices and maintaining a nuisance, and was released on $1,000 bond.

A 17-year-old girl, employed as a waitress, was placed in custody of the county welfare board. The 28 others, among whom were bartenders, bouncers, watresses, musicians and entertainers, were lodged in the Arlington jail. All of them had been released on bond last night. A hearing was set for Friday.

Place Raided at 3 a. m.

The raiding squad reported that 5 pistols, 22 slot machines and 75 cases of beer were confiscated. The pistols were reported to have been found under the bar.

The establishment, police said, was crowded with patrons at 3:30 a. m. when the raid took place. None of the patrons was held. Of those arrested, 28 were from Washington and 2 from Virginia.

The raid was led by Clyde W. Saunders, of the division of enforcement of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board; C. T. Griffin, of the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit, and Chief Harry Woodyard, of the Arlington police.

The establishment is located in the area known as "No Man's Land," over which the District of Columbia and Virginia authorities have fought for years. Operators of the place in the past have been free from arrest because of the problem of jurisdiction. Yesterday, however, Chief Woodyard claimed jurisdiction for Arlington County in staging the raid, and Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas said he was ready to fight any question of jurisdiction arising from the raid.

Those Arrested

Charged with illegal sale: Sidney S. Cohen, 900 G Street Southwest, bouncer; Margaret Legaras, 609 I Street Northwest, waitress; Mary Jane Hodges, 323 I Street, waitress; Elizabeth Marie Blakely, 202 L Street Southwest, waitress.

Charged with maintaining a nuisance: Sam Azarelo, 500 block of Third Street Northeast, bouncer; Nicholas James German, 320 Ninth Street Northeast, and Michael J. German, of the same address, bartenders; George E. Poppas, 212 F Street Northwest, bartender; Peter Janopaul, 807 Eighth Street Northwest, cashier; Melvin Faulkner, 1312 Eleventh Street Northwest, bouncer; Clyde Hicks, 1437 Belmont Street, bouncer; William Mamokos, 919 G Place Northwest; floor manager; Alonza J. Snowden, 1125 Monticello Avenue Northeast, orchestra leader; Leo Williams, 604 E Street Southeast, and Robert Harley, 1312 Florida Avenue Northwest.

Three entertainers also were held under the nuisance charge. They are Ben Cleveland, 1109 8 Street Northwest; Maruita A. Gordon, 1701 Seaton Place Northwest, and Arlene Washington, 1928 Seventh Street Northwest.

Hazel Manguni, 902 L Street Southeast, check girl; James Waller, 331 Virginia Avenue, and William Robinson, 485½ Cunningham Court, car parker, were also held under the nuisance charge.

Six women, unemployed, were charged with vagrancy: They are Nina Surbaugh, 610 G Street Northwest; Peggy Dwyer, 1213 Clifton Street; Christine Trumpower, 609 Princess Street, Alexandria; Edith May Parsons, 1122 Fifth Street Northwest; Mary Mitchell, 1122 Fifth Street Northeast, and Patricia Donovan, 1304 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Mizpah Council, D. of A. Installs Officers

The Mizpah Council of the Daughters of America at an installation meeting Thursday night in Friendship House elected the following officers: Bessie Person, State deputy; Wanda Grey, councilor; Nellie Cockrill, assistant State councilor; Pearl Vrelland, vice councilor; Grace Murphy, assistant vice councilor; Ella Stone, assistant recording secretary; Cora Marcy, warden; Adeline Ford, conductor; Elizabeth Tolbert, assistant junior past councilor; Laura Washburn, inside sentinel; Cora Walker, outside sentinel.

Takoma Group Honors Former Sen. Frazer

Honorary Membership In Citizens' Unit Given at Reception

The Takoma Park, Md.-D. C. Citizens Association last night extended honorary membership to former Senator Lynn J. Frazer, of North Dakota, a resident of the community for 18 years. A reception in his honor was held in the Takoma Park branch library. Frazer plans to leave the community and return to North Dakota.

In a business meeting the association opposed extension of the Saturday midnight liquor curfew to 2 a. m. Sunday. Another resolution urged Congress to restore to the pending District budget bill a $125,000 item for a stadium at the new Calvin Coolidge High School.

The proposed crosstown bus route was indorsed.

Elmer R. Weaver, of the Bureau of Standards, and R. C. Brehaut, of the Washington Gas Light Co., discussed the advantages of natural gas for the Capital area, but warned that the shift from the type of gas now used here would be too costly unless a supply of natural gas for at least 20 years could be guaranteed.

D. C. School Group To Weigh Bond Issue Proposal

The Public School Association of the District voted last night to study proposals for the floating of a municipal bond issue to furnish funds for the District school system.

A five-member committee was appointed by the association to study feasibility of a bond issue to finance new schools, repair and modernize old buildings, to acquire playgrounds and other purposes.

Among speakers at the meeting in the board room of the District Building were Mrs. William D. Leetch, of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Parent-Teacher Association, and Mrs. Margaret H. Worrell, president-general of the Wheel of Progress.

Members of the study committee are William V. Mahoney, chairman; Henry W. Austin, H. O. Craver, J. W. Barse and G. W. Hodgkins.

District's Fire Chasers Inspect Alarm System

Washington's newly organized fire fans, members of the Friendship Fire Association, looked over the District's fire-alarm headquarters last night and learned how the city's fire-alarm system works.

The fans, who used to chase fires individually, but now do it collectively, met first at the home of Dr. Edward R. Gookin, 1113 Sixteenth Street Northwest, where three new members were taken in. They are Ed Sonnaborn, Roy A. Wiseman and Benjamin C. Pope.

Protests Fiery On Hot-Dog Stand Design

Sen. Shipstead, Pastor Assail Plan to Build 'Red, White, Blue' Place Near Church

A group of protest marchers, including a Senator and several clergymen, petitioned the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday to do something about encroachment of certain types of business upon church and educational properties in the District.

The immediate irritant is "a red, white and blue, tin brick hot dog stand" which is being erected in the 1200 block of Connecticut Avenue, near Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of that congregation, protested that there should be a regulation requiring that churches be notified before buildings of questionable architecture are erected in their vicinity.

He was supported in his argument by Senator Henrik Shipstead, (Republican), of Minnesota, co-author of the Congressional act which protects Government buildings and parks against undesirable architecture facing them.

View Called Blocked Off

A representative of St. Matthew's Cathedral also complained to the planning commission that the view of the edifice, with its distinguished dome, is blocked off by the Longfellow Building, now nearing completion.

Dr. McCartney described the new Connecticut Avenue restaurant as a "raucous piece of imitation brick and tin." Harry Brooks Swett, an architect who was in the delegation, called it "a red, white and blue tin-brick hot dog stand" which desecrates the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Later, Swett told The Post that Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the Planning Commission, told the complainants President Roosevelt had issued an executive order providing that, in the future, plans for all buildings financed in whole or in part with Federal funds must be approved by the planning unit.

Planners Finish Meeting

The statement was not confirmed by Delano or staff members of the commission.

Concluding their two-day monthly meeting yesterday the planners:

Approved tentative architectural plans for the new General Accounting Office Building and plans to make Independence Avenue an 80-foot thoroughfare from First Street to Fourteenth Street Southwest.

Took under advisement preliminary plans for improvement of the Alexandria waterfront, also suggestions made by the Arlington County Planning Commission on relief of traffic congestion in the vicinity of Lee Boulevard.

Reported signing of another $20,000 in contracts for acquisition of land for the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Sheehan Named Catholic Welfare Publicity Counsel

Donald T. Sheehan, who has been engaged in a public relations capacity with several educational, social welfare and civic organizations in the Capital, was yesterday appointed director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference Bureau of Information. The appointment was announced by the Right Rev. Michael J. Raedy, N. C. W. C. general secretary.

SHEEHAN

Sheehan was formerly associated with the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and in 1938 was publicity director for the District Suffrage Committee when it conducted a referendum in 1938. He has also served the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association. At present he is chairman of the publicity committee for the Junior Board of Commerce.

Students Bid Teacher Farewell . . .

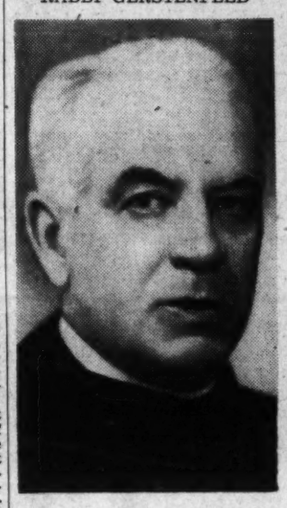
Leaders of 3 Faiths to Sound Spiritual Note at Ceremonies

RABBI GERSTENFELD

DR. JOHN CARTWRIGHT



DR. ALBERT McCARTNEY

DR. SETH BROOKS

Dr. Brooks, Rabbi Gerstenfeld and Dr. Cartwright to Speak at Freedom Court During Special Program Tomorrow

By Robert Tate Allan

Bringing a significant spiritual note to the inaugural ceremonies, and demonstrating the growing religious fraternalism of the American people, leaders of three faiths will speak tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the Court of Freedom, before the White House.

They will be Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Dr. John K. Cartwright, rector of the Immaculate Conception Church, who will speak at the request of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, and Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, and a leader in both interfaith and interdenominational work.

Presiding over the program will be Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital. This committee has stressed the basic need of religion in national and personal life.

The singing will strike an interdenominational note, as the Washington Choral Society, representing choristers from many Washington churches, presents a program under the direction of Louis A. Potter, also choir director of Calvary Methodist Church. The Navy Band will play the accompaniment. Following the policy of the Committee on Religious Life, the program will be broadcast.

As the President asks Divine guidance at services in historic St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, before the inaugural parade on Monday, people throughout the land will be asked to pray with him in a five-minute broadcast sponsored by the Committee on Religious Life.

A quartet will sing the words to the familiar hymn, 'O, God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come," and an anonymous voice will intone a two-minute prayer.

The Committee on Religious Life, of which Dr. McCartney was recently reelected general chairman, not only puts emphasis on the need of religion in national and personal life through the radio, press and public meetings, but also maintains an information service for churches of all creeds. It recently helped launch a movement to enlist the thousands of Washington's newcomers—especially young Federal workers—in wholesome religious and social activities.

One of the committee's aims is to help people become related to the type of church, kind of religious activity, and church association in which each is most interested. Founded in 1934 and organized in its present form in 1935, it had as first chairman, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

Overton Urges Increased U. S. Payment to D. C.

Chairman Overton of the Senate Subcommittee on District Appropriations, yesterday stated that the Commissioners' report on tax-exempt property in the National Capital emphasizes the need for enactment of his fiscal formula to increase the Federal payment to the District.

He pointed out that the United States property, on the basis of assessed valuation, would produce $11,691,257.91 in municipal taxes if the rate of $1.75 per $100 were applied. Thsi figure, he added, is almost a third of the general revenue now collected by the District.

27 Appointed As D. C. Police Force Is Enlarged

Appointment of 20 new police as well as 7 civilian workers for the Metropolitan force to relieve 7 police now engaged as typists, chauffeurs and operators was approved yesterday by the Commissioners.

In effect, the new plan will place 27 additional men in active police work.

Funds for the employment of the men are contained in the present appropriation because some of the force have been retired, called away for military duty, or transferred to the Capitol police force.

Although the money is only available until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, provision has been made in the 1942 budget to make the positions permanent.

Mosquitoes Are Yukon Scourge, Travelers Tell Group Here

The mosquito, linked in most minds with warmer climes, is the scourge of the Yukon, members of the National Geographic Society were told last night at Constitution Hall, by Ruth and William Albee, who spent several years in the Northland.

"The Yukon would be a veritable paradise if it were, not for the mosquitoes," they said, as they related how the traveler keeps his head covered while traveling in the day and in camp in the evening spends much of his time in the smoke of a fire. At times the mosquitoes were so annoying that even while niking a spruce bough fan was kept in motion to drive the insects away.

Albee showed motion pictures of a redwing blackbird which attached itself to his expedition. The bird, he said, relished mosquitoes and was so efficient as a mosquito chaser that he named the creature "Citronella." Albee said he made a study of mosquito control in the Yukon and would be glad to confer with anyone interested in the subject, but he did not reveal the results of his research last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Albee have been trekking around the Northland for a decade, but their lecture last night was focused on a 300-mile hike last summer through the southeastern Yukon with their two children, 5 and 8 years old. They lived off the land. During the early part of the trip concentrated foods were used but, when they were exhausted, the family diet consisted of berries, mushrooms and other vegetation of the region. Game such as rabbits, grouse and fish was plentiful.

For several weeks at a time the Albees said they saw no one. In an area blanketed with vast fields of fireweed and larkspur and verdant forests, they had no neighbors. The lecturers said even the Indians refuse to go deep into the forests because of the mosquitoes. Tuberculosis, too, is one of the reasons for the sparse population of the area. Ten years ago there were 3,000 Indians in one area the Albees traversed. Now, they say, there are only 50.

Armory's Use As an Arena To Be Asked

Proceeds of Sports Exhibits Would Go For Stadium, in Plan Of Commissioners

Authority to use the new National Guard Armory as an indoor sports arena with profits from its operation to be allocated to a fund for construction of a municipal stadium will be asked of Congress by the District Commissioners.

The plan was revealed by Commissioner John Russell Young last night at the annual District Night meeting of the Washington Board of Trade in the Mayflower Hotel.

Young also told about 1,000 Board members attending the meeting that the Commissioners intend to find some means of establishing a civil service system for District employes and to take steps to insure employment only of residents of the Capital in the city government.

Plug for Tax Loophole

He also promised clarification of the District income tax law to plug an existing loophole through which residents of the city are now able to avoid tax payment by claiming domicile in the several States.

Further to increase District tax revenues to meet mounting government costs due to the influx of national defense workers, Young said the Commissioners would try to return considerable amounts of the tax exempt properties of churches and private schools and colleges to the tax rolls. He said the Commissioners "expect a fight and may have to take each individual case to court," but, he estimated, the city could collect from $300,000 to $400,000 a year by restricting tax exemptions to property actually in use by exempted institutions.

Young said the proposal for making the Armory a profit-making institution came from Col. David McCoach, jr., the Engineer Commissioner.

Constant Use Planned

McCoach told reporters he believed Young's estimate of net earnings from the Armory of $70,000 a year to be "conservative."

The plan is to engage a competent sports arena manager to keep the Armory booked at all times with sports events and carnivals, Young said, pointing out that the building would be used by the National Guard no more than two or three nights a week.

McCoach estimated that the building would cost the District $50,000 a year to maintain unless it could be turned to some profitable use. He estimated that for basketball and hockey games it would seat 10,000 persons with a maximum seating capacity of 17,000 for such events as boxing.

McCoach said he also envisioned the Armory as a convention hall and as a place for such events as the annual automobile show. The main hall is nearly finished, McCoach said, and bids will be let next month for construction of National Guard quarters around it.

Space for Ice Rink

The hall is 400 feet long by 206 feet wide and has ample space for an artificial ice rink and for a running track with a 100-yard straightaway.

At present, the Commissioners favor District-owned land adjacent to the Armory at the foot of East Capitol Street as a stadium site.

In explaining contemplated legislation for a District Civil Service, Young said the Commissioners have not decided whether to ask the Civil Service Commission to conduct examinations or to operate a separate selective system. He said the latter plan might be too expensive.

Young gave "100 per cent" indorsement to a program of District legislation outlined by James E. Colliflower, board president.

Colliflower Plan

The program:

Absorption of increased expenditures certain to result from expanding municipal services in a rapidly growing community by eliminating income tax exemptions, increasing the Federal contribution to the District budget and further lowering the unemployment compensation tax.

Acceptance of District residents "as full-fledged American citizens . . . given the Constitutional right of voting for President and Vice President and sending Representatives and Senators to participate in the formulation of our own national policies."

Pointing to the city's phenomenal population growth, accelerated by the defense emergency, Colliflower said the board now estimates the District's metropolitan area has a population "exceeding 1,000,000."

McCoach agreed with Colliflower that greater expenditures for sewers, water, streets, police and fire protection can be expected. The Commissioner said the 1942 budget was planned so as to permit expansion of these facilities without asking Congress for a deficiency appropriation.

Pre-Inaugural Services Set For Roosevelt

Will Attend Rites At St. John's Before Ceremony

Inaugural ceremonies here on Monday will begin with a deep spiritual note, as President Roosevelt worships in St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," before riding down Pennsylvania Avenue for his induction into a third term.

The brief rites in the historic edifice at Lafayette Square, where many of President Roosevelt's predecessors have knelt in prayer, will last from 10:30 to 11 a. m., being conducted by Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector. Assisting will be the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Hyde Park, and Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church here. The President attends both churches.

The St. John's full choir of men and boys, led by Arthur Howes, will sing.

People throughout the land will be asked "to pray with the President" through a five-minute radio broadcast sponsored by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital. A quartet will sing "O God, Our Help in Ages Past, Our Hope for Years to Come," and an anonymous voice will intone a two-minute prayer. Playing of the National Anthem by a Service band will close the broadcast.

Special Prayers Asked

Churches of all demoniations throughout the city have been asked to include special prayers for the President and the United States Government in their services tomorrow. The Inaugural will keynote many sermons. At 2:30 p. m. the Committee on Religious Life will present a program at the Court of Freedom in front of the White House, with leaders of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths speaking (see separate story elsewhere in paper). The program will be broadcast.

St. Albans Parish Plans $120,000 Building Program

The congregation of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, on the Washington Cathedral grounds at Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest, will launch a $120,000 building expansion project in the near future, The Post learned yesterday.

Enlargement of the present church and religious education building will be features of plans, which is still in its preliminary stage, according to Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of the parish. A rough sketch was shown the congregation Sunday.

Complete details of the enterprise, he emphasized, will not be determined until the conclusion of a building fund drive soon to be initiated.

"Mother" church of St. David's Chapel and St. Patrick's Chapel here, St. Alban's had its inception in 1854. Additions to the original church were made in 1914, 1920 and 1922.

"JESUS, SAVIOUR, PILOT ME"
REV. EDWARD HOPPER

Jesus, Saviour, pilot me
Over life's tempestuous sea,
Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rock and treacherous shoal;
Chart and compass come from Thee,
Jesus, Saviour, pilot me!

This mariner's hymn has for long years appealed to the hearts of singing seamen wherever they may be. It was written by Rev. Hopper while pastor of the Mariner's Church at New York harbor — "The Church of the Sea and Land."

Christian Mission Speakers To Address Clubs and Schools

DR. PEALE BISHOP KERN REV. BURKHART

Schedule of Talks Is Announced; Program to Get Off in Full Swing Feb. 3, With Speech by Dr. Heaton

By Robert Tate Allan

(This is seventh in a series of special stories regarding the National Christian Mission, which arrives here on February 2 with a team of religious leaders. Another will appear on January 25.)

Executing its plan of "reaching the unreached" in every phase of human activity, the National Christian Mission will not only function in local churches, but also in service clubs, high schools and colleges and other institutions.

As the mission sessions get off in full swing on Monday, February 3, following mass meetings on the previous night, Dr. George Heaton, Lynchburg, Va., clergyman, will address the Y's Men's Club at the Central Y. M. C. A. at 6 p. m., and the Rev. Roy Burkhart, popular youth counselor of Columbus, Ohio, the New Comers Club at the Carlton Hotel at 12:30 p. m.

Tuesday's schedule will include messages before the Early Birds at the Willard Hotel at 8 a. m. by the Rev. Vincent Norman Peale, minister of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City and member of the National Christian Mission committee; the Civitan Club at the Mayflower at 12:30 p. m. by the Rev. C. Jeffares McCombe, pastor of the St. Paul's and St. Andrew's Methodist Church, New York City, and official of the Federal Council of Churches, and before the Optimists Club at the Mayflower at the same hour by the Rev. Theodore F. Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Richmond, Southern leader.

Lions to Hear Bishop Kern

Bishop Paul B. Kern, Methodist prelate, will address the Lions Club on Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. at the Mayflower.

At the same hour, Dr. Harry N. Holmes, associate secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, will appear before the Rotarians at the Willard; Dr. Adolf Keller, leader of cooperative Christian work in Europe, before the Monarch Club at the Lee House, and the Rev. Mr. Adams, before the American Business Club at the Hamilton.

The members of the Kiwanis Club will welcome Dr. Holmes on Thursday at the Mayflower, and the Cosmopolitan Club will hear Dr. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Episcopal cleric, that day at the Carlton. Dr. Keller will address the Round Table on Friday at the National Press Club, and Dr. Roy Vale, of Indianapolis, the Reciprocity Club at the Mayflower. Dr. Roger T. Nooe, of Nashville, will talk on Thursday at 12:15 p. m. at the Rockville Rotary Club. Another mission program is being arranged for the Silver Spring Lions.

Col. William O. Tufts, prominent layman of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, is handling arrangements for the men's service club functions, and Mrs. Frank Linzel, president of the Washington Council of Church Women, the women's clubs.

Miss Muriel Lester, the Jane Addams, of London, will address the Zonta Club luncheon on Wednesday, February 5, at 12:30 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Hilda L. Ives, professor at Andover-Newton Theological School, Newton Center, Mass., the Soroptimists at the same time at the Willard.

Schools to Participate

According to Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer and Dr. William S. Abernethy, virtually every high school, college and university in the Washington metropolitan area will participate in the mission. They are respective chairmen of those groups.

The National Christian Mission, which closes its Philadelphia sessions tomorrow with giant mass meetings, then moves on to Louisville, Ky., for a week, where the speakers will include three local men—Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; Dr. Warren D. Bowman, of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, and Dr. Abernethy. The mission team will spend a week in Pittsburgh before arriving here on February 2.

Stanley Bell, chairman of the radio committee of the local mission, indicated yesterday that daily broadcasts will be heard here during the mission, beginning with an address by Dr. E. Stanley Jones on Sunday morning, February 2.

(Next week: The mission in high schools, colleges and universities.)

Princess Rides 60 Miles, Tells Why She Wouldn't Leave U. S.

Driven to San Francisco, She Is Taken Back to Palo Alto for Closed Hearing; Officials Here to Announce Decision

By the Associated Press

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 17.—Hungarian Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe-Waldenburg rode 60 miles in an ambulance today before telling a closed deportation hearing in her own apartment why she ignored an order to leave this country by January 11.

The princess, described by her physician as highly upset, was driven the 30 miles to San Francisco, where the hearing originally had been scheduled. After a hurried consultation between her attorneys and immigration officers, however, the private ambulance brought her back.

I. F. Wixon, new district director of immigration in San Francisco, said he did not know how soon a decision would be announced by Washington officials, to whom a transcript of the proceedings will be sent.

The princess, described in the British House of Commons as a Nazi sympathizer, has been traveling in the United States about a year on a visitor's permit. An extension was denied by the Justice Department.

Dr. E. C. Ceding, medical officer for the United States Public Health Service, said the princess, who denied Nazi sympathies, was extremely nervous, but appeared in better condition than when he examined her January 6.

At the hearing were two attorneys for the princess, two for the Government and a secretary. Press and public were excluded.

The princess is free on $25,000 bond.

Wallaces to Dine On Iowa Delicacies

Henry A. Wallace, Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, next Tuesday night, will spend that evening eating Iowa ham and chicken with the folks from back home at the Shoreham Hotel.

The Iowa State Society will be host. Five hundred persons are expected to attend the dinner, reception and dance and among them will be Wallace's three children, Jean, Robert and Henry Brown Wallace; James Wallace, and John Wallace, his brothers, of Des Moines and St. Petersburg, Fla., and his sister, Mrs. Angus McLay, of Birmingham, Mich.

The dinner will begin at 7 p. m., will be followed by a floor show and dancing until 1 a. m. The Iowa Senators and Representatives in Congress will attend, along with former Representative and Mrs. Fred Biermann, of Iowa. Iowa food and souvenirs will be offered.

On the dinner committee are Mrs Guy Gillette, wife of the Iowa Senator, Mrs. C. William Ramseyer and Mrs. E. A. Merritt.

Georgia Chain-Gang Fugitive May Again Face Extradition

State Authorities Begin, Then Drop, Move; Talmadge May Await Inauguration Of Charles Edison as New Jersey Governor

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Jan. 17.—Georgia authorities today began, and then dropped, a move to extradite Robert Elliott Burns, much publicized fugitive now living in Union, N. J.

Prison Commissioner Vivian L. Stanley announced Georgia would make no attempt to extradite Burns "at this time."

Earlier today, Gov. Eugene Talmadge said New Jersey had reversed its long-held stand and would return Burns to the prison system he attacked in a book, "I Am a Fugitive From a Georgia Chain Gang," which was later made into a movie.

Stanley did not expand on his statement, but it was issued soon after Gov. A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, had said in Newark that he was not prepared to approve extradition of the convicted robber, whom he saved from return to Georgia in 1932, after a sensational hearing in which Burns charged many cruelties in the Georgia prison system.

Burns was sentenced to six to ten years in 1922 for a grocery store holdup which netted $5.85 in cash and a pistol. He escaped after two months on a chain gang and was recaptured in 1929 in Chicago, where he had become a highly paid publisher of business magazines.

He escaped again in 1930 and before his recapture in 1932 wrote the book in which he charged inhuman treatment of prisoners in the chain gangs, now officially abolished by Georgia in favor of chainless work camps. Burns now is secretary of the New Jersey Tax Adjustment Association.

After Stanley's announcement today, an aide to Gov. Talmadge explained that in view of Moore's stand no extradition would be attempted now. Moore leaves office next Tuesday to be succeeded by Charles Edison. Georgia officials would not say if a renewed attempt to get Burns would be made later.

ITU Strike Ties Up New Haven Papers

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 17 (AP).—Two of the Nation's oldest newspapers, the New Haven Journal-Courier and the Register, did not publish today because approximately 100 compositors struck for higher wages and vacations with pay.

The Register management said the strike affecting New Haven's only daily publications came after a conference "concerning the interpretation of the terms of an existing agreement."

Elevator Strike Cause Of Walking Marathon

New York, Jan. 17 (INS).—Thousands of office workers late today were forced to plod wearily down the stairs of a Broadway skyscraper—some of them 45 stories—when 80 women elevator operators and men belonging to the Building Service Employes Union walked out in a demand for higher wages.

The 14 elevators in the building stopped running before the noon hour and hundreds on the upper floors were marooned, and had lunches hauled up to them by ropes.

Willkie's Chance To Pick GOP Head Held Weakened

Republican opponents of President Roosevelt's foreign policy contended yesterday that Wendell L. Willkie's indorsement of the Administration's lease-lend British Aid Bill had weakened his chance of picking the new chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., the House minority leader, plans to tender his resignation as party chairman at a National Committee meeting late in March. It was reported today that Charles B. Goodspeed, treasurer, also may resign because of ill health.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, Congressional opponent of the lease-lend measure, said yesterday that Willkie's indorsement of the legislation "was just about what we might have expected—it was just about like his campaign speeches in behalf of the election of President Roosevelt."

Nye said "there certainly will be an effort" to prevent Willkie from "dictating Martin's successor." He added that those Republicans opposing Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy would seek the election of a chairman who shared their views or who "at least isn't supporting those of Mr. Roosevelt."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'North West Mounted Police,' Earle, Is a Vivid Technicolor Melodrama

Stellar Cast Makes De Mille Film One Of Best of Kind; Brief Stage Revue

"NORTH WEST MOUNTED POILCE," Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor picturization for Paramount of an original screen play by Alan Le May, Jesse Lasky, jr., and C. Gardner Sullivan, costarring Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll, with Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, George Bancroft, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Montgu Love, Walter Hampden., Lon Chaney, jr., Francis McDonald, George E. Stone, Willard Robertson, Regis Toomey, Chief Thundercloud, Julia Faye and scores more. Directed by Mr. DeMille. At the Earle Theater.

In "North West Mounted Police," his sixty-fourth production and his first photographed entirely in Technicolor, Cecil B. DeMille has perpetuated his flair for pageantry and combined with it a superior eye for sweeping action and a warm heart for romance. Nor has he neglected the vital elements of comedy, pathos and surprise. Overflow audiences at the Earle Theater yesterday attested their enthusiasm over Mr. DeMille's all-embracing dramatic instinct.

BELL

While loosely grounded on fact, "North West Mounted Police" betrays no impulse to sacrifice tense, melodramatic interest to the fetish of strict historical accuracy. The result is all in the picture's favor. Action begins with and revolves swiftly around the Riel Rebellion in 1885, in which the Indians and halfbreeds attempted to disrupt Canada under outlaw leadership. The revolt was put down by a meager band of 50 of the North West Mounted and was as short as they could make it. It was long enough, however, to supply Alan Le May, Jesse Lasky, jr., and that veteran scenarist, C. Gardner Sullivan, ample material for one of the most vivid and most generally exciting films its producer-director ever has brought to the screen.

The story—too long for detailed outline, which would be unfair to future audiences, anyway—is one of heroism, treachery, romance and passion, set off in fiery action against backgrounds of magnificent natural splendor. It sticks snugly to its knitting, with no more applause for the mounties than it accords the lone representative of the Texas Rangers, who wanders into the plot in quest of a notorious killer in whom the mounties also feel a keen and retributive interest. The solitary ranger not only barges into the business of the Canadian constabulary, but equally into the private affaire d'amour, as we say in the pure French-Canuck, of one of its head men. The object of their joint affections is the post nurse, whose brother has fallen under the predatory fascinations of a halfbreed firebrand of the forests, whose father is as black a villain as you wouldn't care to meet.

Out of this basic situation, Mr. DeMille has fashioned a rainbow melodrama that "has everything." He also has assembled that sort of cast for its interpretation.

Ostensibly the star of the picture, Gary Cooper moves his role of "the Westerner" acros the northern boundary and turns in one of his most appealing, most effective and most laconic performances. As three of the most prominent of the "red coats," Preston Foster, Robert Preston and Regis Toomey register emphatically in the tradition of their calling and Montagu Love is no mean figure as their commander, up until the time when an angry bullet makes Foster his successor in command of the garrison. This Foster fellow fits his role as well as his uniform fits him—not a wrinkle. Madeleine Carroll, as the genesis of the drama's romance, is a lovely and an heroic figure of feminine fortitude and Paulette Goddard, as Louvette Corbeau, the wanton of the woods, surpasses her every earlier portrayal before the cameras. Comedy — and pathos, too — is supplied by Lynne Overman, as a "Scotch-Indian" guide, and Akim Tamiroff, his friendliest enemy. Villainy is epitomized in the character of Corbeau, played with consummate cussedness by George Bancroft. Walter Hampden is a strangely authentic Indian chieftain in an almost impenetrable makeup. These are only those most conspicuously cast. All the others are just as good.

In his brief, half-hour "Chins Up" stage revue, Harry Anger has managed to preserve something of the atmosphere of the feature picture by putting the Roxyettes through a "March of the Amazons" tap routine in the discreetly abbreviated uniform of the North West Mounted. But the stars of the business are that perfectionist among dancers, George Tapps, and that boisterous blond songstress, Stella Ryan. Both were hits yesterday. So were Eileen and Joan Ritter in their song numbers and the Roxyettes in their supporting ensembles.

Now all you have to do is try to get in.

A Renegade Reports for Duty!

FOSTER, COOPER AND CARROLL, with Robert Preston the recumbent victim of a lethal bullet, as they appear in Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production of "North West Mounted Police," currently being shown on the screen at the Earle Theater. The story is interpreted by a superlative cast that includes Paulette Goddard

Freighter Battles Submarine In Met's "Escape to Glory"

By Richard L. Coe

"ESCAPE TO GLORY." Columbia picturization of a story by Sidney Biddell and Frederic Frank, adapted to the screen by D. J. Wolfson, with Pat O'Brien, Constance Bennett, John Halliday, Melville Cooper, Alan Baxter, Edgar Buchanan, Marjorie Gateson, Francis Pierlot, Jessie Busley, Stanley Logan, Frank Sully and Erwin Kaiser. Directed by John Brahm. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

A freighter is loaded with gold bullion while darkened decks shield the fact from onlookers. War threatens Europe in the late summer of 1939; Atlantic crossings are hard to get and, with a full complement of passengers, the small vessel slips out into the night.

Such is the setting for the Metropolitan's new picture, "Escape to Glory," a melodrama with smacking good suspense, shrewd use of detail and several exciting episodes that make it an engrossing, if minor, film.

On the freighter are the travelers custom describes as "typical:" a cool, realistic American soldier of fortune; a beautiful girl who, from choice, has taken "the easiest way;" her employer, a crooked jurist; a hunted criminal, who seeks revenge on the lawyer before landing in America; a university couple; a scientist who believes in the universality of man, only to fall back, in a crisis, on the ties of his fatherland; a society woman who doesn't like the ship she's on nor the company she's in.

Two days out, war meanwhile having been declared, a submarine threatens them. The freighter is English, the submarine German. The vessels fight it out. The resulting battle of fog, force, personalities and skill forms the basis of the action.

Credit for the successful mood of suspense and thrill goes largely to Director John Brahm (he did similar service for the memorable "Let Us Live" two years ago) and scenarist P. J. Wolfson. With the suggestive details, the sailing of the small ship (small, as compared with the greyhounds one associates with films and transatlantic crossings) is made to seem rife with possibilities.

Once the ship is out to sea and the passengers know war has been declared, there is a lessening of pace that picks up again as soon as the U-boat makes its appearance. The passengers don't know whether their captain will fight, and it's a sickening shock to them when he does. By far the most exciting portions of the film are devoted, not to their familiar reactions, but to the details of the struggle itself.

Pat O'Brien, Constance Bennett, John Halliday, Melville Cooper and Alan Baxter play these leads with no attempts to make any more of them than the stock figures they are. O'Brien, by the way, seems to regain at least a decade of youth with a mustache and Miss Bennett's return to the screen finds her looking as frail, blond and self-contained as ever, if a trifle older.

Other events on the Metropolitan screen include stunning newsreel clips of London's fire of December 29 and several desultory shorts.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 17.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Moss Hart phoned Gertrude Lawrence last night to learn whether she was well enough to appear in the dress rehearsal of "Lady in the Dark." Dick Aldrich, Miss Lawrence's husband, assured the author that she was too ill and could not appear . . . "Well, this is something which should make Gertie leap out of her sick bed," said Moss. "Tell her that, for the dress-rehearsal tonight, I'll play her role." . . . And so Moss Hart mounted the stage, and read Gertrude Lawrence's line. In one scene of this, the most technically involved play which ever has come to Broadway, the theater is darkened, and four revolving stages are set in motion. The stage manager took the bewildered playwright's hand, and guided him to safety, to avoid his being crushed by the whirling sets . . . "God!" shrieked the author, "who'd be crazy enough to write something like this?

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Tuesday night Milton Berle waited outside the Shubert Theater for the curtain to ring down on the Al Jolson show . . . At 11:30 the impatient Berle enter the theater, and waited in the rear of the orchestra—while Jolson remained onstage, in the finale during which he sings all the old songs requested by the audience . . . At 11:45, Berle could restrain himself no longer. He walked down the aisle, told the orchestra conductor: "Wait a moment." Then he looked up at Joyce Mathews, and asked: "Coming?" . . . "Berle," Jolson ordered, "get backstage and wait for her there. The show isn't over yet." And so Berle left, and went backstage.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: The new Willie Howard-Luella Gear musical, "Crazy With the Heat," which opened Tuesday night, will close on Saturday. It was almost as big a financial flop as was Leonard Silman's ill-fated "All in Fun" . . . Last night Kurt Kasznar, who produced the show, received a wire from Silman. It read: "Move over."

RADIO DEPARTMENT: The Columbia Broadcasting System decided to enlarge its foreign news service by including the Orient. William Dunn was assigned to go to Japan and assemble a staff there, so that its nightly foreign-news roundup would feature broadcasts from Tokio, as well as from London, Berlin and Rome . . . Dunn flew to California, then took a ship to Honolulu, and then a plane to the Orient . . . He arrived in Tokio and assembled his staff of American newsmen. On the next day the Propaganda Ministry announced that henceforth all press conferences will be conducted only in the Japanese language.

PET DEPARTMENT: Ben Finkel, the columnist for the Daily Forward, was observed staring at an old, dirty mongrel on a street in the lower East Side of New York. He called a cab, took the dog inside, and ordered the hackie to drive around the block . . . After the ride Finkel released the mongrel and went home . . . "Why did you do such a strange thing?" he was asked . . . "I'll tell you why," he explained. "I looked at that poor animal, and I said to myself: 'What chance has a dog to ride in a cab?'"

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Ralph Ingersoll has decided to change one of the policies of PM. At the end of the month, that paper will have only one edition each day . . . He believes that his readers buy the paper because of the regular features, and not for any spotnews competition with the other papers.

REALTY DEPARTMENT: Victor Mature, the Hollywood star who refused a number of lucrative film assignments in favor of a role in "Lady in the Dark," was assigned to his new dressing room at the Alvin Theater last night . . . "Any time you think you're a star," Danny Kaye told him, taking Mature to the new quarters being prepared for Gertrude Lawrence, "take a look at this place and learn what stardom means" . . . Three large dressing rooms have been dismantled and made into one large room for Miss Lawrence. The quarters include a special bedroom, in case she should decide to remain at the theater overnight . . . The theater-owners did this for Miss Lawrence, because she opened the Alvin Theater in "Treasure Gal," and this is her first time back.

POETRY DEPARTMENT: The 93-year-old August Heckscher took a train to Florida, and arrived there without any discomfiture. He immediately began to write a poem—this one: "The wars in the world are creating distress . . . They show us how hollow is all we profess. . . . What to believe now's our daily task . . . And, incidentally which editor to ask."

The Bombshell Latest Star for Celebrations

Torrid-voiced Carmen Miranda was yesterday added to the list of Twentieth Century-Fox celebrities coming to Washington for the President's Birthday Celebration on January 30.

The tantalizing South American songstress has just completed "Road to Rio," due for early release, after scoring a brilliant success in "Down Argentine Way." Carmen skyrocketed to Hollywood fame after winning American attention on Broadway as the star of "Streets of Paris." Her "Souse American way" is a lyrical classic in the rumba library.

With Miss Miranda will come two of the studio's glamour girls, Kay Aldridge, who also appeared in "Down Argentine Way" and Lynn Bari.

First of the Hollywood stars coming for the celebration arrived today. He is Melvyn Douglas, who is accompanied by his wife, professionally Helen Gahagan, Democratic national committeewoman from California. During their Washington visit they will be the house guests of Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes.

Edward G. Robinson, Warner Brothers star, is already in Washington and plans to remain until after the birthday balls. His national radio broadcast, with Ona Munson as his leading woman, will originate from Washington on January 29.

Constance Moore, of Paramount, has been added to the visiting star list.

Tickets go on sale today for the midnight shows to be presented on Thursday evening, January 30, at 11:30 o'clock at the Earle and Capitol Theaters as an important part of Washington's celebration of the President's birthday. Price of admission to either theater will be $1.50.

John J. Payette, general manager of Warner Brothers, and Carter Barron, division manager of Loew's Theaters, have booked special shows for that week. Each theater will present the combined stage shows of both houses. In addition, the patrons will also greet all the famous Hollywood personalities who will come here for the celebration.

Tickets for either the Earle or the Capitol are available at any Warner Brothers or Loew's Theater in Washington.

Gags Clarify Bard's Comedy

In an effort to bring coherence to one of the most complicated plots of the universe, Catholic University's Harlequins are currently shedding no little light on the mysteries of Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors." The boys and girls succeed, and how, and the result is an ingenious parade of gags, clever costuming and "stylized" acting against a rollicking good set by Ralph Brown. The production concludes its run tomorrow evening in the University Theater on the campus.

In their direction, Walter F. Kerr and Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan have resorted to another slick measure. Apparently figuring that the involved situations might tire the ordinary auditor, they have employed a completely stylized technique. Gestures and eyes play a dominant role in the conception, a method of the past, to be sure, but daringly amusing in our contrasting day.

Leo Brady and Lionel Booth are slickly made up actually to look alike as the twin Dromios. You can't tell 'em apart. Similarly, James Graham and Stanley Nagoski look enough alike to be the twin Antipholuses. Margaret Mary Edmonston is a striking Adriana and Marion Wolberg a lovely Luciana.

Background music has been composed for this production by Calvin Le Compte, who accompanies the play on an orgatron. Others in the all-student cast include Edmund Butler, Joseph Rankin, Thomas McKenna, Jean Boyd, Kay Becker, Arthur Mullen, Audrey Neff, Frank Murphy, Ned Viehmeyer, George Burst, Emmet Murphy, James Cosgrove, Leo Houck, Patricia Schaub.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 17.

Producer David Hempstead, who did such a swell job with Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle," is now in New York buying the screen rights to the latest Broadway hit, "My Sister, Eileen," also for Ginger. It's interesting to note that they could have bought the rights to the story for a mere song when it ran in a national magazine as a series of sketches, just as they could have done with "Life With Father."

"Virginia," which stars Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray, introduced Stirling Hayden, who's one of the handsomest, most virile blond youths I've seen, with loads of charm. His part and Fred's should have been reversed, because he looked like a Southern gentleman and MacMurray like a Northerner.

With so much gab going on about the Willie Wylers, it might turn into something serious if she decides to leave him again and go to New York to do another play.

The day after Ciro's was packed to the rafters, welcoming back Emil Coleman, it was packed with plumbers trying to retrieve the diamond bracelet Mary Livingstone dropped down the wrong place. That was one time Mary's nervousness lost her a dividend.

The night Nelson Eddy sings at the White House for the President's inauguration, he'll also ecelbrate his second anniversary.

What a time Jimmy Stewart will have showing his family about when they arrive here in a few weeks. This time his dad and two sisters come along with his mother. She's been here before . . . Foreign Actor S. Z. Sakall certainly went out of his way to simplify his name. He was born Eugene Gero.

They were shooting around Priscilla Lane for a couple of days on "Miss Wheelwright." She had a cut lip. I said cut—not bit.

Ginger Rogers, her mother, and the Bill Powells stopped in at the Mocambo Cafe, which is very attractive, when a candid cameraman wanted a picture, and said to Powell. "Where's your mustache?" Bill got an eyebrow pencil out of his wife's purse and painted on the largest one you've ever seen, and said, "Go ahead—shoot!" When finished, he said, "Now, don't you think I should get some sort of prize for being the most cooperative actor in Hollywood?"

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Are you curious about what happens to former big leaguers? The evidence is that a considerable share of them catch on very nicely in the minors—as managers. The pay isn't much, and the chances are that when they drop below the Class Double A leagues, the backsliders' salaries as minor league managers don't approximate the first wage they were paid as big leaguers. But it's a living.

POVICH

With nothing more weighty on what we are pleased to call our mind, we were recalling the list of big league stars who have clung to baseball as managers in the minors. Want to go down the line with us, quickly?

There's Heinie Groh, for example. There wasn't supposed to be a better third baseman in the National League when he was with the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants. He could field and he could hit, and his famed bottle-shaped bat set him apart from the common herd. Groh has been out of the big leagues for 15 years, but you'll find him today managing Green Bay in the Class D Wisconsin League. And who is there to say that any major league club is commanded by a better baseball brain than Groh is giving to his little Class D team.

Down at Thomasville, Ga., a former batting champion of the American League is managing the Class D club of that town in the Georgia-Florida League. He's Dale Alexander, who as a member of the Red Sox led all the league's hitters seven years ago. Alexander never could play first base acceptably, but they couldn't bench his bat. Alex was never one of the great minds of the big leagues, but his Thomasville boys should be getting some expert tips on hitting. Dale, incidentally, was the first baseball man to detect pitching ability in First Baseman Sidney Hudson two years ago in the Florida State League.

Now managing Decatur, Ill., in the Three-Eye League is Dibrell Williams, who spent five years at second base for the Athletics and another season with the Red Sox. Dib could hit well enough, but they couldn't tolerate his fielding in the majors. He hung around for as long as six years because Connie Mack had unloaded his good infielders to help the pay roll.

Remember Lance Richbourg? If you lived in a major league city you probably saw him in somebody's outfield. He was with seven major league clubs in his time, five in the National League. He had a brief fling with Washington along about 1924, and the Red Sox came up with him a couple of years later. He was a big guy who had the tough luck to break his leg, and passed out of the majors because he was too slow. You'll find him today managing the Tallahassee Club in the Georgia-Florida League.

One of the better minor league managerial jobs is now owned by a former Georgetown University star. Clyde Sukeforth, who was the best catcher in Georgetown's history, playing with the unbeaten Hoya team of 1923, later made good as a catcher for Cincinnati and Brooklyn. He's doing very nicely now as manager of Brooklyn's Montreal farm. Sukey couldn't hit much, but as a catcher he was the pitchers' delight.

Down at Rocky Mount in the Piedmont League last year it was Playing Manager Heinie Manush. This year it is Manager Manush, of the Greenville Club, the new Red Sox farm. Washington fans will always have a fond memory of Heinie, who batted the Nats into their 1933 pennant. With Joe Cronin batting fourth on that team and Manush batting fifth, the Nats had one of the greatest hit-and-run duos in the big leagues. Heinie for all his bulk was not a long distant hitter. He had abnormally short arms that reduced his leverage. But he could get a piece of that ball, and for his pounds the chances are he was the fastest big leaguer in the majors in his prime.

The man who was probably the most famous big leaguer in the history of the Pittsburgh Pirates is now a minor league manager at Chattanooga. He's KiKi Cuyler, of course, and he won a pennant with Chattanooga in 1939. Whenever they bring up the subject of throwing arms, you'll hear National Leaguers say that Cuyler could outthrow Joe DiMaggio, for distance and accuracy, on the best day that DiMaggio ever had.

There's another old National Leaguer up at Albany as manager. He was famous not only because he was a member of the pennant-winning Cardinals of 1926, but because he was perhaps the first infielder in the big leagues to wear glasses on the field. That would be, of course, George (Specs) Torporcer.

We're beginning to get wrapped up in this thing. Remember Bobby La Motte, who used to play the infield for the Tigers, the Nats and the Browns? He's doing nicely as manager at Charleston, S. C., in the Sally League. And another former Nat, former White Sox, former Brown led the Baltimore Orioles to the first profitable year they have had in several seasons. That was Manager Alphonse (Tommy) Thomas, who used to have one of the most deceptive fast balls and worst-looking wind-ups in the pitching business.

We could go on an on. Lefty O'Doul, the old Giant, is managing San Francisco, nad Johnny Neun, the former Tiger first baseman, is boss at Newark. Rogers Hornsby is back in baseball as manager at Oklahoma City and Red Kress landed himself one of the better managing jobs at St. Paul. We just thought maybe you didn't know a few of these things.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Honolulu, Jan. 17.—On that fabled strip of sand known as the Beach of Waikiki, we met Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kilmer today. And learned from the widow of the late great turfman that she plans to race under her own name next year with a stable built around the get of her fine mare, Suntica. Suntica has been bred to Challenger II, sire of Challedon, and after that will be bred to Seabiscuit and old Sun Beau, a Kilmer immortal who for so long held the record for purse income.

CONSIDINE

Mrs. Kilmer, who is here with her niece, Jacqueline Quinn, had planned to join forces with the late Mrs. Elizabeth Bosley, until the tragic death of the woman who had owned the equally tragic Chase Me. Now she'll go it alone with a small stable which will carry the old Kilmer colors. It will be a fresh start, for all of her late husband's horses were disposed of not long ago.

She told us some more about our favorite horse, Exterminator, too. The incomparable Mr. Bones is alive at Remlik, in Virginia, at the hearty old age of 26. You talk to an old horseman about the great all-time American thoroughbreds and Exterminator's name always will come up . . . Sometimes ahead of Man O' War's. A lot of them will tell you that there never was a horse as good, or as game, or as smart as old Mr. Bones.

They'll tell you that he used to watch the starter out of the corner of one eye . . . That he was inconsolable when he was beaten . . . That he was as amenable as a puppy and that he never complained, though he might be asked to go 6½ furlongs one day and two miles a week later.

"He broke my heart the way he acted at the disposal sale," Mrs. Kilmer told us, lying on the sand in the shade of a beach umbrella. "When the vans pulled away he knew they were going for good. His head got lower and lower. He had come to know so many of the young horses. They had to pass by his stall on the way to workouts each morning, and he actually grieved—I mean it—over their going. It left him with only old Peanuts to keep him company. Peanuts has been his stable mate, oh, for 15 years or so. They're old men now, as horse ages go. About 70 or 80. I don't know what Exterminator will do when Peanuts passes along. It will be as hard to pick a new stable mate for him as it is to pick a very close friend. Exterminator will have to decide . . . When the time comes.

We asked her why so great a horse had been gelded.

"Well . . . It's simple enough," she said. "He was a man-eater as a 2-year-old. He comes from the fractious McGee Line. So he was gelded. Of course no one ever had any idea what he'd become. Mr. Kilmer, you know, bought him mainly for the purpose of having our colors in the 1918 Kentucky Derby. Our star, Sun Briar, wasn't ready to go. Henry McDaniel, our trainer, had wintered him at Belmont and there just wasn't time to get him in condition for the Derby.

"So Mr. Kilmer began looking around for a horse in condition and he heard about Exterminator. He liked his looks and bought him from Cal Milan for $9,500 and two Ogden mares. It was about three weeks before the Derby. As you know, he won it. Paid $61.20. Mr. Kilmer never bet much on the horses, but that day he bet $100 on Exterminator to win. In all, that sweet old horse ran 100 times, and finished first 50 times. He won the Saratoga Cup four times, the Belmont Gold Cup four times. And you can say this—if he had had a good ride every time he started he never would have been beaten. The Derby was worth only $14,000 the year he won it, and the other stakes were proportionately small. At that he won more than $250,000.

Zivic Stops Armstrong in 12th; Retains Title

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

His features battered, Henry Armstrong back-pedals from the punches of Fritzie Zivic in Madison Square Garden last night. A technical knockout in the twelfth round ended Armstrong's hopes of regaining the world welterweight title he lost to Zivic last October

GameColored Boy Retires After Defeat

Both Eyes Slashed And Closed, Henry Is Forced to Quit as Big Crowd Watches

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Jan. 17.—The miracle man of boxing, little Henry Armstrong, came to the end of the road tonight.

The spirit and the heart of the greatest little fighting man of our generation were willing, but the machine had run down, and Armstrong was stopped in 12 rounds by Fritzie Zivic as he made one last, gallant try to win back his world welterweight championship.

Afterward Armstrong sat in his dressing room and announced that this was the end, that he was hanging up the gloves for good.

"Fellows," he said, "my eyes just won't hold up any more, so I'm retiring. I'll go into the wine business."

Record Crowd Sees Battle

He was stopped with both eyes cut, half blind from slashing left jabs and ripping uppercuts, but still pouring in, trying to land one last, desperate punch that might produce another of his fistic miracles.

And he was stopped, in what may have been the last competitive appearance of his glorious career, as the biggest crowd in Garden fistic history was on hand to wish him hail and farewell.

Every seat was taken, and it bulged at the seams from the standees in a crowd of 23,190, a figure never before equaled in the 16-year history of the Garden. The gross gate was $78,242.

While each fan was rooting for his choice, it is doubtful if even every Zivic supporter didn't feel a tear in his eyes and a lump in his throat as "Li'l Perpetual Motion" finally ran down. The only man in ring history ever to hold three championships simultaneously—welterweight, lightweight and featherweight—Henry was the favorite in the betting at 5 to 6. That's how they regarded him, despite the fact he was beaten badly last October by the same Pittsburgh 'slasher" he fought tonight, that he was spotting Fritzie more than five pounds—140½ to 145¾—and that even his sincerest boosters admitted he was on the way toward the end of his career.

New Tactics Fail Henry

And he went out there, tirelessly trying to win for these boosters and for his manager, Eddie Mead, who, for the first time in their relations together, was too ill to work in the little buzzsaw's corner.

Armstrong tried to do it tonight differently than ever before. He stood up slightly straighter, and, for probably the first time in his rip-roaring, tear-in-and-flail career, he had a though for defense. But his plan didn't work. He just couldn't get out of the way of Fritzie's straight lefts or those short, cutting rights. He tried a crouch and a bob and weave, but it didn't help. He tried covering his face with his right arm. Neither did that. He even tried backing off and boxing at long range as amazed fans muttered, "What's Henry doing?"

That was even worse. By the

Jim Demaret Upset By 'Chick' Harbert

Startling Reversals Recorded in Open Match Play in San Francisco Tourney; Jimmy Thomson Defeats Sammy Snead

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 17.—Upsets were a "dime a dozen" today in thrill-packed first and second rounds of the $5,000 San Francisco match play Open golf tournament.

Young Melvin "Chick" Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., a pro of one year's standing making his first winter tournament swing, produced the second round fireworks. He eliminated the defending champion, Jimmy Demaret, of Houston, Tex., 1 up on the nineteenth hole.

Neither contributed much in the way of first-caliber golf. Harbert, with a 36, 37—73, was 1 up at the ninth. He won the extra hole, 508 yards long, with a birdie 4 on a 5-foot putt.

Harbert defeated Jim Gauntt, Longview, Tex., 1 up in the first round and Demaret swamped Henry Espinosa, San Francisco, 6 and 5.

Two dynamiters of the game, Jim Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., and Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., hooked up in the "main event" of the second round with Thomson winning 1 up.

Snead Ousts Hogan

Each posted an approximate 34, 36—70 for the par 36, 36—72 Presidio course. They were even at the ninth.

In the morning round, Snead ousted Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., leading money winner of 1940. The pair turned in the most brilliant golf of the day, Snead shooting a 6-under par 66 against Hogan's 68, a fancy performance in its own right.

First-round reversals saw United States Open Champion Lawson Little eliminated by Leland Gibson, Kansas City. The score was 2 and 1, with Gibson 2 under par and Little even. Little was 1 up at the ninth.

Giant Olin Dutra, former National Open and P. G. A. champion, bowed out in the first round and on his 40th birthday. He lost to John Revolta, Evanston, Ill., veteran, 3 and 2.

Slender Lloyd Mangrum, of Oak Park, Ill., bagged two important victims, defeating Denny Shute, a former P. G. A. National winner, 4 and 2, in the opening round and taking the measure of Sam Byrd, Ardmore, Pa., 2 and 1, in the after-

Temple Downs La Salle, 27-22

St. Joseph's Beaten By DePaul, 52 to 50

Philadelphia, Jan. 17 (AP).—Temple's basketball team ended a three-game losing streak tonight by coming from behind to beat La Salle, 27 to 22, in the feature of a college doubleheader before 6,000 at Convention Hall.

De Paul nosed out St. Joseph's, 52 to 50, in an overtime fray in the opener.

La Salle held Temple scoreless from the field for 16 minutes to hold a 10-6 edge at the halftime. In the second half it was all Temple with Angelo Musi tossing in 11 points on four field goals and three fouls.

Yanks to Have Abundance of Hurlers in Camp

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees will be able to choose up two full teams of pitchers if the humor strikes him during spring training.

Of 35 contracts mailed out by President Ed Barrow today, 18 went to hurlers, 8 to infielders, 6 to outfielders and 3 to catchers. Only two left-handers are on the pitching list, Marius Russo and Vernon Gomez.

Hoyas Swamp Terps, 51-34, For 9 in Row

Schmidli, Bornheimer Pace G. U.'s Scoring; Ochsenrieter Stars

An underdog Old Liner basketball crew bowed before the mighty Hoyas of Georgetown at the Maryland Coliseum, 51-34, last night as the Hilltoppers chalked up their third victory in three straight nights and ninth in a row.

In the initial half, the Hoyas jumped to a 15-point lead that the Old Liners were unable to overcome in the second quarter, even after sinking eight points to the Hoyas' lone foul shot by George Pajak.

Bill Bornheimer broke the ice for the Hoyas with a snow bird just after the opening whistle. Bernie Ulman followed for the Old Liner and then Buddy O'Grady flipped in another two-pointer to give the Hilltoppers the lead. John Jarmoska, Terp guard, tied up the affair with another field goal, and when Bornheimer tossed in his second tally, the Hoyas got out in front and were never headed.

Hoyas Lead, 32-17

As the half whistle blew, O'Grady tipped in another deuce to take the Hoyas to a 32-17 score. Big Charlie Schimdli stole scoring honors with a 16-point show, followed by Bornheimer with 11 tallies. O'Grady aided the Hoyas cause with six points.

In the third quarter, the Hoya attack slowed down as the Terps tallied twice before Pajak sunk a foul shot. From here on out the Georgetown five chalked up point after point even as Maryland swept the Terp total to 27 points. With Bornheimer and Schmidli firing away, the Hoyas jammed their total to 41, when blondie Gene Ochsenreiter stepped into action for the Old Liners and chalked up nine points to steal the Liner scoring honors with 10 points. The Rockville lad tipped in 12 points to run his total to 13 for the evening as the Terp forward was held to one lone foul shot in the opening period.

After Ochsenreiter ran the Terp score to 27, Kiernan closed in with two shots from the circle to speed the Hoya score to 45. Here Ulman

Eagles Take Thriller From Olympics, 4-2

Crowd of 2,412 Sees Rough and Tumble Match in Which Washington Six Increases League Lead; One Fist Fight Seen

By Jack Munhall

In a thrill-a-minute, spill-a-minute battle which constantly threatened to develop into a free-for-all, the Washington Eagles last night extended their winning streak to six straight games by overpowering the unorthodox Boston Olympics, 4-2, at Riverside Stadium.

Paying patrons to the number of 2,412 were stirred by a penalty-packed match which produced every roughness of ice hockey except the actual mass fight. Only fisticuffs of the affiair lasted but a few seconds when, in the third period, Norman Burns, the Eagles' Eastern League leading scorer, mixed with Al Yourkewicz, the Boston "Bad Man."

By the victory the Eagles increased their league lead to six points over the second-place Baltimore Orioles and reduced the Orioles' margin in the Boardwalk Cup series.

Rossignol Shines

Rosy Rossignol, clever stick-handling wing, emerged from the match as Washington's brightest star by virtue of tallying the Eagles' first two goals and continually harassing the rough-and-ready Olympics with his poke checking.

The Eagles' other two points fell to Burns and Frank Mailley.

Sharing honors with Rossignol were the rival goalies, Gordon Hemming, of Washington, and Vic Polich, who were knocking down shots in great numbers.

Len Burrage, the Eagles' cagey defenseman and perhaps the league's best player, took a terrific physical beating from the Olympics who, for some reason, delighted in smashing Len's fragile hulk to the ice. However, Gordon Pranschke, the barrel-like wing, took upon himself the job of protecting Burrage, and he was slamming down Olympics like ten pins.

Good Goal Tending

First the Olympics and then the Eagles took command of play in the scoreless opening period as both goalies were overworked guarding their nets and play became increasingly rougher.

Boston threatened numerous times during the early minutes, but Goalie

Dawson Beats Ferrier, 4-2

Wins Miami Biltmore Golf Championship

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 17.—George Dawson, a "businessman golfer" from Chicago, today won the Miami Biltmore amateur championship with a 4-and-2 victory over big Jim Ferrier, of Australia.

The two husky golfers battled a morning downpour that left the course soggy, a wind that whipped the palm trees with occasional dashes of sunshine—in their final 36-hole match.

They were all even at the end of the first nine of their morning round. Dawson stayed close to par on the home nine while the big Australian needed a fat 40 to get home. Dawson was 2 up at the halfway mark.

Dawson shot the morning round in 73, two over par. Ferrier took a 76, his worst round of the four-day tournament.

Dawson was jittery on the start of the afternoon round and took bogey fives on the twenty-first and twenty-second holes, where Ferrier squared the match.

Dawson forged ahead on the twenty-fifth when Ferrier took two putts, and from there the stocky 39-year-old Chicagoan stayed in front. He dropped a 20-foot putt on the thirtieth for a birdie two, and picked up another stroke on the par-four thirty-first when Ferrier two-putted for a bogey.

Oklahoma Aggies, Coached by Phone, Defeat Creighton

By the Associated Press

Stillwater, Okla., Jan. 17.—Coached by telephone, the Oklahoma Aggies gained command of the Missouri Valley Basketball Conference tonight by downing Creighton's powerful blue Jays, 41 to 31.

Little L. J. Eggleston led the Aggies in an assault that saw them pour in 22 points during the closing ten minutes of the game.

Frank Mailley Scoring Eagles' Third Goal Against Boston

Tigers Sign Johnny Stone As Club's Tennessee Scout

Illness Stops Career of Former Nat Outfielder

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 17.—Johnny Stone, former outfielder for the Detroit Tigers and Washington Senators, has been signed as a scout for the Tigers, Owner Walter O. Briggs announced today.

Stone will be assigned to the territory around his home at Shelbyville, Tenn.

Coming up from Evansville of the Three-Eye League, Stone joined the Tigers in 1938. He played with Washington from 1932 to 1938, when ill health forced his retirement.

Stone spent more than a year in sanatorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and Asheville, N. C., while recovering from affliction that caused him to retire from the Washington lineup after only one month of play in 1938.

Following steady improvement in his physical condition, Stone last December put in an appearance at the major league meeting at Chicago, stating that he had been assured by doctors that he could return to the game if he desired. At the time, Stone announced that he was seeking a position as a scout with a major league team.

Stone was a ten-year man in the majors, joining the Tigers in 1928, after graduating from Marysville College in Tennessee, where he was a football, track and baseball star. He had a lifetime batting average of more than .310 in the majors, being traded to Washington by Detroit in 1934 in a deal that sent Goose Goslin to the Tigers.

JOHNNY STONE

Stone is now 34 years old.

Professional Grid Czar to Be Appointed at April Meeting

Club Owners Considering Eight Names

Commission Will Have Jurisdiction Over President Carl T. Storck

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Eight or ten men are being considered for commissioner of the National Professional Football League, it was announced tonight at the conclusion of a two-day unofficial meeting of the club owners.

The commissioner, however, will not be named until the annual meeting of the league in Chicago during the first week of April. The league owners concerned themselves in the two-day session here with drafting a revised league constitution, which will permit the employment of a commisioner whose authority would compare with that of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis in baseball.

None of the league owners would divulge the names of the men being considered. However, it was learned that Arch Ward, sports editor of a Chicago newspaper, was the first man approached. Ward, after a three-hour meeting with the owners last night, declined the job. It is understood he was offered a salary of $25,000 annually to take the post. A year ago Ward declined the presidency of the league at the same salary.

The football moguls declared that the commissioner will not replace the president of the league, but the commissioner will have jurisdiction over the president. The term of the present league president, Carl Storck, of Dayton, Ohio, expires in April. He is serving his second one-year term, having succeeded the late Joe F. Carr, one of the loop founders.

George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, acting as spokesman for the gathering, said: "Beside discussion of the employment of a commissioner, the National Professional League owners talked over the national defense emergency, realizing that our league will be hard hit by the draft. The draft issue will be incorporated in the new league constitution."

John Colbert Rolls 378 Set For Pin Honors

Olive Pettit Posts 165 Game to Break Silver Spring Record

John Colbert, St. Aloysius No. 2, was the star of the Section G meet of the Washington Catholic loop at Queen Pin, rolling 166 and 378 to capture individual high, and pacing his team to top counts of 563 and 1,580, as well as three wins over opponents. St. Aloysius No. 1 leads the loop.

S. S. LADIES

Rolling a postponed match against the Hilltop Market quintet in the Silver Spring ladies loop after the league play was over, Olive Pettit, Shepherd Park Restaurant, set a new season record for high game with a splendid 165 that featured her triple-header strike and added 14 points to the former high which she had set some weeks ago. Miss Pettit's team went on to roll a 594-game which also set a new season high by 17 sticks. Miss Pettit is one of the stars of the Ladies' District League.

TREASURY

R. Everett, Examining, and F. Barrows, Chief Clerks, were the leaders in the Treasury meet at Brookland, the former with a 154 game as the latter took the set with 377. Examining led the teams with high of 606 and 1,687. Both Secret Service and Procedure won all three from opponents. Procedure leads the loop, with Chief Clerks and Disbursing following.

ICE PALACE

Nicro, Ramblers, and Jack Talbert, Hot Shoppes, were the main boys in the Ice Palace Commercial loop, the former rolling high game of 150 as Talbert, who is assistant manager of the Ice Palace drives, took the top set with 390. The Ice Palace quintet won team highs after scattering 636 pins for the game and 1,751 for set. The Ramblers still lead the league.

ARCADIA

Mabelle Hering, of District League renown, was the leading lady of the Ladies' Independent meet at Arcadia, rolling high game of 146 which she followed with the top set of 375 and aiding her D. D. W.'s to capture team set with 1,586. Kidwell's Senators took team game with a 544 pinfall.

WASH. GAS LIGHT

A new league leader developed in the Washington Gas Light Co. circut last night when Customer Accounting Team No. 2 won two out of three games from Service No. 2 and dislodged the latter from top position. Convention Hall was the scene of the upset. The winners had a high set of 1,770. Jack Simmons took individual honors with a 150 game and 400 set.

Open Swimming Meet Scheduled Here Today

120 to Compete in Annual District A. A. U. Championships at Shoreham Pool; Three Titles to Be Contested

One hundred and twenty swimming stars of the District and other points in the East and South will participate today and tonight in the annual District of Columbia A. A. U. open championships at Shoreham Hotel pool. Heats will be held starting at 4 o'clock and finals beginning at 8 o'clock.

The field will compete for three titles—the women's junior national 440-yard free style, the men's national 220-yard free style and the District of Columbia women's junior 50-yard free style.

Outstanding among the visiting entries will be Miss Prince Nufer, of Goldsboro (N. C.) Swimming Association, holder of the junior outdoor 100-meter and backstroke and junior indoor 150-yard individual medley titles and Abel Gilbert, of Mercersburg Military Academy, possessor of the national interscholastic 440-yard free style crown. Gilbert, who hails frmo Enelec, Ecuador, also holds two South American championships.

Miss Nufer is entered in two events—the 150-yard medley and the 100-yard backstroke. Gilbert will have a try at the junior national 220-yard free style championship. Patsy Palmer, the 16-year-old Shoreham Hotel Swimming Team ace, will be a strong contender in both the junior national 440-yard free style and the 150-yard medley.

A trophy will be awarded the men's team scoring the most points, and individual prizes will be presented to all winners. The Washington Y. M. C. A. and the Baltimore K. of C. probably will fight it out for the team championship, since they have the largest entry lists.

Alexandrians Lose League Game, 28 to 18

John Marshall High Defeats G. W. Five; Winners Hold 20-4 Lead

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 17.—George Washington High of Alexandria took its third whipping of the season from a Richmond quintet tonight when John Marshall High, of Richmond, downed the visitors, 28-18, in the Justices' opening bid for the Central District title.

In the first quarter John Marshall jumped into an early lead with Klein, Gantt and Hoffman connecting on set shots and lay-ups while their opponents were able to tally only one point. Scoring was at a low ebb in the second period as George Washington limited the Justices to a single point while adding three to their total.

The Justices began bombarding the basket with great accuracy shortly after the second half opened and quickly extended their advantage to 20 to 4. Looming large in this drive were Capt. Bill Klein and Jeep Friedman, oth displayed fine floor work and good marksmanship. The visitors came suddenly to life at this stage of the contest and began dropping them in from all angles. Leading the assault for George Washington was Capt. Amos Clift, towering all-State center. The visitors' scoring streak was halted, however, when the scoreboard read 22-18 in favor of the hometown boys.

St. Albans Five Beaten, 18-17, By Devitt Prep

Though putting out their "worst performance of the season," in the words of their coach, Devitt Prep basketers staggered to an 18-17 triumph over St. Alban's yesterday on the latter's court.

At every stage of the game the score was close, and the final margin wasn't chalked up until only 30 seconds remained. Then Bob Cullen sneaked in under the goal to give Devitt its fourth victory in 6 games to date.

Cullen proved the most productive as well as the timeliest scorer for the winners, hitting the rim for 13 of the winning points. Bill Terry, of the Saints, hung up 9.

Montgomery Beats Friends, Ray Stars

Led by Tommy Ray, veteran forward who checked in one of the highest scoring efforts of the season, Richard Montgomery High five, of Rockville, yesterday defeated Sidwell-Friends on the latter's court, 34-18.

Ray rammed a total of 22 points through the cords as his mates cracked a 3-3 deadlock after the first period and managed for leads of 8-7 and 20-14 after the second and third. They merely coasted from there into their second triumph in seven games this year.

Friends' best individual performer was Armand Newmyer, flashy forward, who rang up 7 points.

Optimists Trip Wm. & Mary, 37-31

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Baltimore Optimist Club basketball team scored a 37-31 victory over William and Mary College, Norfolk division, here tonight.

Outscored in field goals, 17 to 11, the visitors managed to stay in the game by sinking 9 out of 12 chances from the free throw line.

Wake Forest's Sprint Beats Clemson, 42-33

Wake Forest, N. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Trailing by seven points after four and a half minutes of the second half, Wake Forest put on a 12-point spurt while yielding nary a point, and forged ahead to a 42-35 victory over Clemson here tonight in a Southern Conference basketball game.

W.-L. High Five Victor Over Petersburg

Special Dispatch to The Post

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 17.—Staving off a desperate last-quarter rally after they had rolled up a 9-point advantage at the end of three quarters, Washington-Lee High School, of Arlington, defeated Petersburg High here tonight, 31 to 28.

Both teams matched each other's scoring point for point in the first half. The count stood 7-all at end of the first eight minutes and 17-all at half-time.

The Arlington boys, led by Grinnell and Hurst, built their winning margin in the third quarter, scoring 12 points to Petersburg's 2 to take a 29-20 lead.

Midway in the final quarter, at the moment when Generals' Guard Gudger left the game on personal fouls, Petersburg's Crimson Wave started a rally that threatened to change the apparent outcome of game. Two baskets by Bowman and foul conversions by Mason and Evely cut the winner's margin to slim proportions, but Hurst sealed the game for the Northern Virginians with a set shot from the quarter line for the only points registered by his team in the final quarter.

Thirteen fouls were called on Washington-Lee against four for Petersburg, all charged to Evely, who was ejected in the final period.

Brewers Stop Baltimore by 28-25 Score

D. C. Pro Cagers Manage to Retain Early Advantage

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 17.—The Washington Brewers avenged last Sunday night's 28-to-22 setback tonight when they scored impressively over the Baltimore Clippers in a spiritedly fought American Basketball League game here, 28 to 25.

The Brewers, hopping away to an early lead, enjoyed an advantage virtually all the way and fought off several Baltimore rallies in the closing moments.

Ben Kramer, Washington's brilliant forward, paced his team's attack with three field goals and a foul and otherwise played a fine game while Mike Bloom, a former Brewer now with the Clippers, accounted for two field goals and four fouls.

The Brewers outscored Baltimore from the floor, 11 goals to 6, but the Clippers cashed 13 shots from the foul line to remain in the running.

The Brewers were leading at the end of the first period, 9-7, and had jumped into a 20-12 command at the second intermission.

Immediately after the game the Brewers returned to Washington where tomorrow night they are to entertain the world champion Philadelphia Sphas at Riverside Stadium, at 8 o'clock.

Three Major State Events to D. C. Clubs

Women's Championship, Sectional Qualifying Rounds for National Tournaments Set Here John MacKenzie Named Maryland Golf Head

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Washington courses will be host to sectional qualifying rounds for the National Open and amateur championships and the Maryland State Women's tournament in 1941 according to an announcement by Tournament Chairman Edgar Lucas in the annual meeting of the Old Line State Golf Association last night at the Willard Hotel.

The women's event will be held at Chevy Chase, June 24-28, while dates and sites of sectional trials for the national events will be announced by the U. S. G. A. at a later date, after consulting the Maryland body.

The entire tournament schedule was not officially announced by Lucas but he also promised the annual Washington-Baltimore Intercity team match would be held here, plus the State Junior tournament.

The Maryland Open will go to Baltimore, at the Elkridge Club July 22, the State men's amateur will be played over a Baltimore course, the Senior's at Green Spring Valley, September 10 and the Junior Open over a Monumental City course.

The schedule will be materially the same at last year, the major exception being the sectional rounds for the major tournaments coming here a second time. The move was at the request of the U. S. G. A. because the District is centrally located to Maryland and Virginia.

The delegates unanimously approved the nominating committee's choice of officers with John M. McKenzie, of Hillendale, succeeding Francis M. Barker as president.

Three Washington golfers were reelected, Dr. R. A. Keilty, moving up to first vice president; Harry G. Pitt, vice president, and Albert E. Steinem, general counsel. Other officers named to serve another term include vice presidents: Nathan R. Smith, jr., John D. Hospelhorn and Charles S. Catherman; vice president-treasurer, Edgar Lucas, and secretary, Emmet Gary.

Dr. Keilty's resolution was approved by the Maryland body, following on the Middle Atlantic's approval last week, to have a committee from each association study the problem of consolidating the Maryland, Mid-Atlantic and District golf bodies. The committee will report any action at future meetings.

Suggestions concerning a change in the method of play of the annual fall State team matches were considered and will be acted upon by the executive committee. Also the association wishes to prevent a duplication of last year's State Junior when an unattached player won the title when the event is supposedly open only to club members.

The meeting was the first in the history of the association to be held in Washington. President John MacKenzie announced future meetings would be alternated between the two cities, next year's to Baltimore and 1943 to the District.

Zivic Stops Armstrong in Twelfth Round

Record Crowd Sees Battle Which Ends Henry's Ring Career

fifth round, both of his eyes, which were punched cruelly shut in his first outing with the Pittsburgher, were cut and bleeding. But that was after he walked out there in the second, backed Fritzie into a neutral corner and really hurt him with two roundhouse right-hand "whistlers."

Armstrong Goes Down

In the sixth, Zivic pulled him in close with his left hand and let go a looping right to the midsection. Partly from the punch and partly from slipping, Armstrong dropped face downward on the floor, but so strange was the position that he bounced right up again without a count.

Through the ninth, it was the same pattern. Armstrong rushed tirelessly in as Fritzie backed off and stabbed him with the left. Each time Henry caught up with him, the youngest of the five Zivic brothers leaned in close and cuffed Armstrong on his cut eyes with cruel right uppercuts.

In the tenth Armstrong must have realized the end was near. He tore out of his corner, rushed Fritzie back, and shook him with hooks and right swings for a full minute. He did even more in the eleventh. Here, he knew definitely there wasn't much farther to go, so he went all out, flailing away with both hands to head and body, and, while Zivic didn't like it even a little bit he still inflicted damage around Armstrong's eyes.

Referee Halts Battle

Then came the twelfth. Henry, boxing near Zivic's corner, couldn't stop his momentum as Fritzie sidestepped, and he slipped to one knee. He came right up and took up the chase again, but at long range he was helpless against Zivic's slicing shots. At 52 seconds of the round, Referee Arthur Donovan stepped in and called a halt, with Zivic the technical knockout winner and Armstrong's career just about a closed book.

Henry had said previously that if he was badly beaten he probably would hang up his gloves for good. And he was given a good going-over. Thus ends the run of a great little fighting man. He came out of Los Angeles in 1936 and fought his way right through three divisions to the throne of each. He gave up the featherweight title voluntarily. He lost the lightweight crown to Lou Ambers, and now they're all gone.

Tilden Apologizes; Marble Wins Again

St. Louis, Jan. 17 (INS).—Alice Marble, ranking woman tennis player, tonight defeated Ruth Mary Hardwick, of England, in a three-set match in their professional exhibition in St. Louis. The scores were 3—6, 6—1, 6—3.

Before the matches started, William T. (Big Bill) Tilden, limping and carrying a cane, addressed the spectators and apologized for his inability to play. He received a deep cut on his left knee and was painfully bruised in an automobile accident late yesterday near Mendota, Ill.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Walter Haight Goes South

Dear Boss, Miami Beach, Fla.

Just a few lines from your little butter ball. I thought it was a pleasure last night to get half high at the Sky Club. Always had a hankering to write "My Day." 7 a. m.—Head feels like dirigible. 8 a. m.—Dive bombers release loads on outskirts of my bald spot. 9 a. m.—Anti-aircraft barrage parts hair in middle. 10 a. m.—Fighter plane crashes with observation balloon over right eye. 11 a. m.—Rescue squad of little men with white hats pounds away with tiny sledge hammers. 12 noon—Pink elephants trying to stamp out fires. 1 p. m.—Exploring party enters right ear and begins opening new section of Endless Caverns. 2 p. m.—My head wouldn't go in six-column cut. 3 p. m.—Four hundred fat girls beat kettle drums and sing "Hail to the Redskins." 4 p. m.—Fuller Construction Co. starts work on crane to lift my head. 5 p. m.—Fuller Construction Co. abandons job as hopeless. 6 p. m.—Letter "I" jumps off typewriter and yells, "Now I'm going to beat you for a while." 7 p. m.—Still waiting for the all-clear signal. And that's "My Day." But all kidding aside, Boss, I have been writing you every day and as far as I can recall, I haven't given you fact No. 1. So today,

HAIGHT

I'm going to try to make the rest of this informative. Saw Goose Goslin, former Nats' outfielder, the other night at the Jai-Alai games. Really looked shipshape, too. Doesn't look a day over 30 with his hat on. I can remember his first day in the Nats' outfield. He crashed into the stands twice chasing foul balls that landed on Freedmen's Hospital roof and was hit on the head by a line drive. That's no joke about putting the sun to work around here, Boss. Old Sol supplies most of the hot water for Miami Beach and Miami. They have solar heaters. Copper coils inclosed in glass and exposed to the sun on the roof tops. The water is heated in these coils and passes to insulated tanks which retain the temperature of the water.

Don't think I have been around looking at them, I'm just writing what it says on this handout from Steve Hannagan Associates, Miami Beach's publicity department. They say that one day of Miami Beach sunshine will provide hot water for three or four days. I wish I could find a handout that tells how to get out of hot water. I'll probably be in it by the time you get through reading this. The girls down here are wearing slacks and the men are taking up slack in their bankrolls. Bill Klem, the erstwhile baseball umpire, has a home here. They tell me the Klems are incurable Chinese checker enthusiasts. There's so many boats around Biscayne Bay that they have traffic lights and stop signs. And there are cops riding in boats who pass out tickets!

Harry Donenfeld, who owns the rights to the comic strip, "Superman," which appears in The Post, is here with his lovely wife and two children. He comes out to the track almost daily and I bet he wishes he had a superhorse. That's an idea, Boss, maybe I can get him to make Superman turn the mutuel department upside down and shake it. The loveliest voice around these parts is that of Kitty Carlisle, although the weather has been so nice around here that Jake's voice even sounds alluring when he says, "I ain't doing no good." Jack Kelly, former national record holder, is the pool director at the Sands Hotel. Lucky guy, getting paid for watching those bathing beauties while I have to go to the track and watch the Flamingos. Sally Rand is going to open a night club here if she can find some fans. Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, the former fight champ, has a big night club over by the county causeway. The cops walked in the other night and took $27,000 off the tables and hauled in several wagon loads of gamblers. With only four dog tracks, the race track and Jai-Alai going, it is getting so a guy just can't get any action. They tell me that there are several tophat places where they gamble but you can't get in unless you have a pocketful of yachts. I guess it must be thrilling at that to bet a 500-acre estate on a hard eight. By the way, Boss, I would have sent this airmail but I've only got three cents.

Always your ace,

MIAMI HAIGHT.

Importer Named Lion Club Official

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—Fred L. Mandel, owner of the Detroit Lions professional football team, today announced the appointment of Graham P. Smith, of Chicago, as vice president and general manager.

Smith will assume his new duties February 1. He succeeds Anthony Owne, who resigned the vice presidency to go into business on the West Coast.

Though an ardent fant, Smith has had no previous connection with professional sports.

GAMES NEXT WEEK

Tuesday—Western at Anacostia, 3:30; Central vs. Wilson at Roosevelt, 3:30.

Friday—Roosevelt vs. Western; Tech vs. Wilson, Tech gym, 7:30.

By Bill Burnett

Torrid was hardly the word for Roosevelt High basketers last night as they trounced Eastern, 34-22, to improve their chances of taking a second straight public school title a hundred-fold.

With the Rider gym packed to its rafters for a meeting of the only unbeaten clubs in the 1941 interhigh series, Roosevelt came up with an attack that was no less than sizzling. It led from the opening gun, suffered a slight relapse in the third quarter, but came back strong to win going away.

In contrast, Eastern, which had little trouble in two previous outings, was almost "stone cold." It had twice the open shots that the Riders enjoyed, but saw the ball dip into the net and bounce off time and again.

Perlo Scores First

Hostilities were less than 30 seconds old when Hymie Perlo, captain of the hosts, indicated the condition of his team. Taking the opening jump, he took aim from near the center of the floor and fired. The score then was 2-0, and Eastern never caught up. At the end of a quarter it was 9-2, Roosevelt, and at the half it was 17-9. Eastern's first field goal was delayed until late in the second stanza when Neil Craig pivoted perfectly and cut the White Tide's deficit to 16-5.

The first two periods, as rough as any this season, saw the leaders of both fives—Perlo, of the Riders, and Moe Schulman, of Eastern—run up three personal fouls. Only one minute and a few seconds of the third quarter had elapsed when Schulman committed his fourth and was waved out. It was the blow that ended most Tide hopes, though the club continued its valiant but ineffective efforts. Perlo managed to last the game out.

Banished From Game

Trailing by only 24 to 17 as the last eight minutes started, Eastern could get only five points as the Riders ran up twice as many. Midway of the period a bit of temper display caused the banishment of Roosevelt's Dick Goodman, but he and Schulman were the only casualties.

Despite the efforts of young Larry Capone, Perlo emerged with scoring honors of the game. He got 11 points, and running mate, Frankie Ciango, got 9. Against the two-man Rider offense Eastern's best scorer was Schulman, who registered a field goal and four foul shots before retiring.

Blue Ridge Cancels Gallaudet Contest

The Gallaudet-Blue Ridge College game, scheduled for the former's court last night, was canceled by the Marylanders just a few hours before game time, according to Gallaudet Coach Blair Smith.

Blue Ridge officials said the roads were impossible. The Blues will visit the Maryland school next month.

Gallaudet plays Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va., tonight.

Epinard, Great French Race Horse, Found Pulling Delivery Wagon in Paris Streets

Underwood & Underwood.

The great Epinard in his prime, Owner Pierre Wertheimer up

Famed Thoroughbred Competed Here In Series of Races; Stolen From Farm

By the United Press

Vichy, Jan. 17.—Epinard, one of the great race horses of this generation, has been found by Paris police in the shafts of a delivery wagon after having been missing since the occupation of Paris, it was revealed today. He is 21 years old.

Far from the trim, sleek thoroughbred who came to the United States in 1924 to race in a series of international matches, Epinard was a thin, dirty, scarred and hungry horse when turned over to his owner Pierre Wertheimer.

Two men and a woman who were in the delivery wagon when Paris police recognized the once great hero of the French turf were arrested and told the story of his disappearance.

Epinard had been stolen from a stud farm where he had been living a life of ease after his successful turf career. The horse thief drove him out of Paris just ahead of the German armies but was overtaken at Chartres and returned to Paris. There the horse fell into the hands of the arrested persons who were truck farmers.

Epinard then was used to haul vegetables—including spinach after which he was named—from the suburbs to the Paris markets nightly and it was on one of these trips the police recognized the horse and made the arrest.

Epinard made three trips to the United States, the first in 1924, but he had little success on the American turf. He made three starts in specially arranged matches at Belmont Park, Aqueduct and Latonia and failed to win.

Epinard's next two trips to the United States were as a sire, the first to the stud of the Dixiana Farm, the second to the breeding establishment of Hal Price Headley. He returned to France in 1932.

Coolidge High Bows, 36 to 19, To Tech Five

Newcomers Lose First Game of Year In Four Starts

Defeat finally came to rest on the court forces of Calvin Coolidge High, the city's newest public school, yesterday when Tech ground out a 36-19 victory after coming from behind at the half of a game at the Trainer floor.

Winners of their first three starts in their first year of competition, Coolidge youngsters held mighty Tech on even terms until the third quarter and then collapsed as a result of both fatigue and inexperience.

Though trailing by 7-6 after one period, Coolidge came back to lead, 15-13, at intermission. From that point on, however, it was a beaten club. The Manual Trainers ran up 15 points to 3 for Coolidge in the third quarter, and merely coasted to their fifth triumph in six games.

"Shrimp" Brewer accounted for 9 points to top the scoring of Tech's 11 participants as well as of Coolidge. Jackie Walsh, high scoring forward, could get only 6 points, as did novice Phil Gentlecore. Best point-maker for the losers was Richard Waterman, center, who managed for 5 points.

Hockey Eagles Defeat Boston

HOCKEY, from Page 17.

Hemming, of Washington, contributed one great stop after another to turn back their fierce charges. Chief nuisance to Hemming was Desxosier, who fired four goal-bound shots.

About midway of the session the Eagles took the offensive and only stellar work by Goalie Polich, of Boston, prevented several Washington goals as Burns, Pranschke, Mailley and Courteau made successful forays into scoring territory.

Penalty piled upon penalty in the second period and Washington twice capitalized on the banishment of Boston players to take a 2-1 lead. Rossignol scored both goals. At one time midway of the stanza each team was operating with only four players and when still another penalty was called on the Olympics—against Desxosiers—the officials had to exercise the rule providing that a team may have no fewer than four men on the ice. Desxosiers' journey to the penalty pews therefore was delayed until one of his two mates therein had finished his sentence.

Yale Encorages 'Clean Football' With Player Loans

By International News Service

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 17.—In an attempt to encourage "good, clean football," Yale University is giving nearly half of its varsity football players "financial assistance" of some kind, Stuart H. Clement, secretary of the scholarship committee, revealed today.

A total of 16 players on last year's squad received aid in the form of loans, scholarships or employment, the secretary stated in a letter in the university alumni magazine.

The only player mentioned by name as receiving help was Captain-elect Alan Bartholemy.

Anacostia Makes Only 2 Field Goals; Vikings in Tie For Fourth Place

By Anne Hagner

To the incessant tune of the referee's whistle, Central High School's Vikings downed Anacostia's basketeers, 27 to 21, in the third game of the interhigh series on the losers' court last night.

Central's triumph, scored while 39 penalties were being called, boosted the Vikings to a tie with Anacostia for fourth place in the series standings. Earlier defeats this season came at the hands of Eastern and Roosevelt, making this the initial trip to the winner's circle for Central.

Many Fouls Called

With fouls being called nearly every time the ball changed hands more than once, playing was on the verge of rough-and-ready and would probably have developed into livelier doings if either team could have been pried away from the foul line. Anacostia made only two baskets from the floor.

Closely pursued at the half, 13 to 12, Central whipped into shape to gain a 21-16 lead at the end of the third quarter and was never seriously threatened thereafter. Most serious trouble from Anacostia came as the result of Arthur Knott's and John Penn's consistency in converting foul shots, each scoring four in quick succession.

Trio Sparks Vikings

For the Vikings, Teddy Thomadies, Sam DiBlasi and Zello Lagos sparked the attack by making 6 points each. Four of Thomadies' were by virtue of foul shots.

Central's John Kligman, after converting three fouls, left the game early in the third quarter via the foul route. He was followed by Fucuo and Anacostia's John Adams, both removed for the same reason in the last ten seconds of play.

Norm Burns Reveals Big-Time Hockey Clubs Seek His Services

Eagle Player Boasts High-Scoring Marks In Eastern Circuit

Norman Burns, the Washington Eagles' sensational center and the Eastern Amateur Hockey League's leading scorer, is being sought by three professional clubs, The Post learned yesterday.

Burns, who is accorded better than an even chance to smash the Eastern League's all-time record of 101 points, has been approached by the New York Rangers and the Canadiens, of the National League, and by the Cleveland Ramblers, of the American League.

Only yesterday the husky Canadian playing his first season with Washington received a telegram from Al Sutphin, president of the Cleveland club, who wants to advance Burns a bonus for promising to play next year for Cleveland. The telegram advised Burns to meet Sutphin in New York next week to discuss the matter.

Burns, however, declared yesterday that he would make no immediate decision as to what to do next year until he has had opportunity to confer with officials of the Rangers and Canadiens. Since the National League is the big league of ice hockey, Burns has reason to believe that either the Rangers or the Canadiens could offer him more money than the Ramblers.

With 42 goals and 14 assists to his credit in 32 matches Burns is running ahead of two Eastern League scoring marks. The two marks he hopes to surpass are Ab Collings' 101 points and Norman Calladine's 53 goals, both established last year. With the Eagles scheduled to play 33 more matches Burns can slacken his present pace a little and still crack both records.

Burns came to Washington this season from River Vale where he finished the 1939-40 campaign after being released by Atlantic City, allegedly because he wouldn't change his style of play to conform with the rough-house antics of the Gulls.—MUNHALL.

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 17 (U.P.).—Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., today defeated Ed Alloo, of Rollins College, Fla., 6—1, 6—1, in quarter-finals of men's singles of the Florida State tennis tournament. Rain resulted in postponement of other matches.

Collegiates Rout Baltimore Five, 57 to 47

The Recreation Collegiates, leading all the way, last night defeated the Kappa Alpha Psi quintet, of Baltimore, in the Banneker gymnasium, 57-47.

"Junky" Woods, of the Baltimoreans, proved the individual star of the game with 21 points, 17 of which were made in the second half, the Kappas vainly attempting to overcome a 25-18 halftime lead of the Recs.

Willie Watts, Herbie Jones and Bill Wynne held the Kappas safe, drawing away to a 20-point lead, 53-33 before Woods tried to close the gap singlehanded.

In the preliminary Mine Teachers College quintet defeated the Twelfth Street "Y" five, led by Slim Thomas, 68-60.

Victors Get Away to Early Lead to Beat Visiting Five, 22-14

Clinging to a lead run up in the initial quarter, Landon Prep yesterday defeated the basketball forces of Friends School, of Baltimore, 22-14, on the local floor.

The opening period saw Friends go scoreless while the hosts ran up 9 points. Approximately the same number of points separated the clubs from then on. At the half it was 14-4.

Ted Brawner's 7 points and Paul Baker's 6 led the scoring of the winners, while Roberts paced the losers with a field goal and four foul shots.

NATURE'S PROTECTIVE BLENDING PROTECTS THE RED FOX
LEFT: Here you can see what Nature's Protective Blending does to protect the red fox. So easily does he elude the hunter's searching eyes, that dogs must be used to track him down.
BELOW: Out in the open, however, the red fox could easily be taken, even with bow and arrow. But this wily creature is too smart to be caught like this. He takes advantage of Nature's Protective Blending.

Wilson Five Beats Gonzaga, 22-19, in Upset

Presidents Take 12-4 Early Lead, Hang On to Win

Surprising even their most ardent fans, Woodrow Wilson High's cagers clung to a half-time lead yesterday and took revenge for a 1-point loss earlier in the season by beating Gonzaga, 22-19, in the Tiger gym.

After one quarter Wilson had run up a 12-4 lead, but when that had been sliced to 16-11 at the half, spectators fully expected another lapse and eventual loss. In the teams' earlier clash Wilson had led by 9 points before losing, 36-35.

The margin further melted in the third quarter, the Tigers emerging after that stanza with a 19-15 edge. A few seconds later it was down to 19-17, before Billy Jawish and Bob Lemerise finally scored the points that proved Wilson's margin of victory. A late one-hander by Buddy Rowzee provided Gonzaga's only points thereafter.

Both clubs concentrated on defense and consequently the 8 points scored by Wilson's Eddie Polhamus and Gonzaga's Rowzee shared honors. Franny Counsilman, ordinarilly high-point man for the Purple, was held to a mere 3 points.

Clarksville, $11.50 Shot, Wins Reynolds Purse at Hialeah

Victor Grabs Early Lead And Holds It

Beats Out Battle Colors by a Head; Market Wise Shows On a Sloppy Track

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 17.—Clarksville, a colt which may yet prove an outstanding story-book horse, today defeated six other three-year-olds in the seven-furlong Graynolds Park Purse, decided over a sloppy track as a result of more rains. Paying $11.50 and covering the distance in 1:25 3-5, Clarksville, owned by John Greener, of Nashville, Tenn., lasted to beat Circle M. Ranch's Battle Colors, the favorite, by a head. Samuel Tufano's Market Wise was third, four lengths behind.

The story connected with Clarksville follows: Greener bought the stallion Hecla, five broodmares and one suckling from a Clarksville, Mo., farmer for $1,500. Clarksville, named after the town, was the suckling. Hecla is his daddy. Traveling Tot, the dam, was used as a plowhorse on the farm before Greener purchased the group. Clarksville last season won four of his eight starts. He is eligible for the rich Flamingo.

Battle Colors and Sailor King, which finished fourth, also are named for the Flamingo.

Clarksville led the field from end to end. He maintained a daylight advantage over Battle Colors, an even-money shot, into the last furlong, where the latter began drawing close. Eddie Arcaro put up a powerful finish astride the game Clarksville to save the day. Market Wise was much the best of the others.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17, 1941.

(Florida Turf Bureau.)

WEATHER, THREATENING. TRACK, MUDDY.

FIRST RACE—Three furlongs (nursery course). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:01. Off 2:01½. Winner, V. Emanuel's blk. c. (2), by Zacaweista—French Star. Trained by J. P. Smith. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:35⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	Stretch	Finish	Straight
STARWEISTA	(Meade)	126	3	1	1h	1h	$1.60
CABOODLE	(DeCamillis)	111	3	2	2½	2h	14.05

QUICK CONQUEST	(Howell)	111	4	3	3h	6h	20.30
STRAW FLOWER	(Seabo)	111	7	6	7½	7h	27.20
DIACHAM	(Stevenson)	111	8	7	8h	8½	8.75
ALAFLAC	(Grill)	114	6	8	9	9	68.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STARWEISTA, $5.20, $3.20, $2.50; CABOODLE, $10.00, $5.10; REMEMBERING, $3.00.

STARWEISTA broke alertly, was hustled along in front and continued on gamely while under urging. CABOODLE forced the pace of the winner right from the start and would have won in a few more strides. REMEMBERING bolted out at the start, was quickly straightened out and finished strong. KEEKEE ran a good race from a poor beginning.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31½. Off 2:32. Winner, A. L. Aste's br. g. (4), by Hi-Jack—Blame. Trained by H. Young. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:27.

COL. SCOTT	(DeCamillis)	113	1	4	4h	6	6	6	6	21.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-KID, $8.70, $3.80, $2.60; TALENT, $3.70, $2.50; ARCHED, $2.50.

HI-KID forced the pace from start, raced ARCHED into submission, then opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but faltered near the end and just lasted. TALENT, off poorly, gradually bettered his position while racing wide and was probably the best. ARCHED broke in stride, set a steady pace while saving ground, but weakened after 5 furlongs. GAMBIT could not get up.

Daily Double, STARWEISTA and HI-KID, Paid $23.20

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:02½. Winner, Mrs. W. R. Reid's b. g. (4), by Clock Tower—Tickery Tock. Trained by D. Hurn. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:27⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFFICE HOUR, $43.50, $15.90, $10.30; COUNT MORSE, $6.90, $5.30; NADINE OMAR, $8.00.

OFFICE HOUR worked his way forwardly on the inside, took command entering the stretch and held his opposition safe at the end. COUNT MORSE, a factor throughout, continued gamely in the final drive. NADINE OMAR, prominent from the start, just lasted long enough to stave off BOOTLESS' bid. The latter fought his way through the last quarter mile to finish strong. POSTERITY and UGIN were compelled to race extremely wide the entire trip.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:36. Winner, G. L. Wilson's ch. g. (3), by Bob Rogers—Collorose. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

AIR POST	(Meade)	110	7	6	7h	9½	11½	11½	12	5.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROGERS BOY, $7.30, $3.90, $2.90; ART OF WAR, 15.40, $9.20; WELL ALRIGHT, 5.20.

ROGERS BOY, messed about in the early running, swung around the leaders in the last quarter mile and finished gamely to get up in the last stride. ART OF WAR, rushed to the front while saving ground, faltered through the stretch. WELL ALRIGHT, responding to punishment, outstayed OLD FRIEND in the final drive. The latter was in close quarters on the inside.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 3-year-olds. The Greynolds Park. Start poor from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:03. Off 4:07. Winner, J. Greener's b. c. (3), by Hecla—Traveling Tot. Trained by T. Jolley. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:25⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLARKSVILLE, $11.50, $4.50, $2.50; BATTLE COLORS, $3.10, $2.20; MARKET WISE, $2.20.

CLARKSVILLE, away fast, set a swift pace in the going while saving ground, responded courageously when placed to a drive and just lasted. BATTLE COLORS, taken around the leaders midway around the turn, gained steadily and would have won in a few more strides. MARKET WISE easily disposed of the others. VERSION was practically left at the post.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Royal Palm. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:34. Off 4:35. Winner, Maemere Farm's ch. h. (5), by Pennant—Masda. Trained by R. Cross. Value to winner, $1,100; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEDA, $12.10, $5.30, $4.20; ONE JEST, $3.80, $3.00; TWO-O-TWO, $5.50.

MAEDA, breaking alertly, drew away rounding the first turn and maintained his advantage gamely thereafter. ONE JEST, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, closed gamely to pressure, but could not reach the winner. TWO-O-TWO, always in contention, shook off TITILATOR through the stretch. The latter, vigorously handled, made a bid entering the stretch, but faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:03. Winner, R. C. Ellis' b. f. (3), by Spanish Play—Lady Astor. Trained by W. O. Hicks. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:56⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR GRACE, $19.40, $7.50, $4.80; BLUMERE, $4.70, $3.10; RED BURR, $3.60.

OUR GRACE followed the leaders under light restraint to the stretch turn, where she saved much ground, took command under pressure and was ridden out strongly to the end. BLUMERE improved his position steadily in the final 3 furlongs and disposed of RED BURR in the stretch run. The latter, prominent the entire trip, faltered when the real test came. ADEHALA stopped badly the last furlong.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:31½. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. m. (5), by Swift and Sure—Lunetta. Trained by R. O. Higdon. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:09⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STABLE, $6.10, $4.50, $3.20; ANNIKIN, $39.70, $18.30; ORCHIDS NEXT, $7.10.

STABLE, in first flight from start, responded willingly when placed to drive and disposed of FORE ISUS to win easily. ANNIKIN was hard ridden while holding forward position early, rallied in stretch run and closed with good energy. ORCHIDS NEXT lacked early speed, came wide for racing room and closed full of run. FORE ISUS quit badly after settling early pace.

But if he had raced ten or twenty years later he would have won more than a half a million dollars."

We asked Mrs. Kilmer why her husband raced Exterminator so long. "My only complaint was that he didn't race him longer," she answered. "We retired him as a 9-year-old, but he still had at least two good years in him. Mr. Kilmer retired him, though he was sound as a dollar and wanted to run, because some persons had the mistaken idea he was being mistreated. Lordy! . . . Exterminator was so full of run after that we had to take him around with the other Kilmer horses for a full year after his retirement, to keep him from grieving, and for years after his retirement we had to close off his view of our training track when our horses were galloping." He'd break out in a sweat and want to get out there with them. The same was true of Sun Beau. He could have run a couple more years, at least."

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

Beverley Broun, chairman of the West Virginia Racing Commission, will take over the presidency of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners today. That group nominated him yesterday and there is no opposition. Other officers will be Charles F. Conners, of Massachusetts, first vice president, and Chester F. Hockley, of Maryland, second vice president. Tom Underwood, of Kentucky, continues as secretary. Broun is a hard worker for racing and should do a good job. A tout walked up to a visitor and talked him into a horse. "Can I bet this one with impunity?" asked the visitor. "Don't do that, boss, we'll both get in trouble. Bet it with the mutuel windows," replied the tout. Yes, there are plenty of touts around here. In fact, more touts than flamingoes. Prospects of an off track didn't keep the trainers from entering their respective thoroughbreds for today's Palm Beach, first of three new stakes inserted in the Miami Jockey Club this season. Great Albert, Many Stings, Sea Captain and Zayin were the only ones of the original nominees to pass up the stake at the closing of the entries. Eighteen interests will be represented in today's field, should all parade to the post. Mrs. T. Christopher, of Miami, named Doubt Not and Liberty Franc. Doubt Not is second high weight for the Palm Beach with 124 pounds and Liberty Franc, a winner at Hialeah this meeting, gets in under 108 pounds impost. W. F. Mannagh's Libery Flight, winner of the $5,000 added Hialeah Inaugural Handicap, and top weight of the third rich offering of the meeting, with 126 pounds, is bound to be one of the popular choices in the large field expected to go postward. Circle M Ranch's Get Off, winner of two races this year, and alloted 124 pounds in the Palm Beach, is expected to be a certain starter.

BILL.

First race—Treemontier appears just suited in this small field of baby horses. Breaks from the outside and should keep out of trouble. Yokel has speed and will be in the thick of contention. Gummed Up to take care of the minor award.

Second race—Grand Lama gets in light and likes the route of this test. The prospect of an off track should suit and I'm going to string along. Chance King is a fair sort and will be close in this company. Well Read should be third.

Third race—Blenweed did everything asked last out and seems ready to turn back 3-year-olds of this brand. He will have to be at his best, however, for Cavalier will close a lot of ground. Burning Deck belongs close with these.

Fourth race—Kings Blue could be the right one in this sprint affair. He is better than races show and may take it all at liberal odds. Watch Over and Domkin have good recent efforts as recommendations in this field.

Fifth race—War Bugle appears best of those gathered for this three-quarters battle. This one is in good hands and has the punch to carry off the brackets. Magic Stream awoke with a bang last out and is dangerous despite picking up some weight. Hy Cop to fill out the money bracket.

Sixth race—Joe Schenck failed to race up to expectations last out. Probably needed that race and the fact that the track will be off is in his favor. Liberty Flight took the Inaugural here in good fashion but may not like the 126-pound assignment. Beau James is dangerous at the weights.

Seventh race—Radio stumbled the last time he was out on an off track. I'm still trying to get this one home and will take another chance today. Waugh Pop and Felsun for the place and show.

Eighth race—Memory Book has a flash of his old class and should defeat these. Peanut Lady is in with feather weight and is a threat. Jack Sting for third money.

Best bet—Memory Book.

Retail Sales Here Up 27 Pct. During Week

Four-Week Increase Is 31 Pct., Far Above National Average

Washington department store sales in the week ended January 11 soared 27 per cent over the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. For the four weeks ended January 11, local sales were 31 per cent heavier than in the like period last year.

For the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole, department store sales in the latest week were 25 per cent heavier than in the 1940 period. Cumulative sales for the Fifth District averaged 27 per cent above sales in the four weeks of 1940.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board of Washington estimated that department store sales in the week ended January 11 were 16 per cent higher than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended January 4, sales had been 4 per cent higher and in the four weeks ended January 11 they averaged 17 per cent more.

By the Federal Reserve districts, the gains over a year ago for the week ended January 11 were:

Biston, 13; New York, 14; Philadelphia, 29; Cleveland, 15; Atlanta, 19; Chicago, 12; St. Louis, 28; Kansas City, 14; Dallas, 8; and San Francisco, 18 per cent.

No figures were available for the Minneapolis District.

Debt Reduction Urged

Concentration on reduction of the debts of the Nation's 175,000 local governmental units, from States down to the smallest tax district, is an essential part of the national defense program, Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, declares in his monthly review of business released yesterday.

Emphasizing the need for "a sound domestic economy to buttress our defense program," the credit executive expresses agreement with the recent pronouncement of the Federal Reserve Board and advocates both application of defense taxes and issuance of defense bonds to hold down the rising consumer purchasing power that will result from the defense activity.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 17 (AP).—Although prices dipped fractionally at times, the wheat market's downward trend was checked today by purchasing originating with previous "short" sellers and milling interests. Forecast of colder weather over much of the grain belt had a steadying influence.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅛ higher, compared with yesterday; May, 86⅝@87; July, 81¾@81⅞. Corn, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; May, 63⅜; July, 63⅛@63¼. Oats, ⅛-¼ lower; soybeans, ¼-½ higher; rye, unchanged to ⅛ off, and lard unchanged to 5 higher.

Easiness of securities resulted in some selling of wheat at times. The cold wave was expected to spread as far south as Kansas, but the weather map indicated some sections of the winter wheat belt may have light snow protection. Minneapolis dealers reported they expected country corn marketings to be stimulated and traders here said frozen roads would aid the movement, although colder weather normally increases feeding demand.

Contra-Seasonal Advance Scored By Reserve Index

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that American industrial production hit a record high in December.

The board said, in a statement, that although the volume of factory output was not much different in December than in November, it represented a gain because usually a seasonal decline occurs toward the year-end. Therefore, the board placed December output at 136 per cent of the 1935-39 average, four points higher than in November and ten points higher than December, 1939.

No figures were given for January, but the board said industrial activity "continued at a high rate" in the first half of that month.

In December, it added, steel production was maintained at 96 per cent of capacity, and in the first half of January rose to 98 per cent.

Extra Hour Aids Chicago

Extension of the trading sessions of the Chicago Stock Exchange by one hour daily on September 30 has resulted in an increase of 17.2 per cent in full-lot volume, according to Arthur M. Betts, chairman of the board of governors.

Sugar Futures

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—In domestic sugar futures trade today final prices were unchanged to 1 point higher on turnover of 2,050 tons.

Fears an Export-Import Bank loan to Cuba to finance part of the crop might be abandoned led to a trading stalemate in the world list. The close was unchanged to ⅞ points up on sales of 5,900 tons: March .73 bid, May .76 bid.

Late Upturn in Rail List Props Market; General List Ends Firm After Early Dip

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 17.—A last-minute burst of strength in rail stocks today put props under a generally falling market and enabled weak steels and other industrials to reduce substantially losses running to a point or more.

Mild rallying signs at the start disappeared when selling of the metals turned somewhat insistent. The transportation group was resistant throughout, however, and late bidding here heartened the rest of the list. Closing prices, consequently, were no worse than slightly mixed.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 43.8. It was the sixth successive session in which the composite had recorded no progress. Transfers totaled 575,280 shares compared with 609,720 Thursday.

The rail section apparently reflected mounting traffic and net operating incomes for the principal roads.

Some commitments were reinstated elsewhere, brokers said, on the belief the erasure of virtually all of the post-New Year's advance put the market in a position for another recovery attempt. Business news, including a jump in this week's automotive output to the highest level ever attained in January, remained helpful.

While next week's steel mill operations were expected to touch a new record peak for ingot capacity, the metals were retarded by reports the Government would insist on a sharp extension of production facilities for defense at a cost to the companies of many millions. Thoughts that labor difficulties might confront the steelmakers in the near future also cast a shadow.

War dispatches again were uninspiring and the seemingly growing tenseness of the lease-lend battle in Congress was thought to have served as a speculative retardment. Not so pleasing was the sale of a stock exchange seat for $30,000, off $1,000 from a previous deal at a new low since 1899.

Stocks up fractions to a point or so included Santa Fe, Great Northern, Louisville & Nashville, Pennsylvania, N. Y. Central, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Bendix, Consolidated Aircraft, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, U. S. Gypsum, American Car & Foundry and Woolworth.

Standard Oil of N. J. ended ¼ up at 34¾ in the wake of yesterday's "over-the-counter" sale of 500,000 shares of the issue at 34½. Forecasts of further private offerings of big blocks from both British and domestic accounts aroused further pessimism in commission houses.

Among the few wide movers of the day was Phillips-Jones preferred which climbed 9 points on a slight turnover to a new 1940-41 high.

On the offside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Eastman Kodak, Owens-Illinois, Johns-Manville, Phillips Petroleum, Anaconda, Douglas Aircraft and Monsanto Chemical.

Improved in the Curb ware Royal Typewriter, Gulf Oil and Lake Shore. On the losing end were Bell Aircraft, Todd Shipyards and Humble Oil. Volume here was around 106,000 shares versus 124,000 yesterday.

A late buying flurry in rail issues animated the bond market closing today. Trading followed a leisurely pace most of the session and prices generally were considerably mixed. The last-hour flip helped a wide group of bonds rated as speculative.

The Associated Press rail average closed .2 of a point higher after three successive declines which had carried the measure about a point under Monday's 1940-41 peak level.

Advances running to a point or more were recorded by Erie 5s of '75 at 18¾, Illinois Central 4½s at 41½, Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 53¼, Chesapeake & Ohio 3½s at 105¼, International Telephone 5s at 44½, Southern Pacific 4½s of '68 at 44½, Northern Pacific 4s at 79½ and M-K-T 5s of '62 at 20⅞.

Rail Order Placed

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 17 (AP).—The St. Louis & San Fransico Railway today ordered 12,300 tons of steel rails and track fastenings for delivery in 1941 for approximately $1,125,000.

Excess Reserves Of Banks Mount Another 60 Million

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks increased $60,000,000 to a near-record total of $6,900,000,000 in the week ended January 15.

The new total was $30,000,000 under the record set during November. The gain was attributed mostly to a $86,000,000 decrease in money in circulation.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended January 15, 1941, were reported as follows:

Wholesale Buying Accelerates; Spring Orders Placed Early

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Wholesale buying quickened this week and all along the line wholesalers reported store commitments topping a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Retail trade continued strong for this season and averaged 8 to 11 per cent above a year ago for the country as a whole.

It was in the wholesale field, however, that interest was centered.

Scanning the reports, some observers saw the bigger merchant buying the direct result of quick needs for rapidly expanding retail business. Speculative buying was declared small. Dun & Bradstreet said "Some caution was noted in wholesale apparel buying."

"Buyers seemed willing to place orders early and in larger amounts than last year," said the credit agency. "A steady volume of fill-in orders and a strong demand for spring merchandise contributed to the unusually heavy activity. Many orders were for early delivery.

"Conservative wholesale buying policies generally prevailed, despite fears in some quarters of price advances and delivery difficulties."

Speaking of retail trade, the agency said "There was a good response to moderate-price fashion merchandise and sustained selling of coats and furs. . . . Practical personal merchandise and household wares were in best demand during the week. Also such departments as hosiery, costume jewelry and gloves were also active. White goods, yard goods, silverware and infants' wear moved well."

G.M.C. Defends Private System Of Financing

Seeks to Prevent 'Overcharging' by Dealers, Court Told

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Counsel for General Motors Corporation declared in an appeal argument today that prosecution of G. M. and three subsidiaries in a restraint of trade case was "the first time under the Sherman Act in which the Government takes a position antagonistic to the public."

John Thomas Smith, of New York, general counsel for G. M., continued in his argument before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals that:

"The real parties are masked and the issues are camouflaged. . . . Here the Government favors the middleman rather than the public. Is it fair for G. M. to try to protect its millions of customers from being overcharged by dealers? No court is going to hold that the public is not entitled to be protected, regardless of the technical question of commerce involved."

Convicted in Indiana

Arguments by Smith and Attorney Ernest S. Ballard, of Chicago, were on the appeal by General Motors Corporation, General Motors Sales Corporation, General Motors Acceptance Corporation and General Motors Acceptance Corporation of Indiana, Inc.

They were convicted by a jury in Federal court, at South Bend, Ind., before Judge Walter C. Lindley, of Danville Ill., on November 16, 1939, of conspiring in restraint of trade by forcing dealers to use the automobile financing service of G. M. A. C. Judge Lindley fined each $5,000.

Ballard argued that the purpose of any activity by G. M. was to sell more cars, not sell less or restrain trade. He said the defendants were legally powerless to restrain their own commerce unlawfully and that "they constitute in legal effect a single trader and as such may choose their own customers and sell or refuse to sell at will."

Smith said "what this was, was an attempt by the Government to regulate the finance business."

Holmes Baldridge, chief prosecutor at the South Bend trial, told the court the allegation the Government was not representing the people in this case was not borne out by the facts, adding that the Sherman antitrust law protects two classes—"the public and competitors in business."

Although the defense claimed the Government was acting for independent finance companies there was not a single witness who was an independent finance man, Baldridge asserted.

The Government's case, he continued, was based entirely on an attempt to free the automobile dealers—giving them and the public a free choice of the finance companies they wished to use.

Baldridge contended there was a conspiracy among the defendants to force dealers to use G. M. A. C. and that it was made effective in a number of ways. The evidence, he said, showed that:

Dealers had their franchises canceled unless they used G. M. A. C. or promised to use it in the future.

Dealers were required to fill out ten-day reports to the company showing how many cars were financed and who financed them.

Security Offerings Decrease in Week

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday totaled $77,131,247, a decline of 28 per cent from the previous week but almost three times the same week a year ago, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

The total included new money of about $14,000,000 for private corporations and $21,000,000 for municipalities. Railroads took most of the corporations funds.

Week's Auto Output Sets January High

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., in its routine survey of the automobile industry, today places car and truck output this week at 124,025 units, the highest weekly volume of any January in car manufacturing history.

Last week assemblies numbered 115,935 cars and trucks, breaking the previous January high mark of 111,330 for the week ended January 13, 1940. A year ago this week 108,545 vehicles were assembled.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Increased buying in woolen piece goods was confined today to the men's wear division. Scattered lots of popular staple gray goods sold at top price levels. Dress goods in the print rayon group continued in demand with prices tending upward. January sales of women's full fashioned silk hosiery were better than expected, but no upward price revision was in prospect for some time due to huge stocks on hand.

Zinc Leads Advance in Commodities

Straits Tin, Copper Also Rise Smartly On Short Supplies

By the Associated Press

A sharp rise in zinc led a general upward trend yesterday among major commodities for future delivery.

At New York the metal rose .25 to .65 of a cent a pound. Spot supplies of zinc are equal to less than one week's needs at the current rate of shipments and leaders in the industry have expressed concern over obtaining enough to meet national defense needs. Straits tin and copper also rose smartly.

Chicago wheat ended unchanged to ½ cent a bushel higher. Buying was credited to previous short sellers and milling interests. Corn was ⅛ down to ⅛ up.

Conflicting factors hit the New York Cotton Market and left the list 10 cents a bale lower to as much higher.

Sugar swung forward, along with cocoa, wool tops and cottonseed oil. Santos coffee, rubber, silk and hides countered the main trend.

The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale spot staples, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to the highest since late 1937 at 78.87. This compared with 78.85 Thursday.

"The principal danger that we face as a result of our greatly increased gold holdings is that gold is normally the regulator by which credit expansion is limited, and at present it cannot perform that function."—L. M. Whittington, Cleveland Trust Co.

"Putting the national defense program into effect is the first consideration of every American business man in 1941. Upon the foundations now being prepared by the men in charge of the project we are assured of an adequate defense on land and water and in the air."—Thomas J. Watson, president, International Business Machines Corporation.

"Engineers and research men of the electrical industry put electricity to work on more peacetime jobs in 1940 than ever before, while at the same time the industry undertook the largest national defense production program in its history."—George H. Bucher, president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

"The disruption of industrial life in Great Britain means greater dependence on us, not only for armaments but also for some necessities. Changes in the Johnson and Neutrality Acts are indicated for next year."—A. W. Zelomek, economist of Fairchild Publications.

"The United States ends 1940 in the midst of the greatest industrial boom this country has ever experienced. The expansion which began last spring carried the rate of manufacturing activity to the highest peak on record."—William T. Livingston, economist of Alexander Hamliton Institute.

"I believe 1941 will see investment trusts and companies again in increasing favor with the public. No one should expect startling results from managements. With large capital and many thousands of small stockholders, they must be careful and conservative in selection of portfolio securities."—Floyd B. Odlum, president, Atlas Corp.

"The apparel wool industry in the United States closed the year 1940 in what was probably the greatest activity in its history. The rapid increase in mill operations in the last half of the year followed subnormal activity in the second quarter."—Frank J. Knell, president, New York Wool Top Exchange.

Sharp Boost In Aluminum Output Seen

825,000,000-Pound Annual Production Forecast For 1942

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines forecast yesterday that aluminum production would reach a peak rate of 825,000,000 pounds annually by July, 1942, to meet defense requirements.

By July, 1941, it said annual production rate likely would be stepped up 690,000,000 pounds.

Defense officials have made confidential estimates that the total annual supply of aluminum would reach 756,000,000 on July 1 this year, compared with total demand of 708,000,000.

This estimate, however, includes possible imports of refined aluminum while the Mines Bureau estimate embraced only the domestic production from domestic and imported ores and scrap aluminum.

A total annual aluminum supply of 912,000,000 pounds has been forecast by the same defense sources for July, 1942, when they expect the demand to reach an annual level of 732,000,000. The defense officials' forecast of demand is based on the assumption that civilian consumption will remain at the 1940 level, and that the British and American military plane programs will not exceed those contemplated last October.

Authorities in close touch with the situation contend that, if additional fighting planes are ordered, the metal for them may be obtained by discouraging a normal expansion of civilian uses or by curtailing present "unessential" civilian consumption.

Officials said that at prospective rate of aluminum production the industry would need about 1,300,000 long tons of bauxite in 1942.

Last year, Arkansas, Alabama, Georgia and Virginia mines produced 433,000 long tons valued at $2,573,000, an increase of 17 percent in quantity and 19 percent in value compared with 1939.

Wallace Views Fruit Outlook 'Unpromising'

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department described the long-time outlook for fruit yesterday as "unpromising."

In an annual report signed by Henry A. Wallace, Vice President-elect and former Agriculture Secretary, the department said:

"Assuming no improvement in the export prospect, the long-time outlook for fruits is not bright. Producers will probably have continuing surpluses, the result of gradually expanding production. Rising domestic consumer purchasing power may offset the tendency to some extent. But the period just ahead seems to be unfavorable."

The report said it would necessitate "steady effort" to lower the costs of production and marketing, and pointed out considerable reductions were possible in the marketing cost of some fruits. It said lower-cost containers and motor-truck transportation might widen citrus distribution and increase the returns to producers.

Foreign Exchange

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Hongkong and Shanghai dollars and the Argentine peso rallied briskly in the foreign exchange market today after Thursday's setbacks.

The peso rebounded nearly 1-10 cent at 23.59 United States cents. Up around 1-20 cent each were the Shanghai dollar at 5.49 cents and the Hongkong unit at 23.75 cents. The Far Eastern moneys were unsettled by reports the Chinese stabilization fund was nearing the end of its resources.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for U. Cotton Futures

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Selling smothered early attempts to rise in the cotton futures market today. Final prices were 2 points lower to 2 higher.

Sales of around 10,000 bales in March and July were credited to a large southeastern mill interest. Wall Street and spot houses also sold March, which went to a discount of 4 points under May.

Former Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's report to Congress warning of possible inflation dangers attracted a flurry of demand but buying soon thinned out. Worth Street textile trade quieted after the late Thursday buying of broadcloths. Pull asking prices were paid for cotton goods.

Exports Thursday 4,589 bales; season so far 629,000. Port receipts 13,300. Port stocks 3,450,841.

Quotations pivoted with lard but there was a scarcity of spot crude oil offerings in the South and limited refiner hedging.

Sales totaled 129 lots: March 6.56*, May 6.64*, July 6.75*, September 6.80*. *Bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5¼ cents a pound in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾ in Texas.

London Stocks

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—Demand for industrial and railroad stocks broadened today and the entire securities list tended upward.

Buying of equities was interpreted as the desire of investors to obtain a higher yield than is possible in gilt-edged bonds. Turnover was still below normal, traders noted, but the pressure of money seeking an investment outlet intensified.

Motor, store, electrical equipment and cement stocks were among the favorites. Tobacco issues also improved after Tobacco Securities Trust maintained its dividend.

Boston Wool

Boston, Jan. 17 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The bulk of the business on wool in Boston today was on foreign types of the finer grades. South American wool was getting most of the demand, although fair quantities of Australian and South African wools were selling whenever spot offerings were available. Prices on foreign wools were steady to firm.

Much Steel Capacity Idle, Says Follansbee

Pittsburgh, Jan. 17 (AP).—John Follansbee, chairman of the Follansbee Steel Corporation, said today some steel capacity which could contribute to defense production is still inactive despite "widespread feeling that a steel shortage exists in connection with the defense program."

"If the case of our company is typical of the smaller producers," he commented in a year-end statement, "there are efficient steel plants whose facilities—including in some instances basic open h

Raids on British Fleet And Malta Inspire Optimism in Berlin

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Jan. 17.—The purpose of the Nazi attacks on Malta is not so much the destruction of fortifications as the damaging of British warships stationed there, a spokesman said today.

This would appear to confirm the belief that the units of the German air force sent to the Mediterranean are intended to checkmate the British fleet in those waters—which the Italian navy is apparently not capable of doing. A German military critic, writing in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, holds this view. He notes that the British fleet "had been showing increasing activity recently" in the Mediterranean and evaluates the recent German attacks as a "real test of Strength between the air force and the fleet."

Since the British attack on the Italian navy in Taranto, this writer states, British naval units in the Mediterranean "have been moving with greater freedom." He points out that the British fleet was able to support the Greeks effectively in Albania and the British in north Africa, where it shelled the Italians from coastal waters.

He estimates that the British Mediterranean fleet "at times was comprised of seven battleships, four aircraft carriers, 12 cruisers, a number of destroyers and U-boats." This force, he states, outnumbered the Italians "in heavy units."

The recent test of strength between the British fleet and the German air force, he states, "has shown gratifying results." "This sharp intervention," he concludes, "and that which is to follow, will have a hampering influence on the movements of the British fleet which will be to the best interests of the general situation in the Mediterranean."

In quarters close to the German high command, the Stuka attack on Valletta Harbor is evaluated as a "strategic event of high importance" since, it is pointed out, German bombers succeeded in successfully attacking the strongest British warharbor in Malta at a time and place of their own choosing.

Malta, it is assumed, is defended by probably the best antiaircraft weapons at Britain's disposal since it is the most exposed British base.

"An aircraft carrier can be lost," it is stated by these circles, "but when it is lost in Malta, it means that Malta can also be lost. The German air base is 200 kilometers away from Malta. Stukas can carry their bombs to Valletta in less than an hour. One may rest assured that the German general staff will see to it that the supply of bombs is unlimited. The defensive belt of antiaircraft artillery can be broken through—that has now been proven.

"The courage of Stukas is proverbial. With the appearance of this German weapon, the battle for the Mediterranean has entered a new phase, at the beginning of which stands, not Bardia, but the bombing of the Illustrious in Valletta harbor—and this phase will by no means end with the British surrender of Malta."

It is a recognized fact that the Germans have sent their crack bomber pilots, notably their best Stuka formations to the Mediterranean. Yesterday it is stated here, 100 of these dive-bombers participated in the Malta attack. The bomber formations were protected by both German and Italian pursuits which, however, found little opposition from the British air force, according to German reports.

Australia Backs U.S. in Pacific, Casey Asserts

Implies a Pledge Of Cooperation If War Breaks Out

By the Associated Press

Boston, Jan. 17.—An implied pledge of Australian cooperation in event of American involvement in war in the Pacific came tonight from Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States.

"No one can tell what turn this war will take as times goes on," Casey said in an address prepared for the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

"But I can assure you," he continued, "that Australia is ready and able to play its part in any extended field of operations if by evil chance this should come about.

"And I venture to believe that it is not a matter of indifference to you that there exists, diametrically across the Pacific from you, a large area peopled by a robust and friendly race with substantial forces of trained men and the means and ability to provide most of their own munitions and weapons. And, more important perhaps than material weapons, is the spirit with which we enter a struggle against the forces of evil."

Casey, who has participated in extended Anglo-American diplomatic conversations in Washington on defense problems in the Pacific, especially since Japan joined Germany and Italy in the tri-power alliance, compared the United States and British Empire in an earlier speech today with "two blades of a pair of scissors—they must work together to do the job."

In a luncheon address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Casey asserted the continued existence of the British Empire and the United States was so essential to each other as to constitute "a compelling case for cooperation, each in his own sphere."

Baering Down On the News

It seems to me that we are now in the talking stage of the lady I wrote about 20 years ago who had been vaccinated with a phonograph needle.

Poking your nose into other people's businesses is just a summer complaint compared with the crime of not keeping your own business to yourself.

Do you remember the old colored comedy team where the little fellow says, "You looks like a dangerous man," and the big fellow denies it?

The little fellow says, "Do you mean you don't carry a gun?" The big man admits it.

The little fellow asks, "You sure have a knife on you, ain't you?" And the big man says he hasn't.

Finally, the small one inquires, "Do you mean to say that you ain't got anything on you that will hurt a man?" And the big fellow says that is the exact peaceful position he is in.

"That's all I wanted to know," says the little man as he hauls off and wallops the big man on the whiskers.

Any of the information divulged by Mr. Stimson, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Hull, Mr. Lindbergh, Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Fish and the other voluble gentlemen may be all that Mr. Hitler and Mr. Mussolini want to know.

But it's too much to ask of an important man to throttle down. During our national apple week we put up enough sauce to last us the other 51.

Frills Dropped For Capacity On 3 Clippers

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Jan. 17.—The three giant flying boats of Pan American Airways transatlantic fleet, the Dixie, Yankee and Atlantic clippers, have been stripped of 1,700 pounds each of expensive furnishings which made them luxury liners of the air, so that starting today they will be able to carry greatly increased mail loads.

The European war has been increasing mail loads of the clippers constantly to a point where more than 13,000 pounds a trip was not unusual. It has been difficult during recent weeks for Pan American Airways to find space for passengers and carry the mail, too. For this reason the company decided to strip the clippers of every unnecessary frill, including even the coat of aluminum paint which made their huge boat-like hulls glisten, and install more powerful engines along with more efficient propellers and larger fuel tanks, to increase the carrying capacity of each by roughly 4,000 pounds.

Only 6 of the 30 berths which each transatlantic flying boat formerly had now remain for the comfort of passengers in the overnight hop between Europe and the United States. All passengers above that number will have to pass the time upright in one of the clippers' chairs.

Tonight there was a passenger list of 11 for today's flight to Europe of the Atlantic Clipper, which would leave five without berths. Officials of the line were unable to say whether Wendell L. Willkie, who is traveling to Lisbon next week, would be one of those having a berth on next Wednesday's flight.

The officials stressed that they had stripped down the aircraft only after an extensive survey had convinced them that most passengers now were mainly interested in reaching their destination safely and swiftly.

20 Officers' Duties Shifted, Navy Reveals

Rear Admiral Ingram, Former Coach, Will Command Cruisers

By the Associated Press

Changes of duty for 20 officers were announced tonight by the Navy, among them the assignment of Rear Admiral Jonas H. Ingram to command Cruiser Division 2.

Air Corps Hunts Missing Bomber In Wilderness

McChord Field, Wash., Jan. 17 (AP)—Air Corps and commercial pilots scanned wilderness areas of the storm-strewn Pacific Coast today for an Army bomber missing more than 24 hours with seven men aboard.

Operations officers said a report that the plane had been found wrecked near Yreka, Calif., could not be confirmed.

The bomber, with First Lieut. R. M. Krummes, pilot, and Second Lieut. C. T. Nielsen, copilot, in charge, left at 10:20 a. m. yesterday for the bombing range in Southern California.

Others aboard were Second Lieut. J. F. Geis, navigator; First Lieut. L. E. MacKay, Sergts. L. H. Neitling and P. L. Maas, and Technical Sergt. H. A. Davis, a passenger.

Tuskegee Student Slashed In Riot Over Cafeteria Food

By the Associated Press

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 17.—Disorders among striking Tuskegee Institute students resulted today in one youth being slashed with a knife and the arrest of 11 before law enforcement officers succeeded in restoring quiet on the campus of the big college for Negroes.

While a score of officers guarded the grounds and environs, Dr. F. D. Patterson, institute president, said a student was slashed as he disregarded strikers' threats and attempted to attend a class. Officers said the 11 were jailed after disobeying orders to disband and clear building entrances.

Patrol Chief T. Weller Smith estimated 800 of the 1,400 students were not in classes today. The strike began Wednesday in protest against food served in the college cafeteria, where 1,000 students eat. Dr. Patterson said the disorders had "very little basis," that the food was "palatable and wholesome."

The institute president said strikers blocked entrances to prevent nonstrikers from attending classes. He added that strikers made open threats against students trying to enter and said girl students as well as men were intimidated.

All of those arrested were released later without formal charges having been preferred against them. The injured student was not hurt seriously. Neither his name nor that of his assailant was revealed.

Dr. Patterson announced tonight 49 strike leaders had been suspended indefinitely and added that any allowed to return would be taken back "on an inividual, merit basis." Students were warned that those who congregated about buildings "will be taken care of by the police."

Secretary Named For School Board

Miss Vera Barrett has been appointed secretary of the Alexandria school board to succeed Miss Lynde Crocker, who was injured fatally in an automobile accident on New Year's Eve, it was announced yesterday by T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools. As secretary to the board, Miss Barrett also will serve as full-time secretary to the superintendent.

The new secretary, a graduate of the George Washington High School, attended the Washington School for Secretaries. Before her appointment as school board secretary, she was employed at American University.

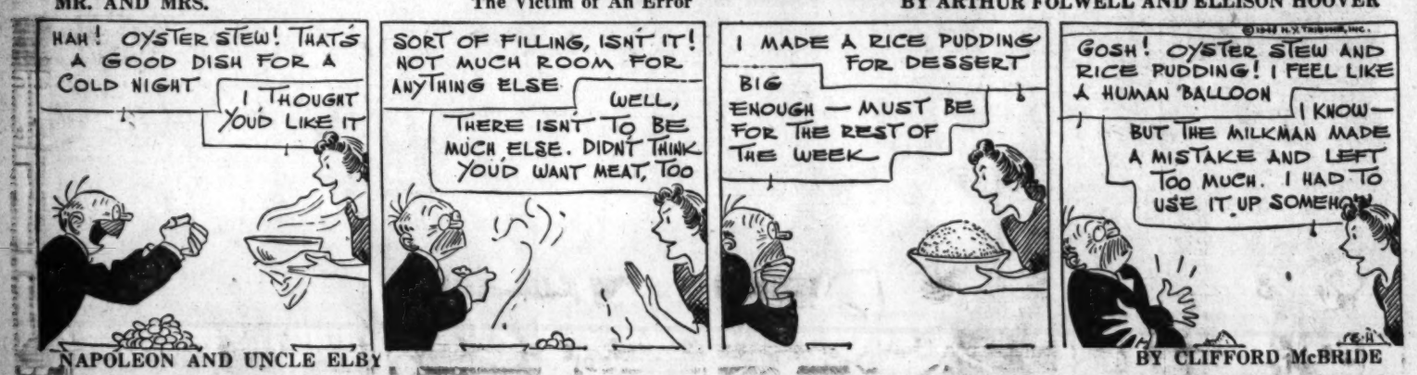
MR. AND MRS. — The Victim of An Error — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER



HAH! OYSTER STEW! THAT'S A GOOD DISH FOR A COLD NIGHT
I THOUGHT YOU'D LIKE IT
SORT OF FILLING, ISN'T IT! NOT MUCH ROOM FOR ANYTHING ELSE
WELL, THERE ISN'T TO BE MUCH ELSE. DIDN'T THINK YOU'D WANT MEAT, TOO
I MADE A RICE PUDDING FOR DESSERT
BIG ENOUGH — MUST BE FOR THE REST OF THE WEEK
GOSH! OYSTER STEW AND RICE PUDDING! I FEEL LIKE A HUMAN BALLOON
I KNOW— BUT THE MILKMAN MADE A MISTAKE AND LEFT TOO MUCH. I HAD TO USE IT UP SOMEHOW

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

FUNNY HOW YOUR WORRIES CAN KEEP YOU AWAKE SOME NIGHTS. I'LL BET I DIDN'T SLEEP THIRTY MINUTES. GUESS I'LL JUST LISTEN TO A LITTLE CHEERY MUSIC BEFORE I HAVE MY COFFEE.
FRIENDS, WE NOW BRING TO YOU THE FORTIETH INSTALLMENT OF THE HORRORS OF HELEN. WE FIND HELEN SEATED ON A SNOW COVERED PARK BENCH, DESERTED BY HER HUSBAND WHO HAS ESCAPED FROM THE ASYLUM BY ELOPING WITH HIS NURSE. HELEN IS SLOWLY SUCCUMBING TO MALNUTRITION AND COLD AS THE ICY BLAST DRIVES THROUGH HER ERMINE WRAP. WHO HAS THE PAPERS AND WHO HAS THE CHILD ---

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

Listen! with Glynn

The contrast between life at the White House in Lincoln's day and today is to be shown to you dramatically this evening in "Report to the Nation," which you'll hear over WJSV and the Columbia network at 6.

It's a specially created little job, whipped up in commemoration of the fact that Monday is the occasion of Mr. Roosevelt's third Inauguration. Brewster Morgan, who directs the show, thought it would be interesting to show the changes that have occurred by giving you a typical day at the White House as it was more than 75 years ago in Lincoln's time and then bringing you up to date by showing you what a typical day is like right now.

Raymond Massey, the acting gentleman who's as closely identified with Lincoln as anyone can be, thanks to his practically perennial portrayal of him on stage and screen these past few years, has come down from New York again to play the Lincoln role in the WJSV studios.

Washington actors will portray famous White House figures of the past and present. Prominent among those so represented will be Steve Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, and Miss Marguerite "Missy" LeHand, the President's private secretary.

Albert Warner and John Charles Daly, two of C. B. S.'s prominent Washington correspondents, are to serve as narrators on the program.

Contract Bridge

We couldn't think of a better present to give bridge players than the suit-preference signal. The hand shown in today's box is one we ran across in a duplicate tournament a few days ago, which impressed us with the importance of every player's knowing and being able to use the signal when the rare occasion for it arises.

West decided, since his side was vulnerable, to take out his partner's penalty double of three spades and try instead for a game at hearts. As the defense developed his decision proved wise, for he made four hearts, winning a plus score of 620 points. The spade contract would have been setthree tricks for a score of 500 points to his side. With the suit preference signal however, the four-heart could have surely been defeated; as it was, South was put to a guess, and, unfortunately for his side, he guessed wrong.

Massingale Dies of Heart Attack at 70

Oklahoman Was Member of Liberal Bloc in the House

Representative Sam Massingale (Democrat), of Cordell, Okla., died of a heart attack in a siege of grippe at his apartment in the George Washington Inn yesterday. He was 70 years old.

MASSINGALE

Mr. Massingale had been ill since Wednesday, but his illness, according to Dr. George Calver, Capitol physician who had been attending the Congressman, had not been thought critical.

Dr. Calver was called to the apartment shortly after noon yesterday, but Congressman Massingale had died before the doctor arrived. His wife, Mrs. Anna C. Massingale; youngest daughter, Miss Jane Massingale, and secretary, Mansur Stewart, were with him at the end.

Dr. Calver attributed death to a heart attack "precipitated" by the grippe.

Was a Liberal

Representative Massingale had been a member of the House since 1935, and in his years on the Hill had usually lined up with the Liberal Democrats in Congress.

He was a member of the House Judiciary Committee and a sponsor of legislation, as yet unpassed, intended to guarantee farmers a return of the cost of production for their goods plus a reasonable profit.

A native of Quitman, Miss., Mr. Massingale was graduated from the University of Mississippi and later went to Fort Worth, Tex., to study law. He served as a private in the Second Texas Infantry during the Spanish-American War.

Elected in November, 1934

He moved from Fort Worth to Cordell in 1900 and opened a law office, where he continued his practice until his first election to the House, November 6, 1934.

He was a member of the Oklahoma Territorial Council in 1902, five years before the Territory was admitted to Statehood.

Besides his wife and daughter, Jane, Representative Massingale's survivors are two other daughters, Mrs. Margaret Hippen, of Altus, Okla., and Mrs. Betty Lou Nelson, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Sally Weir, of Quitman, Miss.

The body, now at Lee's funeral home, Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, will be sent to Cordell for funeral services and burial.

Funeral Rites For Col. W. G. Wall Set for Today

Col. William Guy Wall, 65, consulting engineer, of Indianapolis, and Wallene-Boyd, Md., died in Indianapolis January 16. He was a past president of the American Automobile Engineers and a secretary of the American Legion Endowment Fund Corporation.

He served as a lieutenant colonel in the World War. Subsequently he was made a colonel in the Army Reserve Corps.

He leaves a wife, two sisters, Mrs. Jacqueline Taylor, of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Stanley D. Embrick, wife of Gen. Stanley D. Embrick, of Washington, D. C., and two brothers, Stanley and Earl Wall, of North Carolina.

Funeral services will be held this morning at Wallene-Boyd, Md., with interment at Bealville (Md.) Cemetery.

John W. Sheffer, Former Revenue Employe, Dies

John William Sheffer, organizer of the Internal Revenue Association and well known here in official and legal circles, died Wednesday at Baltimore, his residence.

For many years Mr. Sheffer was secretary and chief clerk of the internal revenue collector at Baltimore. In 1910 he organized the Internal Revenue Association, composed of internal revenue officials and employes, with the aim of placing all internal revenue workers under the civil service.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Ellen Sheffer; a son, J. William Sheffer, jr.; two daughters, Miss Jessie E. Sheffer and Mrs. Joseph A. McLaughlin; a brother, A. Harry Sheffer, and three grandsons.

Funeral Today For Col. Engleman

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. Irving H. Engleman, 44, retired Army officer and World War veteran, who died last Saturday at his home in Missoula, Mont., will be at 10 a. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel. He will be buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will include Col. B. F. Giles, Col. B. M. Giles, Col. E. F. Olsen, Col. W. L. Ritter, Col. Douglas C. Cordiner and Maj. Frederick W. Drury.

A native of New Jersey, Col. Engleman, entered the Army as second lieutenant of Infantry in November, 1916, and later served with the Quartermaster Corps. He was retired March 31, 1938. Recently he had been on active R. O. T. C. duty in Missoula.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Marjorie Engleman, and a daughter, Mrs. Thomas L. Sherburne, both of Missoula.

Mrs. Edith Kauffman Dies in New London

Friends here learned yesterday of the death of Mrs. Edith McKelden Kauffman, formerly of Washington, on January 11 in New London, Conn. Funeral services were held at New London last Monday.

Mrs. Kauffman, wife of George Young Kauffman, was the daughter of Alice and William B. McKelden, of this city. She was educated in local schools, moving to New York at the time of her marriage.

Elector Voted 11 Times For Roosevelt—and It's Legal!

William Rubin, Here For the Inaugural, Tells How It Happened

WILLIAM RUBIN

The figure, peculiarly American, with more dignity than duties, whose reason for being and haziness of status have baffled millions of school children—the Presidential elector—is arriving here en masse to see the completion of the job Monday.

There is actually nothing mysterious about an elector on close approach, not even the champion elector who might take on some enhanced distance in the public eye because he has voted 11 times for Roosevelt for President.

The fact leaves him acting like any other man, looking forward to seeing the inauguration and admiring his view from a downtown hotel window. He is William B. Rubin, of Milwaukee, Wis., and when he talks of voting 11 times for a President who ran three times it is with the unexcited words that come to all electors who, long in the business, find such details growing commonplace. Here is an accounting of this electoral functioning:

One vote in the State Democratic primary; one vote in the National Democratic Convention; one vote as a citizen at the polls, one vote as a member of the Electoral College. He was a member of the college three times. But once he was a candidate for public office and so did not participate in the State primary, giving him 11 votes.

This champion member isn't ready to do and die for the college as in the Old Siwash tradition. Reminded of the occasional agitation to abolish the thing as a fifth wheel, Rubin said "it's immaterial to me."

C. J. Brennan Is Buried In Arlington

Commerce Bureau Official Had Served In World War

Funeral rites for Charles J. Brennan, 40, official of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, who died Wednesday, were held at 9 a. m. yesterday in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial was in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Brennan came to this city from New York approximately seven years ago to manage the Metropolitan Theater. Ill health forced his retirement from this position, however. He later joined the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in which he was assistant chief at the time of his death.

A native of New York, he had been connected with the theater business for 12 years, prior to coming here, and also had been associated with the advertising department of the New York Times.

In the World War Mr. Brennan served with the 104th Field Artillery and fought in the Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel offensives. He was commander of Maj. Gen. Edwards Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He made his home at 4423 Fessenden Street Northwest.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Roller Brennan, and a daughter, Miss Eileen Brennan, both of Washington, and his father, Charles J. Brennan; a brother, Frank X. Brennan, and a sister, Mrs. Joseph Gallagher, all of New York.

First Baptists to Hear Yale Divinity Dean

Making his first local appearance since being named new president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean of Yale Divinity School, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest.

He will be among the guests at the Presidential Electors' dinner that night. He is one of the members of the National Christian Mission team coming here on February 2.

Negroes Protest Inaugural Fete As 'Jim Crow'

Smith, Colored Lawyer, Chairman of Musicale, Denies the Charge

The United States Government Employes, Inc., and the National Negro Council last night commended the Inaugural Committee and Joseph E. Davies, chairman, for their recognition "of all District citizens regardless of race, creed and color."

A resolution to this effect was adopted unanimously at a mass meeting in Garnet Patterson Junior High School. The meeting followed protests filed with the Inaugural Committee yesterday by the National Negro Congress, which branded a musicale planned for Monday night in the department auditorium as a "Jim Crow" affair.

Last night the council in a statement declared that the inauguration ceremonies for President Roosevelt "have been exemplary in their true interpretation of the liberal and inspiring democracy and humanity of the Nation's greatest Chief Executive whose Administration has been a beacon light of hope and security for all American citizens."

Brown said the council has received several dozen invitations and seats for the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol and also for the Inaugural parade.

The National Negro Congress protests were heard yesterday afternoon by Alfons B. Landa, executive assistant to Davies.

Doxey A. Wilkerson, chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Negro Congress, said announcement of the affair, which was arranged by Emory B. Smith, "has aroused widespread indignation among Negro citizens." Smith, colored attorney, is chairman of the special entertainment committee. He denied it was a "Jim Crow" musicale, pointing to the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt and members of her family promised to attend.

Smith condemned the group's criticism of plans for the musicale and urged them to lend their support to the entire Inaugural program.

The group planned another meeting today at 4 p. m.

Smith told the group that members of the colored race have been invited to participate in every event on the program.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Mrs. Henry Parrett, soprano (Quinta Jensen Frey, accompanist), and Fanny Ross Henbest, pianist, in Barker Hall.

Members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club enjoyed yesterday a program almost entirely free from over-performed compositions, thanks to the initiative of Mrs. Henry Parrett and Mrs. Fanny Ross Henbest, who shared the recital. Mrs. Parrett, who uses her lyric soprano voice with a surety that speaks of experience, sang for the first time anywhere Olive Brown Song," thereby making Barker Hall the locale of another premiere. In its attractive vocal lines and harmonic texture, the song was worthy of the artist's choice.

BROWN

The singer also sought afield for the quiet beauty of Widor's "Je ne veux pas autre chose," the richly harmonized "Flieder" by Max Reger, who in this instance stood beside Richard Strauss as a lieder writer; Sibelius' "Flicken kom ifran sin alskings moete," and Hans Hermann's "Beim Tanz." Her other selections were Fourdrain's "Chanson Norvegienne" and two of John Alden Carpenter's songs: "The Sleep That Flits on Baby's Eyes" and "The Odalisque." She had the able assistance at the piano of Quinta Jensen Frey, who was particularly co-operative in the Reger song.

Mrs. Henbest brought forward Mozart's noblest work for piano solo, the fantasia in C minor, which is too seldom heard, and her reading disclosed its dignity and imaginative scope. Teaching was a drudgery to Mozart, as to most composers, but when he found pupils of promise he spared no pains and even wrote music for them. Such a pupil was Frau von Trattern to whom he dedicated the fantasia and thus preserved her name in amber. The companion piece in Mrs. Henbest's group was the B minor rhapsody of Brahms, played with a poetic fervor.

Washington Concert Association presents Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti, duo-pianists, in Wardman Park Theater Friday night. Program: Braggiotti transcriptions of music by Bach, Wagner, Musorgski, Lecuona, Debussy, Ravel and Gershwin, and "Five Caricatures on the Theme of Yankee Doodle" (Braggiotti).

Announcing a policy of no profits save esthetic ones for its subscribing members, the Washington Concert Association opened its season last evening in Wardman Park Theater with the presentation of the popular piano team, Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotti. Attendance promised well for the progress of the new organization, and the spirit of the audience was enthusiastic. If applause could have won repetition of as many numbers as it demanded, the program would have been doubled in length.

For those curious to hear more of the large literature of two-piano music, the program was disappointing, for with one exception it consisted of arrangements of compositions familiar to the point of saturation. In succession were heard Bach's organ fantasia and fugue in G minor, "Isoldes Liebestod," the coronation scene from "Boris Godunov," Lecuona's malaguena, Debussy's "La Cathedrale Engloutie" and "L'Isle Joyeuse," Ravel's "Pavana pour une Infante defunte" and "Bolero," a medley of two Viennese waltzes by Slezynski and Heymann, and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Mr. Braggiotti's transcriptions are well made and effective, although most of them either essay the thankless task of translating other instrumental colors into piano timbres or needlessly expand piano pieces into double sonority. The most interesting piece on the program, because it was both novel and amusing, was his clever treatment of "Yankee Doodle" in the styles of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy and Gershwin. These were true caricatures, emphasizing the salient points of individual idioms by the device of exaggeration.

The collaborating pianists are so well known on the radio waves that one need not expand upon their technical proficiency. Their synchrony is excellent, and their practice has made the touch of one indistinguishable from that of the other. One would like to hear them sometime in a recital of authentic two-piano music.

Roosevelt Gets Birthday Ball Ticket No. 1

Falla Remembered, Too Melvyn Douglas, Wife Due by Plane Today

The President yesterday received ticket No. 1 to his own birthday ball celebration January 30. He also received the District's No. 1 tag for his Scotty pup Falla.

Commissioner John Russell Young and former Commissioner George E. Allen, cochairman of the birthday committee for the Capital, made the presentations at the White House.

Meanwhile, more Hollywood stars coming for the President's two celebrations—his inauguration and birthday—are due at 10 a. m. today at the Washington Airport. They are Melvyn Douglas and his wife, Helen Gahagan, both New Deal supporters who will be guests of Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes at Headwaters Farm, Olney, Md.

Edward G. Robinson already has arrived for the Inaugural ceremonies and will remain over for the Birthday Ball. His "Big Town" broadcast will originate in Washington on January 29. The script will be devoted to a "March of Dimes" story for the 1941 infantile paralysis campaign.

District and Federal employes will be permitted to purchase their $2.50 tickets to the dances on limited credit, according to the committee. They will be permitted to pay for the tickets after the ball is over.

Women Voters' League Supports Lease-Lend Bill

"As a substitute for war," the National Board of the League of Women Voters yesterday announced active support of the "lease-lend" bill to aid the democracies, now under consideration by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The League's stand is based on a program item adopted nearly a year ago: "A foreign policy as a nonbelligerent which permits discrimination against an aggressor and favors the victims of aggression."

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, National League president, clarified the League's position on "the bold experiment to bring pressure in war situations without recourse to war" in a letter to State presidents:

"The Act to Promote the Defense of the United States is of such far-reaching implications that it cannot be operated without sacrifice, public and private, present and future, comparable to the sacrifices demanded by war itself. Yet it is not an act providing for war. On the contrary it is a substitute for war. Such a substitute the League of Women Voters has long sought. It comes in a way we had never envisaged."

Egan and Utility Firm He Heads Are Indicted

St. Louis, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Union Electric Co., of Missouri, and Louis H. Egan, its president from 1920 to 1939, were indicted today on a charge of conspiracy to violate the United States Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.

The indictment alleged that financial contributions, which are prohibited by the act, were made "to and in support of political parties" and "in connection with candidacies, nominations, elections and appointments" to political office.

The political activities were declared to have extended from the Government of the United States to "the governments of the States of Missouri and Illinois, and political subdivisions, agencies, authorities and instrumentalities of said States."

Frank J. Boehm and Albert C. Laun, former vice presidents of the $250,000,000 utility system, named as coconspirators but not as defendants, have been convicted on perjury charges previously.

Requiem Mass For Mrs. Powers To Be Sung Today

Mrs. John T. Powers, of Petersburg, Va., died at midnight Thursday in her home there after an illness of about a month.

She is survived by four sons: William J. Powers, 3323 Sixteenth Street Northwest, a musician at the Shoreham Hotel; John H. Powers, 5456 Nebraska Avenue Northwest, a musician at the Earle Theater, and James T. Powers and Lawrence A. Powers, of Petersburg.

There will be a requiem high at 10 a. m. followed by burial in Petersburg.

Villard Collapses While Lecturing In Detroit Theater

Detroit, Jan. 17 (AP).—Oswald Garrison Villard, 68-year-old editor and writer, collapsed today in the midst of a lecture on the stage of a downtown theater.

Villard was treated backstage by a physician and taken to his hotel. He was talking on "Behind the Scenes in War" when he fainted and fell flat on his face. The curtain was immediately lowered.

A physician who examined Villard said he believed there would be no serious consequences.

West Chester, Pa., Jan. 17 (AP).—Rear Admiral William Clarence Braisted, 77, U. S. Navy, retired, died at his home here tonight after an illness of three weeks.

A Native of Toledo, Ohio, Admiral Braisted was Surgeon General of the Navy during the World War. He was a former president of the American Medical Association.

Smithsonian Gets Bequest, Of $400,000

Fund Left by Widow Of Dr. C. D. Walcott, Former Director

A $400,000 bequest to the Smithsonian Institution by the late Mary Vaux Walcott, widow of a former head of the institution, was divulged yesterday at the annual meeting of the board of regents.

Mrs. Walcott, who died last August, was the widow of Dr. Charles D. Walcott. Her active interest in the work of the Smithsonian continued up to the time of her death.

With Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes presiding in his capacity as chancellor of the Smithsonian Institution, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary, reported noteworthy progress in scientific studies during 1940.

He said 212,474 items were added to the National Museum collections, ranging from the cast of a Siberian Neanderthal child to a 347-gram aquamarine crystal. He told the regents the new National Gallery of Art, to be administered as a Smithsonian unit, will be opened in March.

Appointment of Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, to the Board of Regents was announced. He takes the place formerly held by Dr. John C. Merriam, his predecessor at the Carnegie Institution.

At the conclusion of their meeting, the regents inspected the special scientific exhibit in the Smithsonian Building which will be opened to the public on Monday.

Mrs. Luckett To Be Buried In Mount Olivet

Mrs. Annabelle Morgan Luckett, 59, life-long resident of Washington, died yesterday at her residence, 1419 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Luckett was the widow of Dr. L. Fleet Luckett, a practicing physician in Washington who died a year ago. Born in the 1300 block of Vermont Avenue, she attended Washington schools, including the Martha Washington Seminary. She was later a member of the Washington Club, a social group.

Mrs. Luckett leaves a sister, Mrs. James W. Flack, of Baltimore, and two sons, Dr. William F. Luckett and Horace P. Luckett, of Washington.

Funeral services will be at 11:30 a. m. today in Hysong's funeral chapel, 1300 N Street Northwest. The Rev. Calvin Wingert, pastor of Grace Reformed Church will officiate. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.
